Yet this House, if voice it take should, 37 Most plain would speak. So, willing I myself speak 38 To those who know: to who know not — I’m blankness. 40 The tenth year this, since Priamos’ great match, 41 King Menelaos, Agamemnon King, 42 — The strenuous yoke-pair of the Atreidai’s honour 43 Two-throned, two-sceptred, whereof Zeus was donor — 44 Did from this land the aid, the armament despatch, 45 The thousand-sailored force of Argives clamouring 46 Aresfrom out the indignant breast, as fling 47 Passion forth vultures which, because of grief 48 Away, — as are their young ones, — with the thief, 49 Lofty above their brood-nests wheel in ring, 50 Row round and round with oar of either wing, 51 Lament the bedded chicks, lost labour that was love: 52 Which hearing, one above 53 — Whether Apollon, Pan or Zeus — that wail, 54 Sharp-piercing bird-shriek of the guests who fare 55 Housemates with gods in air — 56 Suchanone sends, against who these assail, 57 What, late-sent, shall not fail 58 Of punishing — Erinus. Here as there, 59 The Guardian of the Guest, Zeus, the excelling one, 60 Sends against Alexandros either son 61 Of Atreus: for that wife, the many-husbanded, 62 Appointing many a tug that tries the limb, 63 While the knee plays the prop in dust, while, shred 64 To morsels, lies the spear-shaft; in those grim 65 Marriage-prolusions when their Fury wed 66 Danaoi and |

All’s said: 67 Things are where things are, and, as fate has willed, 68 So shall they be fulfilled. 69 Not gently-grieving, not just doling out 70 The drops of expiation — no, nor tears distilled — 71 Shall he we know of bring the hard about 71a To soft — that intense ire 71b At those mock rites unsanctified by fire. 72 But we pay nought here: through our flesh, age-weighed, 73 Left out from who gave aid 74 In that day, — we remain, 74a Staying on staves a strength 75 The equal of a child’s at length. 76 For when young marrow in the breast doth reign, 77 That’s the old man’s match, — Ares out of place 78 In either: but in oldest age’s case, 79 Foliage a-fading, why, he wends his way 80 On three feet, and, no stronger than a child, 81 Wanders about gone wild, 82 A dream in day. 83 But thou, Tundareus’ daughter, Klutaimnestra queen, 84 What need? What new? What having heard or seen, 85 By what announcement’s tidings, everywhere 86 Settest thou, round about, the sacrifice a-flare? 87 For, of all gods the city-swaying, 88 Those supernal, those infernal, |

| | | completed by this Ah me of the king’s; 1347 But we somehow may together share in solid counsellings. 1348 I, in the first place, my opinion tell you: 1349 — To cite the townsmen, by help-cry, to house here. 1350 To me, it seems we ought to fall upon them 1351 At quickest — prove the fact by sword fresh-flowing! 1352 And I, of such opinion the partaker, 1353 Vote — to do something: not to wait — the main point! 1354 ’T is plain to see: for they prelude as though of 1355 A tyranny the signs they gave the city. 1356 For we waste time; while they, — this waiting’s glory 1357 Treading to ground, — allow the hand no slumber. 1358 I know not — chancing on some plan — to tell it: 1359 ’T is for the doer to plan of the deed also. 1360 And I am such another: since I’m schemeless 1361 How to raise up again by words — a dead man! 1362 What, and, protracting life, shall we give way thus 1363 To the disgracers of our home, these rulers? 1364 Why, ’t is unbearable: but to die is better: 1365 For death than tyranny is the riper finish! 1366 What, by the testifying Ah me of him, 1367 Shall we prognosticate the man as perished? 1368 We must quite know ere speak these things concerning: 1369 For to conjecture and quite know are two things. 1370 This same to praise I from all sides abound in — 1371 Clearly to know — Atreides, what he’s doing! 1372 Much having been before to purpose spoken, 1373 The opposite to say I shall not shamed be: 1374 For how should one, to enemies, — in semblance, 1375 Friends, — enmity proposing, — sorrow’s net-frame 1376 Enclose, a height superior to outleaping? 1377 To me, indeed, this struggle of old — not mindless 1378 Of an old victory — came: with time, I grant you! 1379 I stand where I have struck, things once accomplished: 1380 And so have done, — and this deny I shall not, — 1381 As that his fate was nor to fly nor ward off. 1382 A wrap-round with no outlet, as for fishes, 1383 I fence about him — the rich woe of the garment: 1384 I strike him twice, and in a double Ah-me! 1385 He let his limbs go — there!
