Horacio · Odas (Carmina)

Texto en latín y traducción inglesa alineados por pasaje; cada sección de la traducción figura una sola vez, junto al primer pasaje que abarca.

Fuente: Perseus Digital Library (Tufts University), urn:cts:latinLit:phi0893.phi001. Texto crítico y traducción tomados sin cambios de los archivos TEI del repositorio.

Licencia CC BY-SA 4.0 (se comparte con la misma licencia). Edición de lectura generada por Vitruvius Digital Library (Diego Kurilo), 2026. Lectura en línea: https://diegoalonsok-png.github.io/vitruvius-digital-library/lector-clasico.html?obra=phi0893.phi001

Locus	Latín	Traducción inglesa
1.1	1 Maecenas atavis edite regibus, 2 o et praesidium et dulce decus meum: 3 sunt quos curriculo pulverem Olympicum 4 collegisse iuvat metaque fervidis 5 evitata rotis palmaque nobilis 6 terrarum dominos evehit ad deos; 7 hunc, si mobilium turba Quiritium 8 certat tergeminis tollere honoribus, 9 illum, si proprio condidit horreo 10 quidquid de Libycis verritur areis. 11 gaudentem patrios findere sarculo 12 agros Attalicis condicionibus 13 numquam demoveas, ut trabe Cypria 14 Myrtoum pavidus nauta secet mare. 15 luctantem Icariis fluctibus Africum 16 mercator metuens otium et oppidi 17 laudat rura sui; mox reficit rates 18 quassas indocilis pauperiem pati. 19 est qui nec veteris pocula Massici 20 nec partem solido demere de die 21 spernit, nunc viridi membra sub arbuto 22 stratus, nunc ad aquae lene caput sacrae. 23 multos castra iuvant et lituo tubae 24 permixtus sonitus bellaque matribus 25 detestata. manet sub Iove frigido 26 venator tenerae coniugis inmemor, 27 seu visa est catulis cerva fidelibus 28 seu rupit teretes Marsus aper plagas. 29 me doctarum hederae praemia frontium 30 dis miscent superis, me gelidum nemus 31 Nympharumque leves cum Satyris chori 32 secernunt populo, si neque tibias 33 Euterpe cohibet nec Polyhymnia 34 Lesboum refugit tendere barbiton. 35 quodsi me lyricis vatibus inseres, 36 sublimi feriam sidera vertice.	1 Maecenas, born of monarch ancestors, 2 The shield at once and glory of my life! 3 There are who joy them in the Olympic strife 4 And love the dust they gather in the course; 5 The goal by hot wheels shunn'd, the famous prize, 6 Exalt them to the gods that rule mankind; 7 This joys, if rabbles fickle as the wind 8 Through triple grade of honours bid him rise, 9 That, if his granary has stored away 10 Of Libya's thousand floors the yield entire; 11 The man who digs his field as did his sire, 12 With honest pride, no Attalus may sway 13 By proffer'd wealth to tempt Myrtoan seas, 14 The timorous captain of a Cyprian bark. 15 The winds that make Icarian billows dark 16 The merchant fears, and hugs the rural ease 17 Of his own village home; but soon, ashamed 18 Of penury, he refits his batter'd craft. 19 There is, who thinks no scorn of Massic draught, 20 Who robs the daylight of an hour unblamed, 21 Now stretch'd beneath the arbute on the sward, 22 Now by some gentle river's sacred spring; 23 Some love the camp, the clarion's joyous ring, 24 And battle, by the mother's soul abhorr'd. 25 See, patient waiting in the clear keen air, 26 The hunter, thoughtless of his delicate bride, 27 Whether the trusty hounds a stag have eyed, 28 Or the fierce Marsian boar has burst the snare. 29 To me the artist's meed, the ivy wreath 30 Is very heaven: me the sweet cool of woods, 31 Where Satyrs frolic with the Nymphs, secludes 32 From rabble rout, so but Euterpe's breath 33 Fail not the flute, nor Polyhymnia fly 34 Averse from stringing new the Lesbian lyre. 35 O, write my name among that minstrel choir, 36 And my proud head shall strike upon the sky!

1.2.1	1 Iam satis terris nivis atque dirae 2 grandinis misit pater et rubente 3 dextera sacras iaculatus arcis 4 terruit urbem, 5 terruit gentis, grave ne rediret 6 saeculum Pyrrhae nova monstra questae, 7 omne cum Proteus pecus egit altos 8 visere montis, 9 piscium et summa genus haesit ulmo, 10 nota quae sedes fuerat columbis, 11 et superiecto pavidae natarunt 12 aequore dammae. 13 vidimus flavum Tiberim retortis 14 litore Etrusco violenter undis 15 ire deiectum monumenta regis 16 templaque Vestae, 17 Iliae dum se nimium querenti 18 iactat ultorem, vagus et sinistra 19 labitur ripa Iove non probante u- 20 xorius amnis. 21 audiet civis acuisse ferrum, 22 quo graves Persae melius perirent, 23 audiet pugnas vitio parentum 24 rara iuventus. 25 quem vocet divum populus ruentis 26 imperi rebus? prece qua fatigent 27 virgines sanctae minus audientem 28 carmina Vestam? 29 cui dabit partis scelus expiandi 30 Iuppiter? tandem venias precamur	1 Enough of snow and hail at last 2 The sire has sent in vengeance down: 3 His bolts, at his own temple cast, 4 Appall'd the town, 5 Appall'd the lands, lest Pyrrha's time 6 Return, with all its monstrous sights, 7 When Proteus led his flocks to climb 8 The flatten'd heights, 9 When fish were in the elm-tops caught, 10 Where once the stock-dove wont to bide, 11 And does were floating, all distraught, 12 Adown the tide. 13 Old Tiber, hurl'd in tumult back 14 From mingling with the Etruscan main, 15 Has threaten'd Numa's court with wrack 16 And Vesta's fane. 17 Roused by his Ilia's plaintive woes, 18 He vows revenge for guiltless blood, 19 And, spite of Jove, his banks o'erflows, 20 Uxorious flood. 21 Yes, Fame shall tell of civic steel 22 That better Persian lives had spilt, 23 To youths, whose minish'd numbers feel 24 Their parents' guilt. 25 What god shall Rome invoke to stay 26 Her fall? Can suppliance overbear 27 The ear of Vesta, turn'd away 28 From chant and prayer? 29 Who comes, commission'd to atone 30 For crime like ours? at length appear,
1.2.31	31 nube candentis umeros amictus 32 augur Apollo; 33 sive tu mavis, Erycina ridens, 34 quam Iocus circum volat et Cupido; 35 sive neglectum genus et nepotes 36 respicis, auctor 37 heu nimis longo satiate ludo, 38 quem iuvat clamor galeaeque leves 39 acer et Marsi peditis cruentum 40 voltus in hostem; 41 sive mutata iuvenem figura 42 ales in terris imitaris almae 43 filius Maiae, patiens vocari 44 Caesaris ultor: 45 serus in caelum redeas diuque 46 laetus intersis populo Quirini 47 neve te nostris vitiis iniquum 48 ocior aura 49 tollat; hic magnos potius triumphos, 50 hic ames dici pater atque princeps 51 neu sinas Medos equitare inultos 52 te duce, Caesar.	31 A cloud round thy bright shoulders thrown, 32 Apollo seer! 33 Or Venus, laughter-loving dame, 34 Round whom gay Loves and Pleasures fly; 35 Or thou, if slighted sons may claim 36 A parent's eye, 37 O weary with thy long, long game, 38 Who lov'st fierce shouts and helmets bright, 39 And Moorish warrior's glance of flame 40 Or e'er he smite! 41 Or Maia's son, if now awhile 42 In youthful guise we see thee here, 43 Caesar's avenger—such the style 44 Thou deign'st to bear; 45 Late be thy journey home, and long 46 Thy sojourn with Rome's family; 47 Nor let thy wrath at our great wrong 48 Lend wings to fly. 49 Here take our homage, Chief and Sire; 50 Here wreathe with bay thy conquering brow, 51 And bid the prancing Mede retire, 52 Our Caesar thou!
1.3	1 Sic te diva potens Cypri, 2 sic fratres Helenae, lucida sidera, 3 ventorumque regat pater 4 obstrictis aliis praeter Iapyga,	1 Thus may Cyprus' heavenly queen, 2 Thus Helen's brethren, stars of brightest sheen, 3 Guide thee! May the sire of wind 4 Each truant gale, save

	5 navis, quae tibi creditum 6 debes Vergilium; finibus Atticis 7 reddas incolumem precor 8 et serves animae dimidium meae. 9 illi robur et aes triplex 10 circa pectus erat, qui fragilem truci 11 conmisit pelago ratem 12 primus: nec timuit praecipitem Africum 13 decertantem Aquilonibus 14 nec tristis Hyadas nec rabiem Noti, 15 quo non arbiter Hadriae 16 maior, tollere seu ponere volt freta; 17 quem mortis timuit gradum 18 qui siccis oculis monstra natantia, 19 qui vidit mare turbidum et 20 infamis scopulos Acroceraunia? 21 nequiquam deus abscidit 22 prudens oceano dissociabili 23 terras, si tamen inpiae 24 non tangenda rates transiliunt vada. 25 audax omnia perpeti 26 gens humana ruit per vetitum nefas: 27 audax Iapeti genus 28 ignem fraude mala gentibus intulit; 29 post ignem aetheria domo 30 subductum macies et nova febrium 31 terris incubuit cohors 32 semotique prius tarda necessitas 33 Leti corripuit gradum; 34 expertus vacuum Daedalus aera 35 pennis non homini datis; 36 perrupit Acheronta Herculeus labor. 37 nil mortalibus ardui est: 38 caelum ipsum petimus stultitia neque 39 per nostrum patimur scelus 40 iracunda Iovem ponere fulmina.	only Zephyr, bind! 5 So do thou, fair ship, that ow'st 6 Virgil, thy precious freight, to Attic coast, 7 Safe restore thy loan and whole, 8 And save from death the partner of my soul! 9 Oak and brass of triple fold 10 Encompass'd sure that heart, which first made bold 11 To the raging sea to trust 12 A fragile bark, nor fear'd the Afric gust 13 With its Northern mates at strife, 14 Nor Hyads' frown, nor South-wind fury-rife, 15 Mightiest power that Hadria knows, 16 Wills he the waves to madden or compose. 17 What had Death in store to awe 18 Those eyes, that huge sea-beasts unmelting saw, 19 Saw the swelling of the surge, 20 And high Ceraunian cliffs, the seaman's scourge? 21 Heaven's high providence in vain 22 Has sever'd countries with the estranging main, 23 If our vessels ne'ertheless 24 With reckless plunge that sacred bar transgress. 25 Daring all, their goal to win, 26 Men tread forbidden ground, and rush on sin: 27 Daring all, Prometheus play'd 28 His wily game, and fire to man convey'd; 29 Soon as fire was stolen away, 30 Pale Fever's stranger host and wan Decay 31 Swept o'er earth's polluted face, 32 And slow Fate quicken'd Death's once halting pace. 33 Daedalus the void air tried 34 On wings, to humankind by Heaven denied; 35 Acheron's bar gave way with ease 36 Before the arm of labouring Hercules. 37 Nought is there for man too high; 38 Our impious folly e'en would climb the sky, 39 Braves the dweller on the steep, 40 Nor lets the bolts of heavenly vengeance sleep.
1.4	1 Solvitur acris hiems grata vice veris et Favoni 2 trahuntque siccas machinae carinas 3 ac neque iam stabulis gaudet pecus aut arator igni 4 nec prata canis albicant pruinis. 5 iam Cytherea choros ducit Venus imminente luna 6 iunctaeque Nymphis Gratiae decentes 7 alterno terram quatiunt pede, dum gravis Cyclopum 8 Volcanus ardens visit officinas. 9 nunc decet aut viridi nitidum caput impedire myrto 10 aut flore, terrae quem ferunt solutae, 11 nunc et in umbrosis Fauno decet	1 The touch of Zephyr and of Spring has loosen'd Winter's thrall; 2 The well-dried keels are wheel'd again to sea: 3 The ploughman cares not for his fire, nor cattle for their stall, 4 And frost no more is whitening all the lea. 5 Now Cytherea leads the dance, the bright moon overhead; 6 The Graces and the Nymphs, together knit, 7 With rhythmic feet the meadow beat, while Vulcan, fiery red, 8 Heats the Cyclopian forge in Aetna's pit. 9 'Tis now the time to wreathe the brow with branch of myrtle green, 10 Or flowers, just opening to the vernal breeze; 11 Now Faunus claims his sacrifice among the shady treen, 12 Lambkin or kidling, which soe'er he please. 13 Pale Death, immolare lucis, 12 seu poscat agna sive malit haedo. 13 pallida Mors aequo pulsat pede pauperum tabernas 14 regumque turris. o beate Sesti, 15 vitae summa brevis spem nos vetat inchoare longam; 16 iam te premet nox fabulaeque Manes 17 et domus exilis Plutonia; quo simul mearis, 18 nec regna vini sortiere talis 19 nec tenerum Lycidan mirabere, quo calet iuventus 20 nunc omnis et mox virgines tepebunt.	impartial, walks his round: he knocks at cottage-gate 14 And palace-portal. Sestius, child of bliss! 15 How should a mortal's hopes be long, when short his being's date? 16 Lo here! the fabulous ghosts, the dark abyss, 17 The void of the Plutonian hall, where soon as e'er you go, 18 No more for you shall leap the auspicious die 19 To seat you on the throne of wine; no more your breast shall glow 20 For Lycidas, the star of every eye.

1.5	1 Quis multa gracilis te puer in rosa 2 perfusus liquidis urget odoribus 3 grato, Pyrrha, sub antro? 4 cui flavam religas comam 5 simplex munditiis? heu quotiens fidem 6 mutatosque deos flebit et aspera 7 nigris aequora ventis 8 emirabitur insolens 9 qui nunc te fruitur credulus aurea, 10 qui semper vacuam, semper amabilem 11 sperat, nescius aurae 12 fallacis. miseri, quibus 13 intemptata nites. me tabula sacer 14 votiva paries indicat uvida 15 suspendisse potenti 16 vestimenta maris deo.	1 What slender youth, besprinkled with perfume, 2 Courts you on roses in some grotto's shade? 3 Fair Pyrrha, say, for whom 4 Your yellow hair you braid, 5 So trim, so simple! Ah! how oft shall he 6 Lament that faith can fail, that gods can change, 7 Viewing the rough black sea 8 With eyes to tempests strange, 9 Who now is basking in your golden smile, 10 And dreams of you still fancy-free, still kind, 11 Poor fool, nor knows the guile 12 Of the deceitful wind! 13 Woe to the eyes you dazzle without cloud 14 Untried! For me, they show in yonder fane 15 My dripping garments, vow'd 16 To Him who curbs the main.
1.6	1 Scriberis Vario fortis et hostium 2 victor Maeonii carminis alite, 3 quam rem cumque ferox navibus aut equis 4 miles te duce gesserit. 5 nos, Agrippa, neque haec dicere nec gravem 6 Pelidae stomachum cedere nescii 7 nec cursus duplicis per mare Ulixei 8 nec saevam Pelopis domum 9 conamur, tenues grandia, dum pudor 10 inbellisque lyrae Musa potens vetat 11 laudes egregii Caesaris et tuas 12 culpa deterere ingeni. 13 quis Martem tunica tectum adamantina 14 digne scripserit aut pulvere Troico 15 nigrum Merionen aut ope Palladis 16 Tydiden superis parem? 17 nos convivia, nos proelia virginum 18 sectis in iuvenes unguibus acrium 19 cantamus, vacui sive quid urimur, 20 non praeter solitum leves.	1 Not I, but Varius:—he, of Homer's brood 2 A tuneful swan, shall bear you on his wing, 3 Your tale of trophies, won by field or flood, 4 Mighty alike to sing. 5 Not mine such themes, Agrippa; no, nor mine 6 To chant the Wrath that fill'd Pelides' breast, 7 Nor dark Ulysses' wanderings o'er the brine, 8 Nor Pelops' house unblest. 9 Vast were the task, I feeble; inborn shame, 10 And she, who makes the peaceful lyre submit, 11 Forbid me to impair great Caesar's fame 12 And yours by my weak wit. 13 But who may fitly sing of Mars array'd 14 In adamant mail, or Merion, black with dust 15 Of Troy, or Tydeus' son by Pallas' aid 16 Strong against gods to thrust? 17 Feasts are my theme, my warriors maidens fair, 18 Who with pared nails encounter youths in fight; 19 Be Fancy free or caught in Cupid's snare, 20 Her temper still is light.

1.7	1 Laudabunt alii claram Rhodon aut Mytilenen 2 aut Epheson bimarisve Corinthi 3 moenia vel Baccho Thebas vel Apolline Delphos 4 insignis aut Thessala Tempe; 5 sunt quibus unum opus est intactae Palladis urbem 6 carmine perpetuo celebrare et 7 undique decerptam fronti praeponere olivam; 8 plurimus in Iunonis honorem 9 aptum dicet equis Argos ditisque Mycenas: 10 me nec tam patiens Lacedaemon 11 nec tam Larisae percussit campus opimae 12 quam domus Albuneae resonantis 13 et praeceps Anio ac Tiburni lucus et uda 14 mobilibus pomaria rivis. 15 albus ut obscuro deterget nubila caelo 16 saepe Notus neque parturit imbris 17 perpetuos, sic tu sapiens finire memento 18 tristitiam vitaeque labores 19 molli, Plance, mero, seu te fulgentia signis 20 castra tenent seu densa tenebit 21 Tiburis umbra tui. Teucer Salamina patremque 22 cum fugeret, tamen uda Lyaeo 23 tempora populea fertur vinxisse corona 24 sic tristis adfatus amicos: 25 “quo nos cumque feret melior fortuna parente, 26 ibimus—o socii comitesque, 27 nil desperandum Teucro duce et auspice Teucro: 28 certus enim promisit Apollo 29 ambiguam tellure nova Salamina futuram. 30 o fortes peioraque passi 31 mecum saepe viri, nunc vino pellite curas; 32 cras ingens iterabimus aequor.”	1 Let others Rhodes or Mytilene sing, 2 Or Ephesus, or Corinth, set between 3 Two seas, or Thebes, or Delphi, for its king 4 Each famous, or Thessalian Tempe green; 5 There are who make chaste Pallas' virgin tower 6 The daily burden of unending song, 7 And search for wreaths the olive's rifled bower: 8 The praise of Juno sounds from many a tongue, 9 Telling of Argos' steeds, Mycenae's gold. 10 For me stern Sparta forges no such spell, 11 No, nor Larissa's plain of richest mould, 12 As bright Albunea echoing from her cell. 13 O headlong Anio! O Tiburnian groves, 14 And orchards saturate with shifting streams! 15 Look how the clear fresh south from heaven removes 16 The tempest, nor with rain perpetual teems! 17 You too be wise, my Plancus: life's worst cloud 18 Will melt in air, by mellow wine allay'd, 19 Dwell you in camps, with glittering banners proud, 20 Or 'neath your Tibur's canopy of shade. 21 When Teucer fled before his father's frown 22 From Salamis, they say his temples deep 23 He dipp'd in wine, then wreath'd with poplar crown, 24 And bade his comrades lay their grief to sleep: 25 “Where Fortune bears us, than my sire more kind, 26 There let us go, my own, my gallant crew. 27 'Tis Teucer leads, 'tis Teucer breathes the wind; 28 No more despair; Apollo's word is true. 29 Another Salamis in kindlier air 30 Shall yet arise. Hearts, that have borne with me 31 Worse buffets! drown today in wine your care; 32 To-morrow we recross the wide, wide sea!”
1.8	1 Lydia, dic per omnis 2 te deos oro, Sybarin cur properes amando 3 perdere, cur apricum 4 oderit campum patiens pulveris atque solis, 5 cur neque militaris 6 inter aequalis equitet, Gallica nec lupatis 7 temperet ora frenis?	1 Lydia, by all above, 2 Why bear so hard on Sybaris, to ruin him with love? 3 What change has made him shun 4 The playing-ground, who once so well could bear the dust and sun? 5 Why does he never sit 6 On horseback in his company, nor with uneven bit 7 His Gallic courser tame? 8 Why dreads he yellow Tiber, as 'twould sully that fair frame? 9 Like poison loathes the oil, 10

	8 cur timet flavum Tiberim tangere? cur olivum 9 sanguine viperino 10 cautius vitat neque iam livida gestat armis 11 bracchia saepe disco, 12 saepe trans finem iaculo nobilis expedito? 13 quid latet, ut marinae 14 filium dicunt Thetidis sub lacrimosa Troiae 15 funera, ne virilis 16 cultus in caedem et Lycias proriperet catervas?	His arms no longer black and blue with honourable toil, 11 He who erewhile was known 12 For quoit or javelin oft and oft beyond the limit thrown? 13 Why skulks he, as they say 14 Did Thetis' son before the dawn of Ilion's fatal day, 15 For fear the manly dress 16 Should fling him into danger's arms, amid the 17 Lycian press?
1.9	1 Vides ut alta stet nive candidum 2 Soracte nec iam sustineant onus 3 silvae laborantes geluque 4 flumina constiterint acuto? 5 dissolve frigus ligna super foco 6 large reponens atque benignius 7 deprome quadrimum Sabina, 8 o Thaliarche, merum diota. 9 permitte divis cetera, qui simul 10 stravere ventos aequore fervido 11 deproeliantis, nec cupressi 12 nec veteres agitantur orni. 13 quid sit futurum cras, fuge quaerere et 14 quem Fors dierum cumque dabit, lucro 15 adpone nec dulcis amores 16 sperne puer neque tu choreas, 17 donec virenti canities abest 18 morosa. nunc et campus et areae 19 lenesque sub noctem susurri 20 conposita repetantur hora, 21 nunc et latentis proditor intumo 22 gratus puellae risus ab angulo 23 pignusque dereptum lacertis 24 aut digito male pertinaci.	1 See, how it stands, one pile of snow, 2 Soracte! 'neath the pressure yield 3 Its groaning woods; the torrents' flow 4 With clear sharp ice is all congeal'd. 5 Heap high the logs, and melt the cold, 6 Good Thaliarch; draw the wine we ask, 7 That mellower vintage, four-year-old, 8 From out the cellar'd Sabine cask. 9 The future trust with Jove; when he 10 Has still'd the warring tempests' roar 11 On the vex'd deep, the cypress-tree 12 And aged ash are rock'd no more. 13 O, ask not what the morn will bring, 14 But count as gain each day that chance 15 May give you; sport in life's young spring, 16 Nor scorn sweet love, nor merry dance, 17 While years are green, while sullen eld 18 Is distant. Now the walk, the game, 19 The whisper'd talk at sunset held, 20 Each in its hour, prefer their claim. 21 Sweet too the laugh, whose feign'd alarm 22 The hiding-place of beauty tells, 23 The token, ravish'd from the arm 24 Or finger, that but ill rebels.
1.10	1 Mercuri facunde nepos Atlantis, 2 qui feros cultus hominum recentum 3 voce formasti catus et decorae 4 more palaestrae, 5 te canam, magni Iovis et deorum 6 nuntium curvaeque lyrae parentem, 7 callidum, quidquid placuit, iocoso 8 condere furto. 9 te, boves olim nisi reddidisses 10 per dolum amotas, puerum minaci 11 voce dum terret, viduus pharetra 12 risit Apollo. 13 quin et Atridas duce te superbos 14 Ilio dives Priamus relicto 15 Thessalosque ignis et iniqua Troiae 16 castra fefellit. 17 tu pias laetis animas reponis	1 Grandson of Atlas, wise of tongue, 2 O Mercury, whose wit could tame 3 Man's savage youth by power of song 4 And plastic game! 5 Thee sing I, herald of the sky, 6 Who gav'st the lyre its music sweet, 7 Hiding whate'er might please thine eye 8 In frolic cheat. 9 See, threatening thee, poor guileless child, 10 Apollo claims, in angry tone, 11 His cattle;—all at once he smiled, 12 His quiver gone. 13 Strong in thy guidance, Hector's sire 14 Escaped the Atridae, pass'd between 15 Thessalian tents and warders' fire, 16 Of all unseen, 17 Thou lay'st unspotted souls to rest; 18 Thy golden rod pale spectres know; 19 Blest power! by all thy brethren blest, 20

	18 sedibus virgaque levem coerces 19 aurea turbam, superis deorum 20 gratus et imis.	Above, below!
1.11	1 Tu ne quaesieris, scire nefas, quem mihi, quem tibi 2 finem di dederint, Leuconoe, nec Babylonios 3 temptaris numeros. ut melius, quidquid erit, pati. 4 seu pluris hiemes seu tribuit Iuppiter ultimam, 5 quae nunc oppositis debilitat pumicibus mare 6 Tyrrhenum: sapias, vina liques et spatio brevi 7 spem longam reseces. dum loquimur, fugerit invida 8 aetas: carpe diem quam minimum credula postero.	1 Ask not ('tis forbidden knowledge), what our destined term of years, 2 Mine and yours; nor scan the tables of your Babylonish seers. 3 Better far to bear the future, my Leuconoe, like the past, 4 Whether Jove has many winters yet to give, or this our last; 5 This, that makes the Tyrrhene billows spend their strength against the shore. 6 Strain your wine and prove your wisdom; life is short; should hope be more? 7 In the moment of our talking, envious time has ebb'd away. 8 Seize the present; trust tomorrow e'en as little as you may.
1.12.1	1 Quem virum aut heroa lyra vel acri 2 tibia sumis celebrare, Clio? 3 quem deum? cuius recinet iocosa 4 nomen imago 5 aut in umbrosis Heliconis oris 6 aut super Pindo gelidove in Haemo? 7 unde vocalem temere insecutae 8 Orphea silvae, 9 arte materna rapidos morantem 10 fluminum lapsus celeresque ventos, 11 blandum et auritas fidibus canoris 12 ducere quercus. 13 quid prius dicam solitis parentis 14 laudibus, qui res hominum ac deorum, 15 qui mare ac terras variisque mundum 16 temperat horis? 17 unde nil maius generatur ipso 18 nec viget quidquam simile aut secundum. 19 proximos illi tamen occupavit 20 Pallas honores 21 proeliis audax. neque te silebo, 22 Liber et saevis inimica virgo 23 beluis, nec te, metuende certa 24 Phoebe sagitta. 25 dicam et Alciden puerosque Ledae, 26 hunc equis, illum superare pugnis 27 nobilem; quorum simul alba nautis 28 stella refulsit, 29 defluit saxis agitatus umor, 30 concidunt venti fugiuntque nubes	1 What man, what hero, Clio sweet, 2 On harp or flute wilt thou proclaim? 3 What god shall echo's voice repeat 4 In mocking game 5 To Helicon's sequester'd shade, 6 Or Pindus, or on Haemus chill, 7 Where once the hurrying woods obey'd 8 The minstrel's will, 9 Who, by his mother's gift of song, 10 Held the fleet stream, the rapid breeze, 11 And led with blandishment along 12 The listening trees? 13 Whom praise we first? the sire on high, 14 Who gods and men unerring guides, 15 Who rules the sea, the earth, the sky, 16 Their times and tides. 17 No mightier birth may he beget; 18 No like, no second has he known; 19 Yet nearest to her sire's is set 20 Minerva's throne. 21 Nor yet shall Bacchus pass unsaid, 22 Bold warrior, nor the virgin foe 23 Of savage beasts, nor Phoebus, dread 24 With deadly bow. 25 Alcides too shall be my theme, 26 And Leda's twins, for horses he, 27 He famed for boxing; soon as gleam 28 Their stars at sea, 29 The lash'd spray trickles from the steep, 30 The wind sinks down, the storm-cloud flies,
1.12.31	31 et minax, quia sic voluere, ponto 32 unda recumbit. 33 Romulum post hos prius an quietum 34 Pompili regnum memorem, an superbos	31 The threatening billow on the deep 32 Obedient lies. 33 Shall now Quirinus take his turn, 34 Or quiet Numa, or the state 35 Proud Tarquin held, or Cato stern, 36 By death made great? 37 Ay,

	35 Tarquini fascis, dubito, an Catonis 36 nobile letum: 37 Regulum et Scauros animaeque magnae 38 prodigum Paulum superante Poeno 39 gratus insigni referam camena 40 Fabriciumque. 41 hunc et incomptis Curium capillis 42 utilem bello tulit et Camillum 43 saeva paupertas et avitus apto 44 cum lare fundus. 45 crescit occulto velut arbor aevo 46 fama Marcelli; micat inter omnis 47 Iulium sidus velut inter ignis 48 luna minores. 49 gentis humanae pater atque custos, 50 orte Saturno, tibi cura magni 51 Caesaris fatis data: tu secundo 52 Caesare regnes. 53 ille seu Parthos Latio imminentis 54 egerit iusto domitos triumpho 55 sive subiectos Orientis orae 56 Seras et Indos, 57 te minor latum reget aequos orbem: 58 tu gravi curru quaties Olympum, 59 tu parum castis inimica mittes 60 fulmina lucis.	Regulus and the Scaurian name, 38 And Paullus, who at Cannae gave 39 His glorious soul, fair record claim, 40 For all were brave. 41 Thee, Furius, and Fabricius, thee, 42 Rough Curius too, with untrimm'd beard, 43 Your sires' transmitted poverty 44 To conquest rear'd. 45 Marcellus' fame, its up-growth hid, 46 Springs like a tree; great Julius' light 47 Shines, like the radiant moon amid 48 The lamps of night. 49 Dread Sire and Guardian of man's race, 50 To thee, O Jove, the Fates assign 51 Our Caesar's charge; his power and place 52 Be next to thine. 53 Whether the Parthian, threatening Rome, 54 His eagles scatter to the wind. 55 Or follow to their eastern home 56 Cathay and Ind, 57 Thy second let him rule below 58 Thy car shall shake the realms above; 59 Thy vengeful bolts shall overthrow 60 Each guilty grove.
1.13	1 Cum tu, Lydia, Telephi 2 cervicem roseam, cerea Telephi 3 laudas bracchia, vae, meum 4 fervens difficili bile tumet iecur. 5 tum nec mens mihi nec color 6 certa sede manet, umor et in genas 7 furtim labitur arguens, 8 quam lentis penitus macerer ignibus. 9 uror, seu tibi candidos 10 turparunt umeros inmodicae mero 11 rixae sive puer furens 12 inpressit memorem dente labris notam. 13 non, si me satis audias, 14 speres perpetuum dulcia barbare 15 laedentem oscula, quae Venus 16 quinta parte sui nectaris imbuit. 17 felices ter et amplius 18 quos inrupta tenet copula nec malis 19 divolsus querimoniis 20 suprema citius solvet amor die.	1 Telephus—you praise him still, 2 His waxen arms, his rosy-tinted neck; 3 Ah! and all the while I thrill 4 With jealous pangs I cannot, cannot check 5 See, my colour comes and goes, 6 My poor heart flutters, Lydia, and the dew, 7 Down my cheek soft stealing, shows 8 What lingering torments rack me through and through. 9 Oh, 'tis agony te see 10 Those snowwhite shoulders scarr'd in drunken fray, 11 Or those ruby lips, where he 12 Has left strange marks, that show how rough his play! 13 Never, never look to find 14 A faithful heart in him whose rage can harm 15 Sweetest lips, which Venus kind 16 Has tinctured with her quintessential charm. 17 Happy, happy; happy they 18 Whose living love, untroubled by all strife, 19 Binds them till the last sad day, 20 Nor parts asunder but with parting life!
1.14	1 O navis, referent in mare te novi 2 fluctus. o quid agis? fortiter occupa 3 portum. nonne vides, ut 4 nudum remigio latus 5 et malus celeri saucius Africo 6 antemnaeque gemant ac sine funibus 7 vix durare carinae 8 possint imperiosius	1 O luckless bark! new waves will force you back 2 To sea. O, haste to make the haven yours! 3 E'en now, a helpless wrack, 4 You drift, despoil'd of oars; 5 The Afric gale has dealt your mast a wound; 6 Your sailyards groan, nor can your keel sustain, 7 Till lash'd with cables round, 8 A more imperious main.

	9 aequor? non tibi sunt integra lintea, 10 non di, quos iterum pressa voces malo. 11 quamvis Pontica pinus, 12 silvae filia nobilis, 13 iactes et genus et nomen inutile: 14 nil pictis timidus navita puppibus 15 fidit. tu, nisi ventis 16 debes ludibrium, cave. 17 nuper sollicitum quae mihi taedium, 18 nunc desiderium curaque non levis, 19 interfusa nitentis 20 vites aequora Cycladas.	9 Your canvass hangs in ribbons, rent and torn; 10 No gods are left to pray to in fresh need. 11 A pine of Pontus born 12 Of noble forest breed, 13 You boast your name and lineage—madly blind 14 Can painted timbers quell a seaman's fear? 15 Beware! or else the wind 16 Makes you its mock and jeer. 17 Your trouble late made sick this heart of mine, 18 And still I love you, still am ill at ease. 19 O, shun the sea, where shine 20 The thick-sown Cyclades!
1.15	1 Pastor cum traheret per freta navibus 2 Idaeis Helenen perfidus hospitam, 3 ingrato celeres obruit otio 4 ventos ut caneret fera 5 Nereus fata. “mala ducis avi domum 6 quam multo repetet Graecia milite 7 coniurata tuas rumpere nuptias 8 et regnum Priami vetus. 9 heu heu, quantus equis, quantus adest viris 10 sudor, quanta moves funera Dardanae 11 genti. iam galeam Pallas et aegida 12 currusque et rabiem parat. 13 nequiquam Veneris praesidio ferox 14 pectes caesariem grataque feminis 15 inbelli cithara carmina divides; 16 nequiquam thalamo gravis 17 hastas et calami spicula Cnosii 18 vitabis strepitumque et celerem sequi 19 Aiacem: tamen, heu serus, adulteros 20 crines pulvere collines. 21 non Laertiaden, exitium tuae 22 genti, non Pylium Nestora respicis? 23 urgent inpavidi te Salaminius 24 Teucer, te Sthenelus, sciens 25 pugnae sive opus est imperitare equis, 26 non auriga piger. Merionen quoque 27 nosces. ecce furit, te reperire atrox, 28 Tydides melior patre: 29 quem tu, cervus uti vallis in altera 30 visum parte lupum graminis inmemor, 31 sublimi fugies mollis anhelitu, 32 non hoc pollicitus tuae. 33 iracunda diem proferet Ilio 34 matronisque Phrygum classis Achillei; 35 post certas hiemes uret Achaicus 36 ignis Iliacas domos.	1 When the false swain was hurrying o'er the deep 2 His Spartan hostess in the Idaean bark, 3 Old Nereus laid the unwilling winds asleep, 4 That all to Fate might hark, 5 Speaking through him:—“Home in ill hour you take 6 A prize whom Greece shall claim with troops untold, 7 Leagued by an oath your marriage tie to break 8 And Priam's kingdom old. 9 Alas! what deaths you launch on Dardan realm! 10 What tolls are waiting, man and horse to tire! 11 See! Pallas trims her aegis and her helm, 12 Her chariot and her ire. 13 Vainly shall you; in Venus' favour strong, 14 Your tresses comb, and for your dames divide 15 On peaceful lyre the several parts of song; 16 Vainly in chamber hide 17 From spears and Gnossian arrows, barb'd with fate, 18 And battle's din, and Ajax in the chase 19 Unconquer'd; those adulterous locks, though late, 20 Shall gory dust deface. 21 Hark! 'tis the death-cry of your race! look back! 22 Ulysses comes, and Pylian Nestor grey; 23 See! Salaminian Teucer on your track, 24 And Sthenelus, in the fray 25 Versed, or with whip and rein, should need require, 26 No laggard. Merion too your eyes shall know 27 From far. Tydides, fiercer than his sire, 28 Pursues you, all aglow; 29 Him, as the stag forgets to graze for fright, 30 Seeing the wolf at distance in the glade, 31 And flies, high panting, you shall fly, despite 32 Boasts to your leman made. 33 What though Achilles' wrathful fleet postpone 34 The day of doom to Troy and Troy's proud dames, 35 Her towers shall fall, the number'd winters flown, 36 Wrapp'd in Achaenan flames.”
1.16	1 O matre pulcra filia pulchrior,	1 O lovelier than the lovely dame 2 That

	2 quem criminosis cumque voles modum 3 pones iambis, sive flamma 4 sive mari libet Hadriano. 5 non Dindymene, non adytis quatit 6 mentem sacerdotum incola Pythius, 7 non Liber aeque, non acuta 8 sic geminant Corybantes aera, 9 tristes ut irae, quas neque Noricus 10 deterret ensis nec mare naufragum 11 nec saevos ignis nec tremendo 12 Iuppiter ipse ruens tumultu. 13 fertur Prometheus addere principi 14 limo coactus particulam undique 15 desectam et insani leonis 16 vim stomacho adposuisse nostro. 17 irae Thyesten exitio gravi 18 stravere et altis urbibus ultimae 19 stetere causae, cur perirent 20 funditus inprimeretque muris 21 hostile aratrum exercitus insolens. 22 conpesce mentem: me quoque pectoris 23 temptavit in dulci iuventa 24 fervor et in celeres iambos 25 misit furentem. nunc ego mitibus 26 mutare quaero tristia, dum mihi 27 fias recantatis amica 28 opprobriis animumque reddas.	bore you, sentence as you please 3 Those scurril verses, be it flame 4 Your vengeance craves, or Hadrian seas. 5 Not Cybele, nor he that haunts 6 Rich Pytho, worse the brain confounds, 7 Not Bacchus, nor the Corybants 8 Clash their loud gongs with fiercer sounds 9 Than savage wrath; nor sword nor spear 10 Appals it, no, nor ocean's frown, 11 Nor ravening fire, nor Jupiter 12 In hideous ruin crashing down. 13 Prometheus, forced, they say, to add 14 To his prime clay some favourite part 15 From every kind, took lion mad, 16 And lodged its gall in man's poor heart. 17 'Twas wrath that laid Thyestes low; 18 'Tis wrath that oft destruction calls 19 On cities, and invites the foe 20 To drive his plough o'er ruin'd walls. 21 Then calm your spirit; I can tell 22 How once, when youth in all my veins 23 Was glowing, blind with rage, I fell 24 On friend and foe in ribald strains. 25 Come, let me change my sour for sweet, 26 And smile complacent as before: 27 Hear me my palinode repeat, 28 And give me back your heart once more.
1.17	1 Velox amoenum saepe Lucretilem 2 mutat Lycaeo Faunus et igneam 3 defendit aestatem capellis 4 usque meis pluviosque ventos. 5 inpune tutum per nemus arbutos 6 quaerunt latentis et thyma deviae 7 olentis uxores mariti 8 nec viridis metuunt colubras 9 nec Martialis haediliae lupos, 10 utcumque dulci, Tyndari, fistula 11 valles et Usticae cubantis 12 levia personuere saxa. 13 di me tuentur, dis pietas mea 14 et musa cordi est. hic tibi copia 15 manabit ad plenum benigno 16 ruris honorum opulenta cornu. 17 hic in reducta valle Caniculae 18 vitabis aestus et fide Teia 19 dices laborantis in uno 20 Penelopen vitreamque Circen; 21 hic innocentis pocula Lesbii 22 duces sub umbra nec Semeleius 23 cum Marte confundet Thyoneus 24 proelia nec metues protervum 25 suspecta Cyrum, ne male dispari 26 incontinentis iniciat manus 27 et scindat haerentem coronam 28 crinibus inmeritamque vestem.	1 The pleasures of Lucretilis 2 Tempt Faunus from his Grecian seat; 3 He keeps my little goats in bliss 4 Apart from wind, and rain, and heat. 5 In safety rambling o'er the sward 6 For arbutes and for thyme they peer, 7 The ladies of the unfragrant lord, 8 Nor vipers, green with venom, fear, 9 Nor savage wolves, of Mars' own breed, 10 My Tyndaris, while Ustica's dell 11 Is vocal with the silvan reed, 12 And music thrills the limestone fell. 13 Heaven is my guardian; heaven approves 14 A blameless life, by song made sweet; 15 Come hither, and the fields and groves 16 Their horn shall empty at your feet. 17 Here, shelter'd by a friendiy tree, 18 In Teian measures you shall sing 19 Bright Circe and Penelope, 20 Love-smitten both by one sharp sting. 21 Here shall you quaff beneath the shade 22 Sweet Lesbian draughts that injure none, 23 Nor fear lest Mars the realm invade 24 Of Semele's Thyonian son, 25 Lest Cyrus on a foe too weak 26 Lay the rude hand of wild excess, 27 His passion on your chaplet wreak, 28 Or spoil your undeserving dress.

1.18	1 Nullam, Vare, sacra vite prius severis arborem 2 circa mite solum Tiburis et moenia Catili; 3 siccis omnia nam dura deus proposuit neque 4 mordaces aliter diffugiunt sollicitudines. 5 quis post vina gravem militiam aut pauperiem crepat? 6 quis non te potius, Bacche pater, teque, decens Venus? 7 ac ne quis modici transiliat munera Liberi, 8 Centaurea monet cum Lapithis rixa super mero 9 debellata, monet Sithoniis non levis Euhius, 10 cum fas atque nefas exiguo fine libidinum 11 discernunt avidi. non ego te, candide Bassareu, 12 invitum quatiam nec variis obsita frondibus 13 sub divum rapiam. saeva tene cum Berecyntio 14 cornu tympana, quae subsequitur caecus amor sui 15 et tollens vacuum plus nimio gloria verticem 16 arcanique fides prodiga, perlucidior vitro.	1 Varus, are your trees in planting? put in none before the vine, 2 In the rich domain of Tibur, by the walls of Catilus; 3 There's a power above that hampers all that sober brains design, 4 And the troubles man is heir to thus are quell'd, and only thus. 5 Who can talk of want or warfare when the wine is in his head, 6 Not of thee, good father Bacchus, and of Venus fair and bright? 7 But should any dream of licence, there's a lesson may be read, 8 How 'twas wine that drove the Centaurs with the Lapithae to fight. 9 And the Thracians too may warn us; truth and falsehood, good and ill, 10 How they mix them, when the wine-god's hand is heavy on them laid! 11 Never, never, gracious Bacchus, may I move thee 'gainst thy will, 12 Or uncover what is hidden in the verdure of thy shade! 13 Silence thou thy savage cymbals, and the Berecyntine horn; 14 In their train Self-love still follows, dully, desperately blind, 15 And Vain-glory, towering upwards in its emptyheaded scorn, 16 And the Faith that keeps no secrets, with a window in its mind.
1.19	1 Mater saeva Cupidinum 2 Thebanaeque iubet me Semelae puer 3 et lasciva Licentia 4 finitis animum reddere amoribus. 5 urit me Glycerae nitor 6 splendentis Pario marmore purius, 7 urit grata protervitas 8 et voltus nimium lubricus adspici. 9 in me tota ruens Venus 10 Cyprum deseruit nec patitur Scythas 11 et versis animosum equis 12 Parthum dicere nec quae nihil attinent. 13 hic vivum mihi caespitem, hic 14 verbenas, pueri, ponite turaque 15 bimi cum patera meri: 16 mactata veniet lenior hostia.	1 Cupid's mother, cruel dame, 2 And Semele's Theban boy, and Licence bold, 3 Bid me kindle into flame 4 This heart, by waning passion now left cold. 5 O, the charms of Glycera, 6 That hue, more dazzling than the Parian stone! 7 O, that sweet tormenting play, 8 That too fair face, that blinds when look'd upon! 9 Venus comes in all her might, 10 Quits Cyprus for my heart, nor lets me tell 11 Of the Parthian, bold in flight, 12 Nor Scythian hordes, nor aught that breaks her spell. 13 Heap the grassy altar up, 14 Bring vervain, boys, and sacred frankincense; 15 Fill the sacrificial cup; 16 A victim's blood will soothe her vehemence.
1.20	1 Vile potabis modicis Sabinum 2 cantharis, Graeca quod ego ipse testa 3 conditum levi, datus in theatro 4 cum tibi plausus, 5 clare Maecenas eques, ut paterni 6 fluminis ripae simul et iocosa 7 redderet laudes tibi Vaticani 8 montis imago.	1 Not large my cups, nor rich my cheer, 2 This Sabine wine, which erst I seal'd, 3 That day the applauding theatre 4 Your welcome peal'd, 5 Dear knight Maecenas! as 'twere fain 6 That your paternal river's banks, 7 And Vatican, in sportive strain, 8 Should echo thanks. 9 For you Calenian grapes are

	9 Caecubum et prelo domitam Caleno 10 tu bibes uvam: mea nec Falernae 11 temperant vites neque Formiani 12 pocula colles.	press'd, 10 And Caecuban; these cups of mine 11 Falernum's bounty ne'er has bless'd, 12 Nor Formian vine.
1.21	1 Dianam tenerae dicite virgines, 2 intonsum pueri dicite Cynthium 3 Latonamque supremo 4 dilectam penitus Iovi. 5 vos laetam fluviis et nemorum coma 6 quaecumque aut gelido prominet Algido 7 nigris aut Erymanthi 8 silvis aut viridis Cragi; 9 vos Tempe totidem tollite laudibus 10 natalemque, mares, Delon Apollinis 11 insignemque pharetra 12 fraternaque umerum lyra. 13 hic bellum lacrimosum, hic miseram famem 14 pestemque a populo et principe Caesare in 15 Persas atque Britannos 16 vestra motus aget prece.	1 Of Dian's praises, tender maidens, tell; 2 Of Cynthus' unshorn god, young striplings, sing; 3 And bright Latona, well 4 Beloved of Heaven's high king. 5 Sing her that streams and silvan foliage loves, 6 Whate'er on Algidus' chill brow is seen, 7 In Erymanthian groves 8 Dark-leaved, or Cragus green. 9 Sing Tempe too, glad youths, in strain as loud, 10 And Phoebus' birthplace, and that shoulder fair, 11 His golden quiver proud 12 And brother's lyre to bear. 13 His arm shall banish Hunger, Plague, and War 14 To Persia and to Britain's coast, away 15 From Rome and Caesar far, 16 If you have zeal to pray.
1.22	1 Integer vitae scelerisque purus 2 non eget Mauris iaculis neque arcu 3 nec venenatis gravida sagittis, 4 Fusce, pharetra, 5 sive per Syrtis iter aestuosas 6 sive facturus per inhospitalem 7 Caucasum vel quae loca fabulosus 8 lambit Hydaspes. 9 namque me silva lupus in Sabina, 10 dum meam canto Lalagen et ultra 11 terminum curis vagor expeditis, 12 fugit inermem; 13 quale portentum neque militaris 14 Daunias latis alit aesculetis 15 nec Iubae tellus generat, leonum 16 arida nutrix. 17 pone me pigris ubi nulla campis 18 arbor aestiva recreatur aura, 19 quod latus mundi nebulae malusque 20 Iuppiter urget; 21 pone sub curru nimium propinqui 22 solis in terra domibus negata: 23 dulce ridentem Lalagen amabo, 24 dulce loquentem.	1 No need of Moorish archer's craft 2 To guard the pure and stainless liver; 3 He wants not, Fuscus, poison'd shaft 4 To store his quiver, 5 Whether he traverse Libyan shoals, 6 Or Caucasus, forlorn and horrent, 7 Or lands where far Hydaspes rolls 8 His fabled torrent. 9 A wolf, while roaming trouble-free 10 In Sabine wood, as fancy led me, 11 Unarm'd I sang my Lalage, 12 Beheld, and fled me. 13 Dire monster! in her broad oak woods 14 Fierce Daunia fosters none such other, 15 Nor Juba's land, of lion broods 16 The thirsty mother. 17 Place me where on the ice-bound plain 18 No tree is cheer'd by summer breezes, 19 Where Jove descends in sleety rain 20 Or sullen freezes; 21 Place me where none can live for heat, 22 'Neath Phoebus' very chariot plant me, 23 That smile so sweet, that voice so sweet, 24 Shall still enchant me.
1.23	1 Vitas hinnuleo me similis, Chloe, 2 quaerenti pavidam montibus aviis 3 matrem non sine vano 4 aurarum et siluae metu. 5 nam seu mobilibus veris inhorruit 6 adventus foliis seu virides rubum 7 dimovere lacertae, 8 et corde et genibus tremit. 9 atqui non ego te tigris ut aspera 10 Gaetulusve leo frangere persequor:	1 You fly me, Chloe, as o'er trackless hills 2 A young fawn runs her timorous dam to find, 3 Whom empty terror thrills 4 Of woods and whispering wind. 5 Whether 'tis Spring's first shiver, faintly heard 6 Through the light leaves, or lizards in the brake 7 The rustling thorns have stirr'd, 8 Her heart, her knees, they quake. 9 Yet I, who chase you, no grim lion am, 10 No

	11 tandem desine matrem 12 tempestiva sequi viro.	tiger fell, to crush you in my gripe: 11 Come, learn to leave your dam. 12 For lover's kisses ripe.
1.24	1 Quis desiderio sit pudor aut modus 2 tam cari capitis? praecipe lugubris 3 cantus, Melpomene, cui liquidam pater 4 vocem cum cithara dedit. 5 ergo Quintilium perpetuus sopor 6 urget? cui Pudor et Iustitiae soror 7 incorrupta Fides nudaque Veritas 8 quando ullum inveniet parem? 9 multis ille bonis flebilis occidit, 10 nulli flebilior quam tibi, Vergili. 11 tu, frustra pius, heu non ita creditum 12 poscis Quintilium deos. 13 quid? si Threicio blandius Orpheo 14 auditam moderere arboribus fidem, 15 num vanae redeat sanguis imagini, 16 quam virga semel horrida 17 non lenis precibus fata recludere 18 nigro conpulerit Mercurius gregi? 19 durum: sed levius fit patientia 20 quidquid corrigere est nefas.	1 Why blush to let our tears unmeasured fall 2 For one so dear? Begin the mournful stave, 3 Melpomene, to whom the sire of all 4 Sweet voice with music gave. 5 And sleeps he then the heavy sleep of death, 6 Quintilius? Piety, twin sister dear 7 Of Justice! naked Truth! unsullied Faith! 8 When will ye find his peer? 9 By many a good man wept, Quintilius dies; 10 By none than you, my Virgil, trulier wept: 11 Devout in vain, you chide the faithless skies, 12 Asking your loan ill-kept. 13 No, though more suasive than the bard of Thrace 14 You swept the lyre that trees were fain to hear, 15 Ne'er should the blood revisit his pale face 16 Whom once with wand severe 17 Mercury has folded with the sons of night, 18 Untaught to prayer Fate's prison to unseal. 19 Ah, heavy grief! but patience makes more light 20 What sorrow may not heal.
1.25	1 Parcius iunctas quatiunt fenestras 2 iactibus crebris iuvenes protervi 3 nec tibi somnos adimunt amatque 4 ianua limen, 5 quae prius multum facilis movebat 6 cardines. audis minus et minus iam: 7 “me tuo longas pereunte noctes, 8 Lydia, dormis?” 9 invicem moechos anus arrogantis 10 flebis in solo levis angiportu 11 Thracio bacchante magis sub inter- 12 lunia vento, 13 cum tibi flagrans amor et libido, 14 quae solet matres furiare equorum, 15 saeviet circa iecur ulcerosum 16 non sine questu, 17 laeta quod pubes hedera virenti 18 gaudeat pulla magis atque myrto, 19 aridas frondes hiemis sodali 20 dedicet Euro.
1.26	1 Musis amicus tristitiam et metus 2 tradam protervis in mare Creticum 3 portare ventis, quis sub Arcto 4 rex gelidae metuatur orae, 5 quid Tiridaten terreat, unice 6 securus. o quae fontibus integris 7 gaudes, apricos necte flores, 8 necte meo Lamiae coronam, 9 Piplei dulcis. nil sine te mei 10 prosunt honores: hunc fidibus novis, 11 hunc Lesbio sacrare plectro	1 The Muses love me: fear and grief, 2 The winds may blow them to the sea; 3 Who quail before the wintry chief 4 Of Scythia's realm, is nought to me. 5 What cloud o'er Tiridates lowers, 6 I care not, I. O, nymph divine 7 Of virgin springs, with sunniest flowers 8 A chaplet for my Lamia twine, 9 Pimplea sweet! my praise were vain 10 Without thee. String this maiden lyre, 11 Attune for him the Lesbian strain, 12 O

	12 teque tuasque decet sorores.	goddess, with thy sister quire!
1.27	1 Natis in usum laetitiae scyphis 2 pugnare Thracum est: tollite barbarum 3 morem verecundumque Bacchum 4 sanguineis prohibete rixis. 5 vino et lucernis Medus acinaces 6 immane quantum discrepat: inpium 7 lenite clamorem sodales 8 et cubito remanete presso. 9 voltis severi me quoque sumere 10 partem Falerni? dicat Opuntiae 11 frater Megillae, quo beatus 12 volnere, qua pereat sagitta. 13 cessat voluntas? non alia bibam 14 mercede. quae te cumque domat Venus, 15 non erubescendis adurit 16 ignibus ingenuoque semper 17 amore peccas. quidquid habes, age, 18 depone tutis auribus. a miser, 19 quanta laborabas Charybdi, 20 digne puer meliore flamma. 21 quae saga, quis te solvere Thessalis 22 magus venenis, quis poterit deus? 23 vix inligatum te triformi 24 Pegasus expediet Chimaera.	1 What, fight with cups that should give joy? 2 'Tis barbarous; leave such savage ways 3 To Thracians. Bacchus, shamefaced boy, 4 Is blushing at your bloody frays. 5 The Median sabre! lights and wine! 6 Was stranger contrast ever seen? 7 Cease, cease this brawling, comrades mine, 8 And still upon your elbows lean. 9 Well, shall I take a toper's part 10 Of fierce Falernian? let our guest, 11 Megilla's brother, say what dart 12 Gave the death-wound that makes him blest. 13 He hesitates? no other hire 14 Shall tempt my sober brains. Whate'er 15 The goddess tames you, no base fire 16 She kindles; 'tis some gentle fair 17 Allures you still. Come, tell me truth, 18 And trust my honour—That the name? 19 That wild Charybdis yours? Poor youth! 20 O, you deserved a better flame! 21 What wizard, what Thessalian spell, 22 What god can save you, hamper'd thus? 23 To cope with this Chimaera fell 24 Would task another Pegasus.
1.28	1 Te maris et terrae numeroque carentis harenae 2 mensorem cohibent, Archyta, 3 pulveris exigui prope litus parva Matinum 4 munera nec quicquam tibi prodest 5 aerias temptasse domos animoque rotundum 6 percurrisse polum morituro. 7 occidit et Pelopis genitor, conviva deorum, 8 Tithonusque remotus in auras 9 et Iovis arcanis Minos admissus habentque 10 Tartara Panthoiden iterum Orco 11 demissum, quamvis clipeo Troiana refixo 12 tempora testatus nihil ultra 13 nervos atque cutem morti concesserat atrae, 14 iudice te non sordidus auctor 15 naturae verique. sed omnis una manet nox 16 et calcanda semel via leti. 17 dant alios Furiae torvo spectacula Marti, 18 exitio est avidum mare nautis; 19 mixta senum ac iuvenum densentur funera, nullum 20 saeva caput Proserpina fugit:	1 The sea, the earth, the innumerable sand, 2 Archytas, thou couldst measure; now, alas! 3 A little dust on Matine shore has spann'd 4 That soaring spirit; vain it was to pass 5 The gates of heaven, and send thy soul in quest 6 O'er air's wide realms; for thou hadst yet to die. 7 Ay, dead is Pelops' father, heaven's own guest, 8 And old Tithonus, rapt from earth to sky, 9 And Minos, made the council-friend of Jove; 10 And Panthus' son has yielded up his breath 11 Once more, though down he pluck'd the shield, to prove 12 His prowess under Troy, and bade grim death 13 O'er skin and nerves alone exert its power, 14 Not he, you grant, in nature meanly read. 15 Yes, all “await the inevitable hour;” 16 The downward journey all one day must tread. 17 Some bleed, to glut the war-god's savage eyes; 18 Fate meets the sailor from the hungry brine; 19 Youth jostles age in funeral obsequies; 20 Each brow in turn is touch'd by Proserpine. 21 Me, too, Orion's mate, the Southern blast, 22 Whelm'd in deep death beneath the Illyrian wave. 23 But grudge not, sailor, of driven sand to cast 24 A handful on my head, that owns no grave. 25 So,

	21 me quoque devexi rapidus comes Orionis 22 Illyricis Notus obruit undis. 23 at tu, nauta, vagae ne parce malignus harenae 24 ossibus et capiti inhumato 25 particulam dare: sic quodcumque minabitur Eurus 26 fluctibus Hesperiis Venusinae 27 plectantur silvae te sospite multaque merces 28 unde potest tibi defluat aequo 29 ab Iove Neptunoque sacri custode Tarenti. 30 neglegis inmeritis nocituram 31 postmodo te natis fraudem conmittere? fors et 32 debita iura vicesque superbae 33 te maneant ipsum: precibus non linquar inultis 34 teque piacula nulla resolvent. 35 quamquam festinas, non est mora longa; licebit 36 iniecto ter pulvere curras.	though the eastern tempests loudly threat 26 Hesperia's main, may green Venusia's crown 27 Be stripp'd, while you lie warm; may blessings yet 28 Stream from Tarentum's guard, great Neptune, down, 29 And gracious Jove, into your open lap! 30 What! shrink you not from crime whose punishment 31 Falls on your innocent children? it may hap 32 Imperious Fate will make yourself repent. 33 My prayers shall reach the avengers of all wrong; 34 No expiations shall the curse unbind. 35 Great though your haste, I would not task you long; 36 Thrice sprinkle dust, then scud before the wind.
1.29	1 Icci, beatis nunc Arabum invides 2 gazis et acrem militiam paras 3 non ante devictis Sabaeae 4 regibus horribilique Medo 5 nectis catenas? quae tibi virginum 6 sponso necato barbara serviet, 7 puer quis ex aula capillis 8 ad cyathum statuetur unctis 9 doctus sagittas tendere Sericas 10 arcu paterno? quis neget arduis 11 pronos relabi posse rivos 12 montibus et Tiberim reverti, 13 cum tu coemptos undique nobilis 14 libros Panaeti Socraticam et domum 15 mutare loricis Hiberis, 16 pollicitus meliora, tendis?	1 Your heart on Arab wealth is set, 2 Good Iccius: you would try your steel 3 On Saba's kings, unconquerd yet, 4 And make the Mede your fetters feel. 5 Come, tell me what barbarian fair 6 Will serve you now, her bridegroom slain? 7 What page from court with essenced hair 8 Will tender you the bowl you drain, 9 Well skill'd to bend the Serian bow 10 His father carried? Who shall say 11 That rivers may not uphill flow, 12 And Tiber's self return one day, 13 If you would change Panaetius' works, 14 That costly purchase, and the clan 15 Of Socrates, for shields and dirks, 16 Whom once we thought a saner man?
1.30	1 O Venus regina Cnidi Paphique, 2 sperne dilectam Cypron et vocantis 3 ture te multo Glycerae decoram 4 transfer in aedem. 5 fervidus tecum puer et solutis 6 Gratiae zonis properentque Nymphae 7 et parum comis sine te Iuventas 8 Mercuriusque.	1 Come, Cnidian, Paphian Venus, come, 2 Thy well-beloved Cyprus spurn, 3 Haste, where for thee in Glycera's home 4 Sweet odours burn. 5 Bring too thy Cupid, glowing warm, 6 Graces and Nymphs, unzoned and free, 7 And Youth, that lacking thee lacks charm, 8 And Mercury.
1.31	1 Quid dedicatum poscit Apollinem 2 vates? quid orat de patera novum 3 fundens liquorem? non opimae 4 Sardiniae segetes feracis, 5 non aestuosae grata Calabriae 6 armenta, non aurum aut ebur Indicum, 7 non rura, quae Liris quieta	1 What blessing shall the bard entreat 2 The god he hallows, as he pours 3 The winecup? Not the mounds of wheat 4 That load Sardinian threshing floors; 5 Not Indian gold or ivory—no, 6 Nor flocks that o'er Calabria stray, 7 Nor fields that Liris, still and slow, 8 Is eating, unperceived, away. 9 Let those

	8 mordet aqua taciturnus amnis. 9 premant Calenam falce quibus dedit 10 fortuna vitem, dives ut aureis 11 mercator exsiccet culillis 12 vina Syra reparata merce, 13 dis carus ipsis, quippe ter et quater 14 anno revisens aequor Atlanticum 15 inpune. me pascunt olivae, 16 me cichorea levesque malvae. 17 frui paratis et valido mihi, 18 Latoe, dones et precor integra 19 cum mente nec turpem senectam 20 degere nec cithara carentem.	whose fate allows them train 10 Calenum's vine; let trader bold 11 From golden cups rich liquor drain 12 For wares of Syria bought and sold, 13 Heaven's favourite, sooth, for thrice a year 14 He comes and goes across the brine 15 Undamaged. I in plenty here 16 On endives, mallows, succory dine. 17 O grant me, Phoebus, calm content, 18 Strength unimpaird, a mind entire, 19 Old age without dishonour spent, 20 Nor unbefriended by the lyre!
1.32	1 Poscimur. si quid vacui sub umbra 2 lusimus tecum, quod et hunc in annum 3 vivat et pluris, age dic Latinum, 4 barbite, carmen, 5 Lesbio primum modulate civi, 6 qui ferox bello tamen, inter arma 7 sive iactatam religarat udo 8 litore navim, 9 Liberum et Musas Veneremque et illi 10 semper haerentem puerum canebat 11 et Lycum nigris oculis nigroque 12 crine decorum. 13 o decus Phoebi et dapibus supremi 14 grata testudo Iovis, o laborum 15 dulce lenimen, mihi cumque salve 16 rite vocanti!	1 They call;—if aught in shady dell 2 We twain have warbled, to remain 3 Long months or years, now breathe, my shell, 4 A Roman strain, 5 Thou, strung by Lesbos' minstrel hand, 6 The bard, who 'mid the clash of steel, 7 Or haply mooring to the strand 8 His batter'd keel, 9 Of Bacchus and the Muses sung, 10 And Cupid, still at Venus' side, 11 And Lycus, beautiful and young, 12 Dark-hair'd, dark-eyed. 13 O sweetest lyre, to Phoebus dear, 14 Delight of Jove's high festival, 15 Blest balm in trouble, hail and hear 16 Whene'er I call!
1.33	1 Albi, ne doleas plus nimio memor 2 inmitis Glycerae neu miserabilis 3 decantes elegos, cur tibi iunior 4 laesa praeniteat fide. 5 insignem tenui fronte Lycorida 6 Cyri torret amor, Cyrus in asperam 7 declinat Pholoen: sed prius Apulis 8 iungentur capreae lupis 9 quam turpi Pholoe peccet adultero. 10 sic visum Veneri, cui placet inpares 11 formas atque animos sub iuga aenea 12 saevo mittere cum ioco. 13 ipsum me melior cum peteret Venus, 14 grata detinuit compede Myrtale 15 libertina, fretis acrior Hadriae 16 curvantis Calabros sinus.	1 What, Albius! why this passionate despair 2 For cruel Glycera? why melt your voice 3 In dolorous strains, because the perjured fair 4 Has made a younger choice? 5 See, narrow-brow'd Lycoris, how she glows 6 For Cyrus! Cyrus turns away his head 7 To Pholoe's frown; but sooner gentle roes 8 Apulian wolves shall wed, 9 Than Pholoe to so mean a conqueror strike: 10 So Venus wills it; 'neath her brazen yoke 11 She loves to couple forms and minds unlike, 12 All for a heartless joke. 13 For me sweet Love had forged a milder spell; 14 But Myrtale still kept me her fond slave, 15 More stormy she than the tempestuous swell 16 That crests Calabria's wave.
1.34	1 Parcus deorum cultor et infrequens, 2 insanientis dum sapientiae 3 consultus erro, nunc retrorsum 4 vela dare atque iterare cursus 5 cogor relictos: namque Diespiter, 6 igni corusco nubila dividens 7 plerumque, per purum tonantis 8 egit equos volucremque currum, 9 quo bruta tellus et vaga flumina,	1 My prayers were scant, my offerings few, 2 While witless wisdom fool'd my mind; 3 But now I trim my sails anew, 4 And trace the course I left behind. 5 For lo! the sire of heaven on high, 6 By whose fierce bolts the clouds are riven, 7 Today through an unclouded sky 8 His thundering steeds and car has driven. 9 E'en now dull earth and

	10 quo Styx et invisi horrida Taenari 11 sedes Atlanteusque finis 12 concutitur. valet ima summis 13 mutare et insignem attenuat deus 14 obscura promens; hinc apicem rapax: 15 Fortuna cum stridore acuto 16 sustulit, hic posuisse gaudet.	wandering floods, 10 And Atlas' limitary range, 11 And Styx, and Taenarus' dark abodes 12 Are reeling. He can lowliest change 13 And loftiest; bring the mighty down 14 And lift the weak; with whirring flight 15 Comes Fortune, plucks the monarch's crown, 16 And decks therewith some meaner wight.
1.35	1 O diva, gratum quae regis Antium, 2 praesens vel imo tollere de gradu 3 mortale corpus vel superbos 4 vertere funeribus triumphos: 5 te pauper ambit sollicita prece 6 ruris colonus, te dominam aequoris 7 quicumque Bithyna lacessit 8 Carpathium pelagus carina; 9 te Dacus asper, te profugi Scythae 10 urbesque gentesque et Latium ferox 11 regumque matres barbarorum et 12 purpurei metuunt tyranni, 13 iniurioso ne pede proruas 14 stantem columnam neu populus frequens 15 ad arma, cessantis ad arma 16 concitet imperiumque frangat; 17 te semper anteit saeva Necessitas, 18 clavos trabalis et cuneos manu 19 gestans aena nec severus 20 uncus abest liquidumque plumbum; 21 te Spes et albo rara Fides colit 22 velata panno nec comitem abnegat, 23 utcumque mutata potentis 24 veste domos inimica linquis, 25 at volgus infidum et meretrix retro 26 periura cedit, diffugiunt cadis 27 cum faece siccatis amici, 28 ferre iugum pariter dolosi: 29 serves iturum Caesarem in ultimos 30 orbis Britannos et iuvenum recens 31 examen Eois timendum 32 partibus Oceanoque rubro. 33 heu heu, cicatricum et sceleris pudet 34 fratrumque. quid nos dura refugimus 35 aetas? quid intactum nefasti 36 liquimus? unde manum iuventus 37 metu deorum continuit? quibus 38 pepercit aris? o utinam nova 39 incude diffingas retusum in 40 Massagetas Arabasque ferrum.	1 Lady of Antium, grave and stern! 2 O Goddess, who canst lift the low 3 To high estate, and sudden turn 4 A triumph to a funeral show! 5 Thee the poor hind that tills the soil 6 Implores; their queen they own in thee, 7 Who in Bithynian vessel toil 8 Amid the vex'd Carpathian sea. 9 Thee Dacians fierce, and Scythian hordes, 10 Peoples and towns, and Rome, their head, 11 And mothers of barbarian lords, 12 And tyrants in their purple dread, 13 Lest, spurn'd by thee in scorn, should fall 14 The state's tall prop, lest crowds on fire 15 To arms, to arms! the loiterers call, 16 And thrones be tumbled in the mire. 17 Necessity precedes thee still 18 With hard fierce eyes and heavy tramp: 19 Her hand the nails and wedges fill, 20 The molten lead and stubborn clamp. 21 Hope, precious Truth in garb of white, 22 Attend thee still, nor quit thy side 23 When with changed robes thou tak'st thy flight 24 In anger from the homes of pride. 25 Then the false herd, the faithless fair, 26 Start backward; when the wine runs dry. 27 The jocund guests, too light to bear 28 An equal yoke, asunder fly. 29 O shield our Caesar as he goes 30 To furthest Britain, and his band, 31 Rome's harvest! Send on Eastern foes 32 Their fear, and on the Red Sea strand! 33 O wounds that scarce have ceased to run! 34 O brother's blood! O iron time! 35 What horror have we left undone? 36 Has conscience shrunk from aught of crime? 37 What shrine has rapine held in awe? 38 What altar spared? O haste and beat 39 The blunted steel we yet may draw 40 On Arab and on Massagete!
1.36	1 Et ture et fidibus iuvat 2 placare et vituli sanguine debito 3 custodes Numidae deos, 4 qui nunc Hesperia sospes ab ultima 5 caris multa sodalibus, 6 nulli plura tamen dividet oscula	1 Bid the lyre and cittern play; 2 Enkindle incense, shed the victim's gore; 3 Heaven has watch'd o'er Numida, 4 And brings him safe from far Hispania's shore. 5 Now, returning, he bestows 6 On each dear comrade all the

	7 quam dulci Lamiae, memor 8 actae non alio rege puertiae 9 mutataeque simul togae. 10 Cressa ne careat pulcra dies nota 11 neu promptae modus amphorae 12 neu morem in Salium sit requies pedum 13 neu multi Damalis meri 14 Bassum Threicia vincat amystide 15 neu desint epulis rosae 16 neu vivax apium neu breve lilium. 17 omnes in Damalin putris 18 deponent oculos nec Damalis novo 19 divelletur adultero 20 lascivis hederis ambitiosior.	love he can; 7 But to Lamia most he owes, 8 By whose sweet side he grew from boy to man. 9 Note we in our calendar 10 This festal day with whitest mark from Crete: 11 Let it flow, the old wine-jar, 12 And ply to Salian time your restless feet. 13 Damalis tosses off her wine, 14 But Bassus sure must prove her match tonight. 15 Give us roses all to twine, 16 And parsley green, and lilies deathly white. 17 Every melting eye will rest 18 On Damalis' lovely face; but none may part 19 Damalis from our new-found guest; 20 She clings, and clings, like ivy, round his heart.
1.37	1 Nunc est bibendum, nunc pede libero 2 pulsanda tellus; nunc Saliaribus 3 ornare pulvinar deorum 4 tempus erat dapibus, sodales. 5 antehac nefas depromere Caecubum 6 cellis avitis, dum Capitolio 7 regina dementis ruinas, 8 funus et imperio parabat 9 contaminato cum grege turpium 10 morbo virorum quidlibet inpotens 11 sperare fortunaque dulci 12 ebria. sed minuit furorem 13 vix una sospes navis ab ignibus 14 mentemque lymphatam Mareotico 15 redegit in veros timores 16 Caesar ab Italia volantem 17 remis adurgens, accipiter velut 18 mollis columbas aut leporem citus 19 venator in campis nivalis 20 Haemoniae, daret ut catenis 21 fatale monstrum. quae generosius 22 perire quaerens nec muliebriter 23 expavit ensem nec latentis 24 classe cita reparavit oras. 25 ausa et iacentem visere regiam 26 voltu sereno, fortis et asperas 27 tractare serpentes, ut atrum 28 corpore conbiberet venenum, 29 deliberata morte ferocior; 30 saevis Liburnis scilicet invidens 31 privata deduci superbo, 32 non humilis mulier, triumpho.	1 Now drink we deep, now featly tread 2 A measure; now before each shrine 3 With Salian feasts the table spread; 4 The time invites us, comrades mine. 5 'Twas shame to broach, before today, 6 The Caecuban, while Egypt's dame 7 Threaten'd our power in dust to lay 8 And wrap the Capitol in flame, 9 Girt with her foul emasculate throng, 10 By Fortune's sweet new wine befool'd, 11 In hope's ungovern'd weakness strong 12 To hope for all; but soon she cool'd, 13 To see one ship from burning 'scape; 14 Great Caesar taught her dizzy brain, 15 Made mad by Mareotic grape, 16 To feel the sobering truth of pain, 17 And gave her chase from Italy, 18 As after doves fierce falcons speed, 19 As hunters 'neath Haemonia's sky 20 Chase the tired hare, so might he lead 21 The fiend enchain'd; she sought to die 22 More nobly, nor with woman's dread 23 Quail'd at the steel, nor timorously 24 In her fleet ships to covert fled. 25 Amid her ruin'd halls she stood 26 Unblench'd, and fearless to the end 27 Grasp'd the fell snakes, that all her blood 28 Might with the cold black venom blend, 29 Death's purpose flushing in her face; 30 Nor to our ships the glory gave, 31 That she, no vulgar dame, should grace 32 A triumph, crownless, and a slave.
1.38	1 Persicos odi, puer, adparatus, 2 displicent nexae philyra coronae, 3 mitte sectari, rosa quo locorum 4 sera moretur. 5 simplici myrto nihil adlabores 6 sedulus curo: neque te ministrum 7 dedecet myrtus neque me sub arta 8 vite bibentem.	1 No Persian cumber, boy, for me; 2 I hate your garlands linden-plaited; 3 Leave winter's rose where on the tree 4 It hangs belated. 5 Wreath me plain myrtle; never think 6 Plain myrtle either's wear unfitting, 7 Yours as you wait, mine as I drink 8 In vine-bower sitting.
2.1	1 Motum ex Metello consule civicum	1 The broils that from Metellus date, 2

	2 bellique causas et vitia et modos 3 ludumque Fortunae gravisque 4 principum amicitias et arma 5 nondum expiatis uncta cruoribus, 6 periculosae plenum opus aleae, 7 tractas et incedis per ignis 8 suppositos cineri doloso. 9 paulum severae musa tragoediae 10 desit theatris: mox ubi publicas 11 res ordinaris, grande munus 12 Cecropio repetes cothurno, 13 insigne maestis praesidium reis 14 et consulenti, Pollio, curiae, 15 cui laurus aeternos honores 16 Delmatico peperit triumpho. 17 iam nunc minaci murmure cornuum 18 perstringis auris, iam litui strepunt, 19 iam fulgor armorum fugacis 20 terret equos equitumque voltus. 21 audire magnos iam videor duces, 22 non indecoro pulvere sordidos 23 et cuncta terrarum subacta 24 praeter atrocem animum Catonis. 25 Iuno et deorum quisquis amicior 26 Afris inulta cesserat inpotens 27 tellure victorum nepotes 28 rettulit inferias Iugurthae. 29 quis non Latino sanguine pinguior 30 campus sepulcris inpia proelia 31 testatur auditumque Medis 32 Hesperiae sonitum ruinae? 33 qui gurges aut quae flumina lugubris 34 ignara belli? quod mare Dauniae 35 non decoloravere caedes? 36 quae caret ora cruore nostro? 37 sed ne relictis, Musa procax, iocis 38 Ceae retractes munera neniae, 39 mecum Dionaeo sub antro 40 quaere modos leviore plectro.	The secret springs, the dark intrigues, 3 The freaks of Fortune, and the great 4 Confederate in disastrous leagues, 5 And arms with uncleansed slaughter red, 6 A work of danger and distrust, 7 You treat, as one on fire should tread 8 Scarce hid by treacherous ashen crust. 9 Let Tragedy's stern muse be mute 10 Awhile; and when your order'd page 11 Has told Rome's tale, that buskin'd foot 12 Again shall mount the Attic stage, 13 Pollio, the pale defendant's shield, 14 In deep debate the senate's stay, 15 The hero of Dalmatic field 16 By Triumph crown'd with deathless bay. 17 E'en now with trumpet's threatening blare 18 You thrill our ears; the clarion brays; 19 The lightnings of the armour scare 20 The steed, and daunt the rider's gaze. 21 Methinks I hear of leaders proud 22 With no uncomely dust distain'd, 23 And all the world by conquest bow'd, 24 And only Cato's soul unchain'd. 25 Yes, Juno and the powers on high 26 That left their Afric to its doom, 27 Have led the victors' progeny 28 As victims to Jugurtha's tomb. 29 What field, by Latian blood-drops fed, 30 Proclaims not the unnatural deeds 31 It buries, and the earthquake dread 32 Whose distant thunder shook the Medes? 33 What gulf, what river has not seen 34 Those sights of sorrow? nay, what sea 35 Has Daunian carnage yet left green? 36 What coast from Roman blood is free? 37 But pause, gay Muse, nor leave your play 38 Another Cean dirge to sing; 39 With me to Venus' bower away, 40 And there attune a lighter string.
2.2	1 Nullus argento color est avaris 2 abdito terris, inimice lamnae 3 Crispe Sallusti, nisi temperato 4 splendeat usu. 5 vivet extento Proculeius aevo, 6 notus in fratres animi paterni: 7 illum aget penna metuente solvi 8 Fama superstes. 9 latius regnes avidum domando 10 spiritum quam si Libyam remotis 11 Gadibus iungas et uterque Poenus 12 serviat uni. 13 crescit indulgens sibi dirus hydrops 14 nec sitim pellit, nisi causa morbi 15 fugerit venis et aquosus albo 16 corpore languor. 17 redditum Cyri solio Phraaten 18 dissidens plebi numero beatorum	1 The silver, Sallust, shows not fair 2 While buried in the greedy mine: 3 You love it not till moderate wear 4 Have given it shine. 5 Honour to Proculeius! he 6 To brethren play'd a father's part; 7 Fame shall embalm through years to be 8 That noble heart. 9 Who curbs a greedy soul may boast 10 More power than if his broad-based throne 11 Bridged Libya's sea, and either coast 12 Were all his own. 13 Indulgence bids the dropsy grow; 14 Who fain would quench the palate's flame 15 Must rescue from the watery foe 16 The pale weak frame. 17 Phraates, throned where Cyrus sate, 18 May count for blest with vulgar herds, 19 But not with Virtue; soon or late 20 From lying

	19 eximit Virtus populumque falsis 20 dedocet uti 21 vocibus, regnum et diadema tutum 22 deferens uni propriamque laurum 23 quisquis ingentis oculo inretorto 24 spectat acervos.	words 21 She weans men's lips; for him she keeps 22 The crown, the purple, and the bays, 23 Who dares to look on treasure-heaps 24 With unblench'd gaze.
2.3	1 Aequam memento rebus in arduis 2 servare mentem, non secus in bonis 3 ab insolenti temperatam 4 laetitia, moriture Delli, 5 seu maestus omni tempore vixeris 6 seu te in remoto gramine per dies 7 festos reclinatum bearis 8 interiore nota Falerni. 9 quo pinus ingens albaque populus 10 umbram hospitalem consociare amant 11 ramis? quid obliquo laborat 12 lympha fugax trepidare rivo? 13 huc vina et unguenta et nimium brevis 14 flores amoenae ferre iube rosae, 15 dum res et aetas et sororum 16 fila trium patiuntur atra. 17 cedes coemptis saltibus et domo 18 villaque, flavos quam Tiberis lavit, 19 cedes et exstructis in altum 20 divitiis potietur heres. 21 divesne prisco natus ab Inacho 22 nil interest an pauper et infima 23 de gente sub divo moreris: 24 victima nil miserantis Orci. 25 omnes eodem cogimur, omnium 26 versatur urna serius ocius 27 sors exitura et nos in aeternum 28 exilium inpositura cumbae.	1 An equal mind, when storms o'ercloud, 2 Maintain, nor 'neath a brighter sky 3 Let pleasure make your heart too proud, 4 O Dellius, Dellius! sure te die, 5 Whether in gloom you spend each year, 6 Or through long holydays at ease 7 In grassy nook your spirit cheer 8 With old Falernian vintages, 9 Where poplar pale, and pine-tree high 10 Their hospitable shadows spread 11 Entwined, and panting waters try 12 To hurry down their zigzag bed. 13 Bring wine and scents, and roses' bloom, 14 Too brief, alas! to that sweet place; 15 While life, and fortune, and the loom 16 Of the Three Sisters yield you grace. 17 Soon must you leave the woods you buy, 18 Your villa, wash'd by Tiber's flow, 19 Leave,—and your treasures, heap'd so high, 20 Your reckless heir will level low. 21 Whether from Argos' founder born 22 In wealth you lived beneath the sun, 23 Or nursed in beggary and scorn, 24 You fall to Death, who pities none. 25 One way all travel; the dark urn 26 Shakes each man's lot, that soon or late 27 Will force him, hopeless of return, 28 On board the exile-ship of Fate.
2.4	1 Ne sit ancillae tibi amor pudori, 2 Xanthia Phoceu: prius insolentem 3 serva Briseis niveo colore 4 movit Achillem, 5 movit Aiacem Telamone natum 6 forma captivae dominum Tecmessae, 7 arsit Atrides medio in triumpho 8 virgine rapta, 9 barbarae postquam cecidere turmae 10 Thessalo victore et ademptus Hector 11 tradidit fessis leviora tolli 12 Pergama Grais. 13 nescias an te generum beati 14 Phyllidis flavae decorent parentes: 15 regium certe genus, et penatis 16 maeret iniquos. 17 crede non illam tibi de scelesta 18 plebe dilectam neque sic fidelem, 19 sic lucro aversam potuisse nasci 20 matre pudenda. 21 bracchia et voltum teretesque suras	1 Why, Xanthias, blush to own you love 2 Your slave? Briseis, long ago, 3 A captive, could Achilles move 4 With breast of snow. 5 Tecmessa's charms enslaved her lord, 6 Stout Ajax, heir of Telamon; 7 Atrides, in his pride, adored 8 The maid he won, 9 When Troy to Thessaly gave way, 10 And Hector's all too quick decease 11 Made Pergamus an easier prey 12 To wearied Greece. 13 What if, as auburn Phyllis' mate, 14 You graft yourself on regal stem? 15 Oh yes! be sure her sires were great; 16 She weeps for them. 17 Believe me, from no rascal scum 18 Your charmer sprang; so true a flame, 19 Such hate of greed, could never come 20 From vulgar dame. 21 With honest fervour I commend 22 Those lips, those eyes; you need not fear 23 A rival, hurrying on to end 24 His fortieth year.

	22 integer laudo: fuge suspicari, 23 cuius octavum trepidavit aetas 24 claudere lustrum.
2.5	1 Nondum subacta ferre iugum valet 2 cervice, nondum munia conparis 3 aequare nec tauri ruentis 4 in venerem tolerare pondus; 5 circa virentis est animus tuae 6 campos iuvencae nunc fluviis gravem 7 solantis aestum, nunc in udo 8 ludere cum vitulis salicto 9 praegestientis. tolle cupidinem 10 inmitis uvae: iam tibi lividos 11 distinguet autumnus racemos 12 purpureo varius colore. 13 iam te sequetur (currit enim ferox 14 aetas et illi quos tibi dempserit 15 adponet annos), iam proterva 16 fronte petet Lalage maritum 17 dilecta, quantum non Pholoe fugax, 18 non Chloris albo sic umero nitens 19 ut pura nocturno renidet 20 luna mari, Cnidiusve Gyges, 21 quem si puellarum insereres choro, 22 mire sagacis falleret hospites 23 discrimen obscurum solutis 24 crinibus ambiguoque voltu.
2.6	1 Septimi, Gadis aditure mecum et 2 Cantabrum indoctum iuga ferre nostra et 3 barbaras Syrtis, ubi Maura semper 4 aestuat unda: 5 Tibur Argeo positum colono 6 sit meae sedes utinam senectae, 7 sit modus lasso maris et viarum 8 militiaeque. 9 unde si Parcae prohibent iniquae, 10 dulce pellitis ovibus Galaesi 11 flumen et regnata petam Laconi 12 rura Phalantho 13 ille terrarum mihi praeter omnis 14 angulus ridet, ubi non Hymetto 15 mella decedunt viridique certat 16 baca Venafro, 17 ver ubi longum tepidasque praebet 18 Iuppiter brumas et amicus Aulon 19 fertili Baccho minimum Falernis 20 invidet uvis; 21 ille te mecum locus et beatae 22 postulant arces: ibi tu calentem 23 debita sparges lacrima favillam 24 vatis amici.	1 Septimius, who with me would brave 2 Far Gades, and Cantabrian land 3 Untamed by Rome, and Moorish wave 4 That whirls the sand; 5 Fair Tibur, town of Argive kings, 6 There would I end my days serene, 7 At rest from seas and travellings, 8 And service seen. 9 Should angry Fate those wishes foil, 10 Then let me seek Galesus, sweet 11 To skin-clad sheep, and that rich soil, 12 The Spartan's seat. 13 O, what can match the green recess, 14 Whose honey not to Hybla yields, 15 Whose olives vie with those that bless 16 Venafrum's fields? 17 Long springs, mild winters glad that spot 18 By Jove's good grace, and Aulon, dear 19 To fruitful Bacchus, envies not 20 Falernian cheer. 21 That spot, those happy heights desire 22 Our sojourn; there, when life shall end, 23 Your tear shall dew my yet warm pyre, 24 Your bard and friend.
2.7	1 O saepe mecum tempus in ultimum 2 deducte Bruto militiae duce, 3 quis te redonavit Quiritem 4 dis patriis Italoque caelo, 5 Pompei, meorum prime sodalium,	1 O, oft with me in troublous time 2 Involved, when Brutus warr'd in Greece, 3 Who gives you back to your own clime 4 And your own gods, a man of peace, 5 Pompey, the earliest friend I

	6 cum quo morantem saepe diem mero 7 fregi, coronatus nitentis 8 malobathro Syrio capillos? 9 tecum Philippos et celerem fugam 10 sensi relicta non bene parmula, 11 cum fracta virtus, et minaces 12 turpe solum tetigere mento; 13 sed me per hostis Mercurius celer 14 denso paventem sustulit aere, 15 te rursus in bellum resorbens 16 unda fretis tulit aestuosis. 17 ergo obligatam redde Iovi dapem 18 longaque fessum militia latus 19 depone sub lauru mea nec 20 parce cadis tibi destinatis. 21 oblivioso levia Massico 22 ciboria exple, funde capacibus 23 unguenta de conchis. quis udo 24 deproperare apio coronas 25 curatve myrto? quem Venus arbitrum 26 dicet bibendi? non ego sanius 27 bacchabor Edonis: recepto 28 dulce mihi furere est amico.	knew, 6 With whom I oft cut short the hours 7 With wine, my hair bright bathed in dew 8 Of Syrian oils, and wreathed with flowers? 9 With you I shared Philippi's rout, 10 Unseemly parted from my shield, 11 When Valour fell, and warriors stout 12 Were tumbled on the inglorious field: 13 But I was saved by Mercury, 14 Wrapp'd in thick mist, yet trembling sore, 15 While you to that tempestuous sea 16 Were swept by battle's tide once more. 17 Come, pay to Jove the feast you owe; 18 Lay down those limbs, with warfare spent, 19 Beneath my laurel; nor be slow 20 To drain my cask; for you 'twas meant. 21 Lethe's true draught is Massic wine; 22 Fill high the goblet; pour out free 23 Rich streams of unguent. Who will twine 24 The hasty wreath from myrtle-tree 25 Or parsley? Whom will Venus seat 26 Chairman of cups? Are Bacchants sane? 27 Then I'll be sober. O, 'tis sweet 28 To fool, when friends come home again!
2.8	1 Vlla si iuris tibi peierati 2 poena, Barine, nocuisset umquam, 3 dente si nigro fieres vel uno 4 turpior ungui, 5 crederem: sed tu simul obligasti 6 perfidum votis caput, enitescis 7 pulchrior multo iuvenumque prodis 8 publica cura. 9 expedit matris cineres opertos 10 fallere et toto taciturna noctis 11 signa cum caelo gelidaque divos 12 morte carentis 13 ridet hoc, inquam, Venus ipsa, rident 14 simplices Nymphae, ferus et Cupido 15 semper ardentis acuens sagittas 16 cote cruenta. 17 adde quod pubes tibi crescit omnis, 18 servitus crescit nova nec priores 19 inpiae tectum dominae relinquunt, 20 saepe minati. 21 te suis matres metuunt iuvencis, 22 te senes parci miseraeque nuper 23 virgines nuptae, tua ne retardet 24 aura maritos.	1 Had chastisement for perjured truth, 2 Barine, mark'd you with a curse— 3 Did one wry nail, or one black tooth, 4 But make you worse— 5 I'd trust you; but, when plighted lies 6 Have pledged you deepest, lovelier far 7 You sparkle forth, of all young eyes 8 The ruling star. 9 'Tis gain to mock your mother's bones, 10 And night's still signs, and all the sky, 11 And gods, that on their glorious thrones 12 Chill Death defy. 13 Ay, Venus smiles; the pure nymphs smile, 14 And Cupid, tyrant-lord of hearts, 15 Sharpening on bloody stone the while 16 His fiery darts. 17 New captives fill the nets you weave; 18 New slaves are bred; and those before, 19 Though oft they threaten, never leave 20 Your godless door. 21 The mother dreads you for her son, 22 The thrifty sire, the new-wed bride, 23 Lest, lured by you, her precious one 24 Should leave her side.
2.9	1 Non semper imbres nubibus hispidos 2 manant in agros aut mare Caspium 3 vexant inaequales procellae 4 usque nec Armeniis in oris, 5 amice Valgi, stat glacies iners 6 mensis per omnis aut Aquilonibus 7 querceta Gargani laborant	1 The rain, it rains not every day 2 On the soak'd meads; the Caspian main 3 Not always feels the unequal sway 4 Of storms, nor on Armenia's plain, 5 Dear Valgius, lies the cold dull snow 6 Through all the year; nor northwinds keen 7 Upon Garganian oakwoods

	8 et foliis viduantur orni: 9 tu semper urges flebilibus modis 10 Mysten ademptum nec tibi Vespero 11 surgente decedunt amores 12 nec rapidum fugiente solem. 13 at non ter aevo functus amabilem 14 ploravit omnis Antilochum senex 15 annos nec inpubem parentes 16 Troilon aut Phrygiae sorores 17 flevere semper. desine mollium 18 tandem querellarum et potius nova 19 cantemus Augusti tropaea 20 Caesaris et rigidum Niphaten 21 Medumque flumen gentibus additum 22 victis minores volvere vertices 23 intraque praescriptum Gelonos 24 exiguis equitare campis.	blow, 8 And strip the ashes of their green. 9 You still with tearful tones pursue 10 Your lost, lost Mystes; Hesper sees 11 Your passion when he brings the dew, 12 And when before the sun he flees. 13 Yet not for loved Antilochus 14 Grey Nestor wasted all his years 15 In grief; nor o'er young Troilus 16 His parents' and his sisters' tears 17 For ever flow'd. At length have done 18 With these soft sorrows; rather tell 19 Of Caesar's trophies newly won, 20 And hoar Niphates' icy fell, 21 And Medus' flood, 'mid conquer'd tribes 22 Rolling a less presumptuous tide, 23 And Scythians taught, as Rome prescribes, 24 Henceforth o'er narrower steppes to ride.
2.10	1 Rectius vives, Licini, neque altum 2 semper urgendo neque, dum procellas 3 cautus horrescis, nimium premendo 4 litus iniquum. 5 auream quisquis mediocritatem 6 diligit, tutus caret obsoleti 7 sordibus tecti, caret invidenda 8 sobrius aula. 9 saepius ventis agitatur ingens 10 pinus et celsae graviore casu 11 decidunt turres feriuntque summos 12 fulgura montis 13 sperat infestis, metuit secundis 14 alteram sortem bene praeparatum 15 pectus. informis hiemes reducit 16 Iuppiter, idem 17 submovet. non, si male nunc, et olim 18 sic erit: quondam cithara tacentem 19 suscitat Musam neque semper arcum 20 tendit Apollo. 21 rebus angustis animosus atque 22 fortis adpare: sapienter idem 23 contrahes vento nimium secundo 24 turgida vela.	1 Licinius, trust a seaman's lore: 2 Steer not too boldly to the deep, 3 Nor, fearing storms, by treacherous shore 4 Too closely creep. 5 Who makes the golden mean his guide, 6 Shuns miser's cabin, foul and dark, 7 Shuns gilded roofs, where pomp and pride 8 Are envy's mark. 9 With fiercer blasts the pine's dim height 10 Is rock'd; proud towers with heavier fall 11 Crash to the ground; and thunders smite 12 The mountains tall. 13 In sadness hope, in gladness fear 14 'Gainst coming change will fortify 15 Your breast. The storms that Jupiter 16 Sweeps o'er the sky 17 He chases. Why should rain today 18 Bring rain tomorrow? Python's foe 19 Is pleased sometimes his lyre to play, 20 Nor bends his bow. 21 Be brave in trouble; meet distress 22 With dauntless front; but when the gale 23 Too prosperous blows, be wise no less, 24 And shorten sail.
2.11	1 Quid bellicosus Cantaber et Scythes, 2 Hirpine Quinti, cogitet Hadria 3 divisus obiecto, remittas 4 quaerere nec trepides in usum 5 poscentis aevi pauca: fugit retro 6 levis iuventas et decor arida 7 pellente lascivos amores 8 canitie facilemque somnum. 9 non semper idem floribus est honor 10 vernis neque uno luna rubens nitet 11 voltu: quid aeternis minorem 12 consiliis animum fatigas? 13 cur non sub alta vel platano vel hac	1 O ask not what those sons of war, 2 Cantabrian, Scythian, each intend, 3 Disjoin'd from us by Hadria's bar, 4 Nor puzzle, Quintius, how to spend 5 A life so simple. Youth removes, 6 And Beauty too; and hoar Decay 7 Drives out the wanton tribe of Loves 8 And Sleep, that came or night or day. 9 The sweet spring-flowers not always keep 10 Their bloom, nor moonlight shines the same 11 Each evening. Why with thoughts too deep 12 O'ertask a mind of mortal frame? 13 Why not, just thrown at 14 pinu iacentes sic temere et rosa 15 canos odorati capillos, 16 dum licet, Assyriaque nardo 17 potamus uncti? dissipat Euhius 18 curas edacis. quis puer ocius 19 restinguet ardentis Falerni 20 pocula praetereunte lympha? 21 quis devium scortum eliciet domo 22 Lyden? eburna, dic age, cum lyra 23 maturet, in comptum Lacaenae 24 more comam religata nodum.	careless ease 14 'Neath plane or pine, our locks of grey 15 Perfumed with Syrian essences 16 And wreathed with roses, while we may, 17 Lie drinking? Bacchus puts to shame 18 The cares that waste us. Where's the slave 19 To quench the fierce Falernian's flame 20 With water from the passing wave? 21 Who'll coax coy Lyde from her home? 22 Go, bid her take her ivory lyre, 23 The runaway, and haste to come, 24 Her wild hair bound with Spartan tire.

2.12	1 Nolis longa ferae bella Numantiae 2 nec durum Hannibalem nec Siculum mare 3 Poeno purpureum sanguine mollibus 4 aptari citharae modis 5 nec saevos Lapithas et nimium mero 6 Hylaeum domitosque Herculea manu 7 Telluris iuvenes, unde periculum 8 fulgens contremuit domus 9 Saturni veteris: tuque pedestribus 10 dices historiis proelia Caesaris, 11 Maecenas, melius ductaque per vias 12 regum colla minacium. 13 me dulcis dominae Musa Licymniae 14 cantus, me voluit dicere lucidum 15 fulgentis oculos et bene mutuis 16 fidum pectus amoribus; 17 quam nec ferre pedem dedecuit choris 18 nec certare ioco nec dare bracchia 19 ludentem nitidis virginibus sacro 20 Dianae celebris die. 21 num tu quae tenuit dives Achaemenes 22 aut pinguis Phrygiae Mygdonias opes 23 permutare velis crine Licymniae 24 plenas aut Arabum domos, 25 cum flagrantia detorquet ad oscula 26 cervicem aut facili saevitia negat 27 quae poscente magis gaudeat eripi, 28 interdum rapere occupet?	1 The weary war where fierce Numantia bled, 2 Fell Hannibal, the swoln Sicilian main 3 Purpled with Punic blood—not mine to wed 4 These to the lyre's soft strain, 5 Nor cruel Lapithae, nor, mad with wine, 6 Centaurs, nor, by Herculean arm o'ercome, 7 The earth-born youth, whose terrors dimm'd the shine 8 Of the resplendent dome 9 Of ancient Saturn. You, Maecenas, best 10 In pictured prose of Caesar's warrior feats 11 Will tell, and captive kings with haughty crest 12 Led through the Roman streets. 13 On me the Muse has laid her charge to tell 14 Of your Licymnia's voice, the lustrous hue 15 Of her bright eye, her heart that beats so well 16 To mutual passion true: 17 How nought she does but lends her added grace, 18 Whether she dance, or join in bantering play, 19 Or with soft arms the maiden choir embrace 20 On great Diana's day. 21 Say, would you change for all the wealth possest 22 By rich Achaemenes or Phrygia's heir, 23 Or the full stores of Araby the blest, 24 One lock of her dear hair, 25 While to your burning lips she bends her neck, 26 Or with kind cruelty denies the due 27 She means you not to beg for, but to take, 28 Or snatches it from you?
2.13	1 Ille et nefasto te posuit die 2 quicumque primum, et sacrilega manu 3 produxit, arbos, in nepotum 4 perniciem opprobriumque pagi; 5 illum et parentis crediderim sui 6 fregisse cervicem et penetralia 7 sparsisse nocturno cruore 8 hospitis; ille venena Colcha 9 et quidquid usquam concipitur nefas 10 tractavit, agro qui statuit meo 11 te, triste lignum, te, caducum 12 in domini caput inmerentis	1 Black day he chose for planting thee, 2 Accurst he rear'd thee from the ground, 3 The bane of children yet to be, 4 The scandal of the village round. 5 His father's throat the monster press'd 6 Beside, and on his hearthstone spilt, 7 I ween, the blood of midnight guest; 8 Black Colchian drugs, whate'er of guilt 9 Is hatch'd on earth, he dealt in all— 10 Who planted in my rural stead 11 Thee, fatal wood, thee, sure to fall 12 Upon thy blameless master's head. 13 The dangers of the hour! no thought 14

	13 quid quisque vitet, numquam homini satis 14 cautum est in horas: navita Bosporum 15 Poenus perhorrescit neque ultra 16 caeca timet aliunde fata, 17 miles sagittas et celerem fugam 18 Parthi, catenas Parthus et Italum 19 robur; sed inprovisa leti 20 vis rapuit rapietque gentis. 21 quam paene furvae regna Proserpinae 22 et iudicantem vidimus Aeacum 23 sedesque discriptas piorum et 24 Aeoliis fidibus querentem 25 Sappho puellis de popularibus 26 et te sonantem plenius aureo, 27 Alcaee, plectro dura navis, 28 dura fugae mala, dura belli. 29 utrumque sacro digna silentio 30 mirantur umbrae dicere, sed magis 31 pugnas et exactos tyrannos 32 densum umeris bibit aure volgus. 33 quid mirum, ubi illis carminibus stupens 34 demittit atras belua centiceps 35 auris et intorti capillis 36 Eumenidum recreantur angues? 37 quin et Prometheus et Pelopis parens 38 dulci laborem decipitur sono 39 nec curat Orion leones 40 aut timidos agitare lyncas	We give them; Punic seaman's fear 15 Is all of Bosporus, nor aught 16 Reeks he of pitfalls otherwhere; 17 The soldier fears the mask'd retreat 18 Of Parthia; Parthia dreads the thrall 19 Of Rome; but Death with noiseless feet 20 Has stolen and will steal on all. 21 How near dark Pluto's court I stood, 22 And Aeacus' judicial throne, 23 The blest seclusion of the good, 24 And Sappho, with sweet lyric moan 25 Bewailing her ungentle sex, 26 And thee, Alcaeus, louder far 27 Chanting thy tale of woful wrecks, 28 Of woful exile, woful war! 29 In sacred awe the silent dead 30 Attend on each: but when the song 31 Of combat tells and tyrants fled, 32 Keen ears, press'd shoulders, closer throng. 33 What marvel, when at those sweet airs 34 The hundred-headed beast spell-bound 35 Each black ear droops, and Furies' hairs 36 Uncoil their serpents at the sound? 37 Prometheus too and Pelops' sire 38 In listening lose the sense of woe; 39 Orion hearkens to the lyre, 40 And lets the lynx and lion go.
2.14	1 Eheu fugaces, Postume, Postume, 2 labuntur anni nec pietas moram 3 rugis et instanti senectae 4 adferet indomitaeque morti, 5 non, si trecenis quotquot eunt dies, 6 amice, places inlacrimabilem 7 Plutona tauris, qui ter amplum 8 Geryonen Tityonque tristi 9 conpescit unda, scilicet omnibus 10 quicumque terrae munere vescimur 11 enaviganda, sive reges 12 sive inopes erimus coloni. 13 frustra cruento Marte carebimus 14 fractisque rauci fluctibus Hadriae, 15 frustra per autumnos nocentem 16 corporibus metuemus Austrum: 17 visendus ater flumine languido 18 Cocytos errans et Danai genus 19 infame damnatusque longi 20 Sisyphus Aeolides laboris. 21 linquenda tellus et domus et placens 22 uxor neque harum quas colis arborum 23 te praeter invisas cupressos 24 ulla brevem dominum sequetur.	1 Ah, Postumus! they fleet away, 2 Our years, nor piety one hour 3 Can win from wrinkles and decay, 4 And Death's indomitable power; 5 Not though three hundred bullocks flame 6 Each year, to soothe the tearless king 7 Who holds huge Geryon's triple frame 8 And Tityos in his watery ring, 9 That circling flood, which all must stem, 10 Who eat the fruits that Nature yields, 11 Wearers of haughtiest diadem, 12 Or humblest tillers of the fields. 13 In vain we shun war's contact red 14 Or storm-tost spray of Hadrian main: 15 In vain, the season through, we dread 16 For our frail lives Scirocco's bane. 17 Cocytus' black and stagnant ooze 18 Must welcome you, and Danaus' seed 19 Ill-famed, and ancient Sisyphus 20 To never-ending toil decreed. 21 Your land, your house, your lovely bride 22 Must lose you; of your cherish'd trees 23 None to its fleeting master's side 24 Will cleave, but those sad cypresses. 25 Your heir, a larger soul, will drain 26

	25 absumet heres Caecuba dignior 26 servata centum clavibus et mero 27 tinguet pavimentum superbo, 28 pontificum potiore cenis.	The hundred-padlock'd Caecuban, 27 And richer spilth the pavement stain 28 Than e'er at pontiff's supper ran.
2.15	1 Iam pauca aratro iugera regiae 2 moles relinquent, undique latius 3 extenta visentur Lucrino 4 stagna lacu platanusque caelebs 5 evincet ulmos; tum violaria et 6 myrtus et omnis copia narium 7 spargent olivetis odorem 8 fertilibus domino priori, 9 tum spissa ramis laurea fervidos 10 excludet ictus. non ita Romuli 11 praescriptum et intonsi Catonis 12 auspiciis veterumque norma. 13 privatus illis census erat brevis, 14 commune magnum: nulla decempedis 15 metata privatis opacam 16 porticus excipiebat arcton 17 nec fortuitum spernere caespitem 18 leges sinebant, oppida publico 19 sumptu iubentes et deorum 20 templa novo decorare saxo.	1 Few roods of ground the piles we raise 2 Will leave to plough; ponds wider spread 3 Than Lucrine lake will meet the gaze 4 On every side; the plane unwed 5 Will top the elm; the violet-bed, 6 The myrtle, each delicious sweet, 7 On olive-grounds their scent will shed, 8 Where once were fruit-trees yielding meat; 9 Thick bays will screen the midday range 10 Of fiercest suns. Not such the rule 11 Of Romulus, and Cato sage, 12 And all the bearded, good old school. 13 Each Roman's wealth was little worth, 14 His country's much; no colonnade 15 For private pleasance wooed the North 16 With cool “prolixity of shade.” 17 None might the casual sod disdain 18 To roof his home; a town alone, 19 At public charge, a sacred fane 20 Were honour'd with the pomp of stone.
2.16	1 Otium divos rogat in patenti 2 prensus Aegaeo, simul atra nubes 3 condidit lunam neque certa fulgent 4 sidera nautis, 5 otium bello furiosa Thrace, 6 otium Medi pharetra decori, 7 Grosphe, non gemmis neque purpura ve- 8 nale nec auro. 9 non enim gazae neque consularis 10 submovet lictor miseros tumultus 11 mentis et curas laqueata circum 12 tecta volantis 13 vivitur parvo bene cui paternum 14 splendet in mensa tenui salinum 15 nec levis somnos timor aut cupido 16 sordidus aufert. 17 quid brevi fortes iaculamur aevo 18 multa? quid terras alio calentis 19 sole mutamus? patriae quis exsul 20 se quoque fugit? 21 scandit aeratas vitiosa navis 22 Cura nec turmas equitum relinquit 23 ocior cervis et agente nimbos 24 ocior Euro. 25 laetus in praesens animus quod ultra est 26 oderit curare et amara lento 27 temperet risu: nihil est ab omni 28 parte beatum. 29 abstulit clarum cita mors Achillem, 30 longa Tithonum minuit senectus	1 For ease, in wide Aegean caught, 2 The sailor prays, when clouds are hiding 3 The moon, nor shines of starlight aught 4 For seaman's guiding: 5 For ease the Mede, with quiver gay: 6 For ease rude Thrace, in battle cruel: 7 Can purple buy it, Grosphus? Nay, 8 Nor gold, nor jewel. 9 No pomp, no lictor clears the way 10 'Mid rabble-routs of troublous feelings, 11 Nor quells the cares that sport and play 12 Round gilded ceilings. 13 More happy he whose modest board 14 His father's well-worn silver brightens; 15 No fear, nor lust for sordid hoard, 16 His light sleep frightens. 17 Why bend our bows of little span? 18 Why change our homes for regions under 19 Another sun? What exiled man 20 From self can sunder? 21 Care climbs the bark, and trims the sail, 22 Curst fiend! nor troops of horse can 'scape her, 23 More swift than stag, more swift than gale 24 That drives the vapour. 25 Blest in the present, look not forth 26 On ills beyond, but soothe each bitter 27 With slow, calm smile. No suns on earth 28 Unclouded glitter. 29 Achilles' light was quench'd at noon; 30 A long decay Tithonus minish'd; 31 My hours, it may be, yet will run 32 When yours are flnish'd. 33 For you Sicilian heifers low,

	31 et mihi forsan tibi quod negarit 32 porriget hora. 33 te greges centum Siculaeque circum 34 mugiunt vaccae, tibi tollit hinnitum 35 apta quadrigis equa, te bis Afro 36 murice tinctae 37 vestiunt lanae: mihi parva rura et 38 spiritum Graiae tenuem Camenae 39 Parca non mendax dedit et malignum 40 spernere volgus.	34 Bleat countless flocks; for you are neighing 35 Proud coursers; Afric purples glow 36 For your arraying 37 With double dyes; a small domain, 38 The soul that breathed in Grecian harping, 39 My portion these; and high disdain 40 Of ribald carping.
2.17	1 Cur me querelis exanimas tuis? 2 nec dis amicum est nec mihi te prius 3 obire, Maecenas, mearum 4 grande decus columenque rerum. 5 a, te meae si partem animae rapit 6 maturior vis, quid moror altera, 7 nec carus aeque nec superstes 8 integer? ille dies utramque 9 ducet ruinam. non ego perfidum 10 dixi sacramentum ibimus, ibimus, 11 utcumque praecedes, supremum 12 carpere iter comites parati. 13 me nec Chimaerae spiritus igneae 14 nec si resurgat centimanus Gyas 15 divellet umquam: sic potenti 16 Iustitiae placitumque Parcis. 17 seu Libra seu me Scorpios adspicit 18 formidolosus pars violentior 19 natalis horae seu tyrannus 20 Hesperiae Capricornus undae: 21 utrumque nostrum incredibili modo 22 consentit astrum; te Iovis inpio 23 tutela Saturno refulgens 24 eripuit volucrisque Fati 25 tardavit alas, cum populus frequens 26 laetum theatris ter crepuit sonum; 27 me truncus inlapsus cerebro, 28 sustulerat, nisi Faunus ictum 29 dextra levasset, Mercurialium 30 custos virorum. reddere victimas 31 aedemque votivam memento; 32 nos humilem feriemus agnam.	1 Why rend my heart with that sad sigh? 2 It cannot please the gods or me 3 That you, Maecenas, first should die, 4 My pillar of prosperity. 5 Ah! should I lose one half my soul 6 Untimely, can the other stay 7 Behind it? Life that is not whole, 8 Is that as sweet? The self-same day 9 Shall crush us twain; no idle oath 10 Has Horace sworn; whene'er you go, 11 We both will travel, travel both 12 The last dark journey down below. 13 No, not Chimaera's fiery breath, 14 Nor Gyas, could he rise again, 15 Shall part us; Justice, strong as death, 16 So wills it; so the Fates ordain. 17 Whether 'twas Libra saw me born 18 Or angry Scorpio, lord malign 19 Of natal hour, or Capricorn, 20 The tyrant of the western brine, 21 Our planets sure with concord strange 22 Are blended. You by Jove's blest power 23 Were snatch'd from out the baleful range 24 Of Saturn, and the evil hour 25 Was stay'd, when rapturous benches full 26 Three times the auspicious thunder peal'd; 27 Me the curst trunk, that smote my skull, 28 Had slain; but Faunus, strong to shield 29 The friends of Mercury, check'd the blow 30 In mid descent. Be sure to pay 31 The victims and the fane you owe; 32 Your bard a humbler lamb will slay.
2.18	1 Non ebur neque aureum 2 mea renidet in domo lacunar, 3 non trabes Hymettiae 4 premunt columnas ultima recisas 5 Africa neque Attali 6 ignotus heres regiam occupavi 7 nec Laconicas mihi 8 trahunt honestae purpuras clientae. 9 at fides et ingeni 10 benigna vena est pauperemque dives 11 me petit: nihil supra 12 deos lacesso nec potentem amicum	1 Carven ivory have I none 2 No golden cornice in my dwelling shines; 3 Pillars choice of Libyan stone 4 Upbear no architrave from Attic mines; 5 'Twas not mine to enter in 6 To Attalus' broad realms, an unknown heir, 7 Nor for me fair clients spin 8 Laconian purples for their patron's wear. 9 Truth is mine, and Genius mine; 10 The rich man comes, and knocks at my low door: 11 Favour'd thus, I ne'er repine, 12 Nor weary out indulgent Heaven for more: 13 In my Sabine homestead blest, 14

	13 largiora flagito, 14 satis beatus unicis Sabinis. 15 truditur dies die 16 novaeque pergunt interire lunae: 17 tu secanda marmora 18 locas sub ipsum funus et sepulcri 19 inmemor struis domos 20 marisque Bais obstrepentis urges 21 submovere litora, 22 parum locuples continente ripa; 23 quid quod usque proximos 24 revellis agri terminos et ultra 25 limites clientium 26 salis avarus? pellitur paternos 27 in sinu ferens deos 28 et uxor et vir sordidosque natos. 29 nulla certior tamen 30 rapacis Orci fine destinata 31 aula divitem manet 32 erum. quid ultra tendis? aequa tellus 33 pauperi recluditur 34 regumque pueris nec satelles Orci 35 callidum Promethea 36 revexit auro captus; hic superbum 37 Tantalum atque Tantali 38 genus coercet, hic levare functum 39 pauperem laboribus 40 vocatus atque non vocatus audit.	Why should I further tax a generous friend? 15 Suns are hurrying suns a-west, 16 And newborn moons make speed to meet their end. 17 You have hands to square and hew 18 Vast marble-blocks, hard on your day of doom, 19 Ever building mansions new, 20 Nor thinking of the mansion of the tomb. 21 Now you press on ocean's bound, 22 Where waves on Baiae beat, as earth were scant; 23 Now absorb your neighbour's ground, 24 And tear his landmarks up, your own to plant. 25 Hedges set round clients' farms 26 Your avarice tramples; see, the outcasts fly, 27 Wife and husband, in their arms 28 Their fathers' gods, their squalid family. 29 Yet no hall that wealth e'er plann'd 30 Waits you more surely than the wider room 31 Traced by Death's yet greedier hand. 32 Why strain so far? you cannot leap the tomb. 33 Earth removes the impartial sod 34 Alike for beggar and for monarch's child: 35 Nor the slave of Hell's dark god 36 Convey'd Prometheus back, with bribe beguiled. 37 Pelops he and Pelops' sire 38 Holds, spite of pride, in close captivity; 39 Beggars, who of labour tire, 40 Call'd or uncall'd, he hears and sets them free.
2.19	1 Bacchum in remotis carmina rupibus 2 vidi docentem, credite posteri, 3 Nymphasque discentis et auris 4 capripedum Satyrorum acutas 5 euhoe, recenti mens trepidat metu, 6 plenoque Bacchi pectore turbidum 7 laetatur. euhoe, parce Liber, 8 parce gravi metuende thyrso. 9 fas pervicacis est mihi Thyiadas 10 vinique fontem lactis et uberes 11 cantare rivos atque truncis 12 lapsa cavis iterare mella; 13 fas et beatae coniugis additum 14 stellis honorem tectaque Penthei 15 disiecta non leni ruina 16 Thracis et exitium Lycurgi 17 tu flectis amnis, tu mare barbarum, 18 tu separatis uvidus in iugis 19 nodo coerces viperino 20 Bistonidum sine fraude crinis. 21 tu, cum parentis regna per arduum 22 cohors gigantum scanderet inpia, 23 Rhoetum retorsisti leonis 24 unguibus horribilique mala; 25 quamquam choreis aptior et iocis 26 ludoque dictus non sat idoneus 27 pugnae ferebaris; sed idem	1 Bacchus I saw in mountain glades 2 Retired (believe it, after years!) 3 Teaching his strains to Dryad maids, 4 While goat-hoof'd satyrs prick'd their ears. 5 Evoe! my eyes with terror glare; 6 My heart is revelling with the god; 7 'Tis madness! Evoe! spare, O spare, 8 Dread wielder of the ivied rod! 9 Yes, I may sing the Thyiad crew, 10 The stream of wine, the sparkling rills 11 That run with milk, and honey-dew 12 That from the hollow trunk distils; 13 And I may sing thy consort's crown, 14 New set in heaven, and Pentheus' hall 15 With ruthless ruin thundering down, 16 And proud Lycurgus' funeral. 17 Thou turn'st the rivers, thou the sea; 18 Thou, on far summits, moist with wine, 19 Thy Bacchants' tresses harmlessly 20 Dost knot with living serpent-twine. 21 Thou, when the giants, threatening wrack, 22 Were clambering up Jove's citadel, 23 Didst hurl o'erweening Rhoetus back, 24 In tooth and claw a lion fell. 25 Who knew thy feats in dance and play 26 Deem'd thee belike for war's rough game 27 Unmeet: but

	28 pacis eras mediusque belli. 29 te vidit insons Cerberus aureo 30 cornu decorum leniter atterens 31 caudam et recedentis trilingui 32 ore pedes tetigitque crura.	peace and battle-fray 28 Found thee, their centre, still the same. 29 Grim Cerberus wagg'd his tail to see 30 Thy golden horn, nor dreamd of wrong. 31 But gently fawning, follow'd thee, 32 And lick'd thy feet with triple tongue.
2.20	1 Non usitata nec tenui ferar 2 penna biformis per liquidum aethera 3 vates neque in terris morabor 4 longius invidiaque maior 5 urbis relinquam. non ego, pauperum 6 sanguis parentum, non ego, quem vocas. 7 dilecte Maecenas, obibo 8 nec Stygia cohibebor unda. 9 iam iam residunt cruribus asperae 10 pelles et album mutor in alitem 11 superne nascunturque leves 12 per digitos umerosque plumae. 13 iam Daedaleo notior Icaro 14 visam gementis litora Bospori 15 Syrtisque Gaetulas canorus 16 ales Hyperboreosque campos. 17 me Colchus et qui dissimulat metum 18 Marsae cohortis Dacus et ultimi 19 noscent Geloni, me peritus 20 discet Hiber Rhodanique potor. 21 absint inani funere neniae 22 luctusque turpes et querimoniae; 23 conpesce clamorem ac sepulcri 24 mitte supervacuos honores.	1 No vulgar wing, nor weakly plied, 2 Shall bear me through the liquid sky; 3 A two-form'd bard, no more to bide 4 Within the range of envy's eye 5 'Mid haunts of men. I, all ungraced 6 By gentle blood, I, whom you call 7 Your friend, Maecenas, shall not taste 8 Of death, nor chafe in Lethe's thrall. 9 E'en now a rougher skin expands 10 Along my legs: above I change 11 To a white bird; and o'er my hands 12 And shoulders grows a plumage strange: 13 Fleeter than Icarus, see me float 14 O'er Bosporus, singing as I go, 15 And o'er Gaetulian sands remote, 16 And Hyperborean fields of snow; 17 By Dacian horde, that masks its fear 18 Of Marsic steel, shall I be known, 19 And furthest Scythian: Spain shall hear 20 My warbling, and the banks of Rhone. 21 No dirges for my fancied death; 22 No weak lament, no mournful stave; 23 All clamorous grief were waste of breath, 24 And vain the tribute of a grave.
3.1.1	1 Odi profanum volgus et arceo. 2 favete linguis: carmina non prius 3 audita Musarum sacerdos 4 virginibus puerisque canto. 5 regum timendorum in proprios greges, 6 reges in ipsos imperium est Iovis, 7 clari Giganteo triumpho, 8 cuncta supercilio moventis. 9 est ut viro vir latius ordinet 10 arbusta sulcis, hic generosior 11 descendat in campum petitor, 12 moribus hic meliorque fama 13 contendat, illi turba clientium 14 sit maior: aequa lege Necessitas 15 sortitur insignis et imos, 16 omne capax movet urna nomen. 17 destrictus ensis cui super inpia 18 cervice pendet, non Siculae dapes 19 dulcem elaborabunt saporem, 20 non avium citharaeque cantus 21 somnum reducent: somnus agrestium 22 lenis virorum non humilis domos 23 fastidit umbrosamque ripam, 24 non Zephyris agitata Tempe.	1 Bid the unhallow'd crowd avaunt! 2 Keep holy silence; strains unknown 3 Till now, the Muses' hierophant, 4 I sing to youths and maids alone. 5 Kings o'er their flocks the sceptre wield; 6 E'en kings beneath Jove's sceptre bow: 7 Victor in giant battle-field, 8 He moves all nature with his brow. 9 This man his planted walks extends 10 Beyond his peers; an older name 11 One to the people's choice commends; 12 One boasts a more unsullied fame; 13 One plumes him on a larger crowd 14 Of clients. What are great or small? 15 Death takes the mean man with the proud; 16 The fatal urn has room for all. 17 When guilty Pomp the drawn sword sees 18 Hung o'er her, richest feasts in vain 19 Strain their sweet juice her taste to please; 20 No lutes, no singing birds again 21 Will bring her sleep. Sleep knows no pride; 22 It scorns not cots of village hinds, 23 Nor shadow-trembling river-side, 24 Nor Tempe, stirr'd by western winds. 25 Who, having competence, has all, 26

	25 desiderantem quod satis est neque 26 tumultuosum sollicitat mare 27 nec saevus Arcturi cadentis 28 impetus aut orientis Haedi, 29 non verberatae grandine vineae 30 fundusque mendax arbore nunc aquas	The tumult of the sea defies, 27 Nor fears Arcturus' angry fall, 28 Nor fears the Kid-star's sullen rise, 29 Though hail-storms on the vineyard beat, 30 Though crops deceive, though trees complain,
3.1.31	31 culpante, nunc torrentia agros 32 sidera, nunc hiemes iniquas. 33 contracta pisces aequora sentiunt 34 iactis in altum molibus: huc frequens 35 caementa demittit redemptor 36 cum famulis dominusque terrae 37 fastidiosus: sed Timor et Minae 38 scandunt eodem, quo dominus, neque 39 decedit aerata triremi et 40 post equitem sedet atra Cura. 41 quodsi dolentem nec Phrygius lapis 42 nec purpurarum sidere clarior 43 delenit usus nec Falerna 44 vitis Achaemeniumque costum, 45 cur invidendis postibus et novo 46 sublime ritu moliar atrium? 47 cur valle permutem Sabina 48 divitias operosiores?	31 One while of showers, one while of heat, 32 One while of winter's barbarous reign. 33 Fish feel the narrowing of the main 34 From sunken piles, while on the strand 35 Contractors with their busy train 36 Let down huge stones, and lords of land 37 Affect the sea: but fierce Alarm 38 Can clamber to the master's side: 39 Black Cares can up ihe galley swarm, 40 And close behind the horseman ride. 41 If Phrygian marbles soothe not pain, 42 Nor star-bright purple's costliest wear, 43 Nor vines of true Falernian strain, 44 Nor Achaemenian spices rare, 45 Why with rich gate and pillard range 46 Upbuild new mansions, twice as high, 47 Or why my Sabine vale exchange 48 For more laborious luxury?
3.2	1 Angustam amice pauperiem pati 2 robustus acri militia puer 3 condiscat et Parthos ferocis 4 vexet eques metuendus hasta 5 vitamque sub divo et trepidis agat 6 in rebus. illum ex moenibus hosticis 7 matrona bellantis tyranni 8 prospiciens et adulta virgo 9 suspiret “eheu, ne rudis agminum 10 sponsus lacessat regius asperum 11 tactu leonem, quem cruenta 12 per medias rapit ira caedes.” 13 dulce et decorum est pro patria mori: 14 mors et fugacem persequitur virum 15 nec parcit inbellis iuventae 16 poplitibus timidoque tergo. 17 Virtus, repulsae nescia sordidae, 18 intaminatis fulget honoribus 19 nec sumit aut ponit securis 20 arbitrio popularis aurae. 21 Virtus, recludens inmeritis mori 22 caelum, negata temptat iter via 23 coetusque volgaris et udam 24 spernit humum fugiente penna. 25 est et fideli tuta silentio 26 merces: vetabo, qui Cereris sacrum 27 volgarit arcanae, sub isdem 28 sit trabibus fragilemque mecum 29 solvat phaselon; saepe Diespiter	1 To suffer hardness with good cheer, 2 In sternest school of warfare bred, 3 Our youth should learn; let steed and spear 4 Make him one day the Parthian's dread; 5 Cold skies, keen perils, brace his life. 6 Methinks I see from rampired town 7 Some battling tyrant's matron wife, 8 Some maiden, look in terror down,— 9 “Ah, my dear lord, untrain'd in war! 10 O tempt not the infuriate mood 11 Of that fell lion I see! from far 12 He plunges through a tide of blood!“ 13 What joy, for fatherland to die! 14 Death's darts e'en flying feet o'ertake, 15 Nor spare a recreant chivalry, 16 A back that cowers, or loins that quake. 17 True Virtue never knows defeat: 18 Her robes she keeps unsullied still, 19 Nor takes, nor quits, her curule seat 20 To please a people's veering will. 21 True Virtue opens heaven to worth: 22 She makes the way she does not find: 23 The vulgar crowd, the humid earth, 24 Her soaring pinion leaves behind. 25 Seal'd lips have blessings sure to come: 26 Who drags Eleusis' rite today, 27 That man shall never share my home, 28 Or join my voyage: roofs give way 29 And boats are wreck'd: true men and

	30 neglectus incesto addidit integrum, 31 raro antecedentem scelestum 32 deseruit pede Poena claudo.	thieves 30 Neglected Justice oft confounds: 31 Though Vengeance halt, she seldom leaves 32 The wretch whose flying steps she hounds.
3.3.1	1 Iustum et tenacem propositi virum 2 non civium ardor prava iubentium, 3 non voltus instantis tyranni 4 mente quatit solida neque Auster, 5 dux inquieti turbidus Hadriae, 6 nec fulminantis magna manus Iovis: 7 si fractus inlabatur orbis, 8 inpavidum ferient ruinae. 9 hac arte Pollux et vagus Hercules 10 enisus arcis attigit igneas, 11 quos inter Augustus recumbens 12 purpureo bibet ore nectar, 13 hac te merentem, Bacche pater, tuae 14 vexere tigres indocili iugum 15 collo trahentes, hac Quirinus 16 Martis equis Acheronta fugit, 17 gratum elocuta consiliantibus 18 Iunone divis: “Ilion, Ilion 19 fatalis incestusque iudex 20 et mulier peregrina vertit 21 in pulverem ex quo destituit deos 22 mercede pacta Laomedon, mihi 23 castaeque damnatum Minervae 24 cum populo et duce fraudulento. 25 iam nec Lacaenae splendet adulterae 26 famosus hospes nec Priami domus 27 periura pugnacis Achivos 28 Hectoreis opibus refringit 29 nostrisque ductum seditionibus 30 bellum resedit; protinus et gravis	1 The man of firm and righteous will, 2 No rabble, clamorous for the wrong, 3 No tyrant's brow, whose frown may kill, 4 Can shake the strength that makes him strong: 5 Not winds, that chafe the sea they sway, 6 Nor Jove's right hand, with lightning red: 7 Should Nature's pillar'd frame give way, 8 That wreck would strike one fearless head. 9 Pollux and roving Hercules 10 Thus won their way to Heaven's proud steep, 11 'Mid whom Augustus, couch'd at ease, 12 Dyes his red lips with nectar deep. 13 For this, great Bacchus, tigers drew 14 Thy glorious car, untaught to slave 15 In harness: thus Quirinus flew 16 On Mars' wing'd steeds from Acheron's wave, 17 When Juno spoke with Heaven's assent: 18 “O Ilium, Ilium, wretched town! 19 The judge accurst, incontinent, 20 And stranger dame have dragg'd thee down. 21 Pallas and I, since Priam's sire 22 Denied the gods his pledged reward, 23 Had doom'd them all to sword and fire, 24 The people and their perjured lord. 25 No more the adulterous guest can charm 26 The Spartan queen: the house forsworn 27 No more repels by Hector's arm 28 My warriors, baffled and outworn: 29 Hush'd is the war our strife made long: 30 I welcome now, my hatred o'er,
3.3.31	31 iras et invisum nepotem, 32 Troica quem peperit sacerdos, 33 Marti redonabo; illum ego lucidas 34 inire sedes, discere nectaris 35 sucos et adscribi quietis 36 ordinibus patiar deorum. 37 dum longus inter saeviat Ilion 38 Romamque pontus, qualibet exsules 39 in parte regnanto beati; 40 dum Priami Paridisque busto 41 insultet armentum et catulos ferae 42 celent inultae, stet Capitolium 43 fulgens triumphatisque possit 44 Roma ferox dare iura Medis. 45 horrenda late nomen in ultimas 46 extendat oras, qua medius liquor 47 secernit Europen ab Afro, 48 qua tumidus rigat arva Nilus. 49 aurum inrepertum et sic melius situm,	31 A grandson in the child of wrong, 32 Him whom the Trojan priestess bore. 33 Receive him, Mars! the gates of flame 34 May open: let him taste forgiven 35 The nectar, and enrol his name 36 Among the peaceful ranks of Heaven. 37 Let the wide waters sever still 38 Ilium and Rome, the exiled race 39 May reign and prosper where they will: 40 So but in Paris' burial-place 41 The cattle sport, the wild beasts hide 42 Their cubs, the Capitol may stand 43 All bright, and Rome in warlike pride 44 O'er Media stretch a conqueror's hand. 45 Aye, let her scatter far and wide 46 Her terror, where tbe land-lock'd waves 47 Europe from Afric's shore divide, 48 Where swelling Nile the corn-field laves — 49 Of strength more potent to disdain 50 Hid gold, best buried in the

	50 cum terra celat, spernere fortior 51 quam cogere humanos in usus 52 omne sacrum rapiente dextra, 53 quicumque mundo terminus obstitit 54 hunc tanget armis, visere gestiens, 55 qua parte debacchentur ignes, 56 qua nebulae pluviique rores. 57 sed bellicosis fata Quiritibus 58 hac lege dico, ne nimium pii 59 rebusque fidentes avitae 60 tecta velint reparare Troiae.	mine, 51 Than gather it with hand profane, 52 That for man's greed would rob a shrine. 53 Whate'er the bound to earth ordain'd, 54 There let her reach the arm of power, 55 Travelling, where raves the fire unrein'd, 56 And where the storm-cloud and the shower. 57 Yet, warlike Roman, know thy doom, 58 Nor, drunken with a conqueror's joy, 59 Or blind with duteous zeal, presume 60 To build again ancestral Troy.
3.3.61	61 Troiae renascens alite lugubri 62 fortuna tristi clade iterabitur 63 ducente victrices catervas 64 coniuge me Iovis et sorore. 65 ter si resurgat murus aeneus 66 auctore Phoebo, ter pereat meis 67 excisus Argivis, ter uxor 68 capta virum puerosque ploret” 69 non hoc iocosae conveniet lyrae — 70 quo, Musa, tendis? desine pervicax 71 referre sermones deorum et 72 magna modis tenuare parvis.	61 Should Troy revive to hateful life, 62 Her star again should set in gore, 63 While I, Jove's sister and his wife, 64 To victory led my host once more. 65 Though Phoebus thrice in brazen mail 66 Should case her towers, they thrice should fall, 67 Storm'd by my Greeks: thrice wives should wail 68 Husband and son, themselves in thrall.”— 69 Such thunders from the lyre of love! 70 Back, wayward Muse! refrain, refrain 71 To tell the talk of gods above, 72 And dwarf high themes in puny strain.
3.4.1	1 Descende caelo et dic age tibia 2 regina longum Calliope melos, 3 seu voce nunc mavis acuta 4 seu fidibus citharave Phoebi. 5 auditis? an me ludit amabilis 6 insania? audire et videor pios 7 errare per lucos, amoenae 8 quos et aquae subeunt et aurae. 9 me fabulosae Volture in Apulo 10 nutricis extra limina Pulliae 11 ludo fatigatumque somno 12 fronde nova puerum palumbes 13 texere, mirum quod foret omnibus 14 quicumque celsae nidum Aceruntiae 15 saltusque Bantinos et arvum 16 pingue tenent humilis Forenti, 17 ut tuto ab atris corpore viperis 18 dormirem et ursis, ut premerer sacra 19 lauroque conlataque myrto 20 non sine dis animosus infans. 21 vester, Camenae, vester in arduos 22 tollor Sabinos, seu mihi frigidum 23 Praeneste seu Tibur supinum 24 seu liquidae placuere Baiae. 25 vestris amicum fontibus et choris 26 non me Philippis versa acies retro, 27 devota non extinxit arbor 28 nec Sicula Palinurus unda. 29 utcumque mecum vos eritis, libens 30 insanientem navita Bosporum	1 Come down, Calliope, from above: 2 Breathe on the pipe a strain of fire: 3 Or if a graver note thou love, 4 With Phoebus' cittern and his lyre. 5 You hear her? or is this the play 6 Of fond illusion? Hark! meseems 7 Through gardens of the good I stray, 8 'Mid murmuring gales and purling streams. 9 Me, as I lay on Vultur's steep, 10 A truant past Apulia's bound, 11 O'ertired, poor child, with play and sleep, 12 With living green the stock-doves crown'd— 13 A legend, nay, a miracle, 14 By Acherontia's nestlings told, 15 By all in Bantine glade that dwell, 16 Or till the rich Forentan mould. 17 “Bears, vipers, spared him as he lay, 18 The sacred garland deck'd his hair, 19 The myrtle blended with the bay: 20 The child's inspired: the gods were there.” 21 Your grace, sweet Muses, shields me still 22 On Sabine heights, or lets me range 23 Where cool Praeneste, Tibur's hill, 24 Or liquid Baiae proffers change. 25 Me to your springs, your dances true, 26 Philippi bore not to the ground, 27 Nor the doom'd tree in falling slew, 28 Nor billowy Palinurus drown'd. 29 Grant me your presence, blithe and fain 30 Mad Bosporus shall my bark explore;
3.4.31	31 temptabo et urentis harenas	31 My foot shall tread the sandy plain

	32 litoris Assyrii viator, 33 visam Britannos hospitibus feros 34 et laetum equino sanguine Concanum, 35 visam pharetratos Gelonos 36 et Scythicum inviolatus amnem. 37 vos Caesarem altum, militia simul 38 fessas cohortes abdidit oppidis, 39 finire quaerentem labores 40 Pierio recreatis antro. 41 vos lene consilium et datis et dato 42 gaudetis, almae. scimus, ut inpios 43 Titanas immanemque turbam 44 fulmine sustulerit caduco 45 qui terram inertem, qui mare temperat 46 ventosum et urbis regnaque tristia 47 divosque mortalisque turmas 48 imperio regit unus aequo. 49 magnum illa terrorem intulerat Iovi 50 fidens iuventus horrida bracchiis 51 fratresque tendentes opaco 52 Pelion inposuisse Olympo. 53 sed quid Typhoeus et validus Mimas 54 aut quid minaci Porphyrion statu, 55 quid Rhoetus evolsisque truncis 56 Enceladus iaculator audax 57 contra sonantem Palladis aegida 58 possent ruentes? hinc avidus stetit 59 Volcanus, hinc matrona Iuno et 60 numquam umeris positurus arcum	32 That glows beside Assyria's shore; 33 'Mid Briton tribes, the stranger's foe, 34 And Spaniards, drunk with horses' blood, 35 And quiver'd Scythians, will I go 36 Unharm'd, and look on Tanais' flood. 37 When Caesar's self in peaceful town 38 The weary veteran's home has made, 39 You bid him lay his helmet down 40 And rest in your Pierian shade. 41 Mild thoughts you plant, and joy to see 42 Mild thoughts take root. The nations know 43 How with descending thunder he 44 The impious Titans hurl'd below, 45 Who rules dull earth and stormy seas, 46 And towns of men, and realms of pain, 47 And gods, and mortal companies, 48 Alone, impartial in his reign. 49 Yet Jove had fear'd the giant rush, 50 Their upraised arms, their port of pride, 51 And the twin brethren bent to push 52 Huge Pelion up Olympus' side. 53 But Typhon, Mimas, what could these, 54 Or what Porphyrion's stalwart scorn, 55 Rhoetus, or he whose spears were trees, 56 Enceladus, from earth uptorn, 57 As on they rush'd in mad career 58 'Gainst Pallas' shield? Here met the foe 59 Fierce Vulcan, queenly Juno here, 60 And he who ne'er shall quit his bow,
3.4.61	61 qui rore puro Castaliae lavit 62 crinis solutos, qui Lyciae tenet 63 dumeta natalemque silvam 64 Delius et Patareus Apollo. 65 vis consili expers mole ruit sua, 66 vim temperatam di quoque provehunt 67 in maius; idem odere viris 68 omne nefas animo moventis. 69 testis mearum centimanus Gyas 70 sententiarum, notus et integrae 71 temptator Orion Dianae 72 virginea domitus sagitta. 73 iniecta monstris Terra dolet suis 74 maeretque partus fulmine luridum 75 missos ad Orcum; nec peredit 76 inpositam celer ignis Aetnen 77 incontinentis nec Tityi iecur 78 reliquit ales, nequitiae additus 79 custos; amatorem trecentae 80 Pirithoum cohibent catenae.	61 Who laves in clear Castalian flood 62 His locks, and loves the leafy growth 63 Of Lycia next his native wood, 64 The Delian and the Pataran both. 65 Strength, mindless, falls by its own weight; 66 Strength, mix'd with mind, is made more strong 67 By the just gods, who surely hate 68 The strength whose thoughts are set on wrong. 69 Let hundred-handed Gyas bear 70 His witness, and Orion known 71 Tempter of Dian, chaste and fair, 72 By Dian's maiden dart o'erthrown. 73 Hurl'd on the monstrous shapes she bred, 74 Earth groans, and mourns her children thrust 75 To Orcus; Aetna's weight of lead 76 Keeps down the fire that breaks its crust; 77 Still sits the bird on Tityos' breast, 78 The warder of Unlawful love; 79 Still suffers lewd Pirithous, prest 80 By massive chains no hand may move.
3.5.1	1 Caelo tonantem credidimus Iovem 2 regnare; praesens divus habebitur 3 Augustus adiectis Britannis 4 imperio gravibusque Persis. 5 milesne Crassi coniuge barbara	1 Jove rules in heaven, his thunder shows; 2 Henceforth Augustus earth shall own 3 Her present god, now Briton foes 4 And Persians bow before his throne. 5 Has Crassus' soldier ta'en

	6 turpis maritus vixit et hostium, 7 pro curia inversique mores! 8 consenuit socerorum in armis 9 sub rege Medo Marsus et Apulus, 10 anciliorum et nominis et togae 11 oblitus aeternaeque Vestae, 12 incolumi Iove et urbe Roma? 13 hoc caverat mens provida Reguli 14 dissentientis condicionibus 15 foedis et exemplo trahentis 16 perniciem veniens in aevum, 17 si non periret inmiserabilis 18 captiva pubes. “signa ego Punicis 19 adfixa delubris et arma 20 militibus sine caede” dixit 21 “derepta vidi, vidi ego civium 22 retorta tergo bracchia libero 23 portasque non clausas et arva 24 Marte coli populata nostro. 25 auro repensus scilicet acrior 26 miles redibit: flagitio additis 27 damnum; neque amissos colores 28 lana refert medicata fuco 29 nec vera virtus, cum semel excidit, 30 curat reponi deterioribus.	to wife 6 A base barbarian, and grown grey 7 (Woe, for a nation's tainted life!) 8 Earning his foemen-kinsmen's pay, 9 His king, forsooth, a Mede, his sire 10 A Marsian? can he name forget, 11 Gown, sacred shield, undying fire, 12 And Jove and Rome are standing yet? 13 'Twas this that Regulus foresaw, 14 What time he spurn'd the foul disgrace 15 Of peace, whose precedent would draw 16 Destruction on an unborn race, 17 Should aught but death the prisoner's chain 18 Unrivet. “I have seen,” he said, 19 “Rome's eagle in a Punic fane, 20 And armour, ne'er a blood-drop shed, 21 Stripp'd from the soldier; I have seen 22 Free sons of Rome with arms fast tied; 23 The fields we spoil'd with corn are green, 24 And Carthage opes her portals wide. 25 The warrior, sure, redeem'd by gold, 26 Will fight the bolder! Aye, you heap 27 On baseness loss. The hues of old 28 Revisit not the wool we steep; 29 And genuine worth, expell'd by fear, 30 Returns not to the worthless slave.
3.5.31	31 si pugnat extricata densis 32 cerva plagis, erit ille fortis 33 qui perfidis se credidit hostibus 34 et Marte Poenos proteret altero; 35 qui lora restrictis lacertis 36 sensit iners timuitque mortem, 37 hic, unde vitam sumeret inscius, 38 pacem duello miscuit. o pudor! 39 o magna Carthago, probrosis 40 altior Italiae ruinis!” 41 fertur pudicae coniugis osculum 42 parvosque natos ut capitis minor 43 ab se removisse et virilem 44 torvus humi posuisse voltum, 45 donec labantis consilio patres 46 firmaret auctor numquam alias dato 47 interque maerentis amicos 48 egregius properaret exul. 49 atqui sciebat, quae sibi barbarus 50 tortor pararet: non aliter tamen 51 dimovit obstantis propinquos 52 et populum reditus morantem 53 quam si clientum longa negotia 54 diiudicata lite relinqueret 55 tendens Venafranos in agros 56 aut Lacedaemonium Tarentum.	31 Break but her meshes, will the deer 32 Assail you? then will he be brave 33 Who once to faithless foes has knelt; 34 Yes, Carthage yet his spear will fly, 35 Who with bound arms the cord has felt, 36 The coward, and has fear'd to die. 37 He knows not, he, how life is won; 38 Thinks war, like peace, a thing of trade! 39 Great art thou, Carthage! mate the sun, 40 While Italy in dust is laid!” 41 His wife's pure kiss he waved aside, 42 And prattling boys, as one disgraced, 43 They tell us, and with manly pride 44 Stern on the ground his visage placed. 45 With counsel thus ne'er else aread 46 He nerved the fathers' weak intent, 47 And, girt by friends that mourn'd him, sped 48 Into illustrious banishment. 49 Well witting what the torturer's art 50 Design'd him, with like unconcern 51 The press of kin he push'd apart 52 And crowds encumbering his return, 53 As though, some tedious business o'er 54 Of clients' court, his journey lay 55 Towards Venafrum's grassy floor, 56 Or Sparta-built Tarentum's bay.
3.6.1	1 Delicta maiorum inmeritus lues, 2 Romane, donec templa refeceris 3 aedisque labentis deorum et 4 foeda nigro simulacra fumo.

	5 dis te minorem quod geris, imperas: 6 hinc omne principium, huc refer exitum: 7 di multa neglecti dederunt 8 Hesperiae mala luctuosae. 9 iam bis Monaeses et Pacori manus 10 inauspicatos contudit impetus 11 nostros et adiecisse praedam 12 torquibus exiguis renidet. 13 paene occupatam seditionibus 14 delevit urbem Dacus et Aethiops, 15 hic classe formidatus, ille 16 missilibus melior sagittis. 17 fecunda culpae saecula nuptias 18 primum inquinavere et genus et domos: 19 hoc fonte derivata clades 20 in patriam populumque fluxit. 21 motus doceri gaudet Ionicos 22 matura virgo et fingitur artibus 23 iam nunc et incestos amores 24 de tenero meditatur ungui. 25 mox iuniores quaerit adulteros 26 inter mariti vina neque eligit 27 cui donet inpermissa raptim 28 gaudia luminibus remotis, 29 sed iussa coram non sine conscio 30 surgit marito, seu vocat institor
3.6.31	31 seu navis Hispanae magister, 32 dedecorum pretiosus emptor. 33 non his iuventus orta parentibus 34 infecit aequor sanguine Punico 35 Pyrrhumque et ingentem cecidit 36 Antiochum Hannibalemque dirum, 37 sed rusticorum mascula militum 38 proles, Sabellis docta ligonibus 39 versare glaebas et severae 40 matris ad arbitrium recisos 41 portare fustis, sol ubi montium 42 mutaret umbras et iuga demeret 43 bubus fatigatis amicum 44 tempus agens abeunte curru. 45 damnosa quid non inminuit dies? 46 aetas parentum, peior avis, tulit 47 nos nequiores, mox daturos 48 progeniem vitiosiorem.
3.7	1 Quid fles, Asterie, quem tibi, candidi 2 primo restituent vere Favonii 3 Thyna merce beatum, 4 constantis iuvenem fide 5 Gygen? ille Notis actus ad Oricum 6 post insana Caprae sidera frigidas 7 noctis non sine multis 8 insomnis lacrimis agit. 9 atqui sollicitae nuntius hospitae, 10 suspirare Chloen et miseram tuis 11 dicens ignibus uri,	1 Why weep for him whom sweet Favonian airs 2 Will waft next spring, Asteria, back to you, 3 Rich with Bithynia's wares, 4 A lover fond and true, 5 Your Gyges? He, detain'd by stormy stress 6 At Oricum, about the Goat-star's rise, 7 Cold, wakeful, comfortless, 8 The long night weeping lies. 9 Meantime his lovesick hostess' messenger 10 Talks of the flames that waste poor Chloe's heart 11 (Flames lit

	12 temptat mille vafer modis: 13 ut Proetum mulier perfida credulum 14 falsis inpulerit criminibus nimis 15 casto Bellerophontae 16 maturare necem, refert; 17 narrat paene datum Pelea Tartaro, 18 Magnessam Hippolyten dum fugit abstinens, 19 et peccare docentis 20 fallax historias movet. 21 frustra: nam scopulis surdior Icari 22 voces audit adhuc integer. at tibi 23 ne vicinus Enipeus 24 plus iusto placeat cave; 25 quamvis non alius flectere equum sciens 26 aeque conspicitur gramine Martio, 27 nec quisquam citus aeque 28 Tusco denatat alveo. 29 prima nocte domum claude neque in vias 30 sub cantu querulae despice tibiae 31 et te saepe vocanti 32 duram difficilis mane.	for you, not her!) 12 With a besieger's art; 13 Shows how a treacherous woman's lying breath 14 Once on a time on trustful Proetus won 15 To doom to early death 16 Too chaste Bellerophon; 17 Warns him of Peleus' peril, all but slain 18 For virtuous scorn of fair Hippolyta, 19 And tells again each tale 20 That e'er led heart astray. 21 In vain; for deafer than Icarian seas 22 He hears, untainted yet. But, lady fair, 23 What if Enipeus please 24 Your listless eye? beware! 25 Though true it be that none with surer seat 26 O'er Mars's grassy turf is seen to ride, 27 Nor any swims so fleet 28 Adown the Tuscan tide, 29 Yet keep each evening door and window barr'd; 30 Look not abroad when music strikes up shrill, 31 And though he call you hard, 32 Remain obdurate still.
3.8	1 Martiis caelebs quid agam kalendis, 2 quid velint flores et acerra turis 3 plena miraris positusque carbo in 4 caespite vivo, 5 docte sermones utriusque linguae? 6 voveram dulcis epulas et album 7 Libero caprum prope funeratus 8 arboris ictu. 9 hic dies anno redeunte festus 10 corticem adstrictum pice dimovebit 11 amphorae fumum bibere institutae 12 consule Tullo. 13 sume, Maecenas, cyathos amici 14 sospitis centum et vigiles lucernas 15 perfer in lucem: procul omnis esto 16 clamor et ira. 17 mitte civilis super urbe curas: 18 occidit Daci Cotisonis agmen, 19 Medus infestus sibi luctuosis 20 dissidet armis, 21 servit Hispanae vetus hostis orae 22 Cantaber, sera domitus catena, 23 iam Scythae laxo meditantur arcu 24 cedere campis. 25 neglegens, ne qua populus laboret, 26 parce privatus nimium cavere et 27 dona praesentis cape laetus horae, 28 linque severa.	1 The first of March! a man unwed! 2 What can these flowers, this censer mean? 3 Or what these embers, glowing red 4 On sods of green? 5 You ask, in either language skill'd! 6 A feast I vow'd to Bacchus free, 7 A white he-goat, when all but kill'd 8 By falling tree. 9 So, when that holyday comes round, 10 It sees me still the rosin clear 11 From this my wine-jar, first embrown'd 12 In Tullus' year. 13 Come, crush one hundred cups for life 14 Preserved, Maecenas; keep till day 15 The candles lit; let noise and strife 16 Be far away. 17 Lay down that load of state-concern; 18 The Dacian hosts are all o'erthrown; 19 The Mede, that sought our overturn, 20 Now seeks his own; 21 A servant now, our ancient foe, 22 The Spaniard, wears at last our chain; 23 The Scythian half unbends his bow 24 And quits the plain. 25 Then fret not lest the state should ail; 26 A private man such thoughts may spare; 27 Enjoy the present hour's regale, 28 And banish care.
3.9	1 “Donec gratus eram tibi 2 nec quisquam potior bracchia candidae 3 cervici iuvenis dabat, 4 Persarum vigui rege beatior.”	1 While I had power to bless you, 2 Nor any round that neck his arms did fling 3 More privileged to caress you, 4 Happier was Horace than the Persian king. 5 While you for none were pining

	5 “donec non alia magis 6 arsisti neque erat Lydia post Chloen, 7 multi Lydia nominis, 8 Romana vigui clarior Ilia.” 9 “me nunc Thressa Chloe regit, 10 dulcis docta modos et citharae sciens, 11 pro qua non metuam mori, 12 si parcent animae fata superstiti” 13 “me torret face mutua 14 Thurini Calais filius Ornyti, 15 pro quo bis patiar mori, 16 si parcent puero fata superstiti.” 17 “quid si prisca redit Venus 18 diductosque iugo cogit aeneo? 19 si flava excutitur Chloe 20 reiectaeque patet ianua Lydiae?” 21 “quamquam sidere pulchrior 22 ille est, tu levior cortice et inprobo 23 iracundior Hadria: 24 tecum vivere amem, tecum obeam lubens.”	6 Sorer, nor Lydia after Chloe came, 7 Lydia, her peers outshining, 8 Might match her own with Ilia's Roman fame. 9 Now Chloe is my treasure, 10 Whose voice, whose touch, can make sweet music flow: 11 For her I'd die with pleasure, 12 Would Fate but spare the dear survivor so. 13 I love my own fond lover, 14 Young Calais, son of Thurian Ornytus: 15 For him I'd die twice over, 16 Would Fate but spare the sweet survivor thus. 17 What now, if Love returning 18 Should pair us 'neath his brazen yoke once more, 19 And, bright-hair'd Chloe spurning, 20 Horace to off-cast Lydia ope his door? 21 Though he is fairer, milder, 22 Than starlight, you lighter than bark of tree, 23 Than stormy Hadria wilder, 24 With you to live, to die, were bliss for me.
3.10	1 Extremum Tanain si biberes, Lyce, 2 saevo nupta viro, me tamen asperas 3 porrectum ante foris obicere incolis 4 plorares Aquilonibus 5 audis, quo strepitu ianua, quo nemus 6 inter pulcra satum tecta remugiat 7 ventis et positas ut glaciet nives 8 puro numine Iuppiter? 9 ingratam Veneri pone superbiam, 10 ne currente retro funis eat rota: 11 non te Penelopen difficilem procis 12 Tyrrhenus genuit parens. 13 o quamvis neque te munera nec preces 14 nec tinctus viola pallor amantium 15 nec vir Pieria paelice saucius 16 curvat, supplicibus tuis 17 parcas, nec rigida mollior aesculo 18 nec Mauris animum mitior anguibus: 19 non hoc semper erit liminis aut aquae 20 caelestis patiens latus.	1 Ah Lyce! though your drink were Tanais, 2 Your husband some rude savage, you would weep 3 To leave me shivering, on a night like this, 4 Where storms their watches keep. 5 Hark! how your door is creaking! how the grove 6 In your fair courtyard, while the wild winds blow, 7 Wails in accord! with what transparence Jove 8 Is glazing the driven snow! 9 Cease that proud temper: Venus loves it not: 10 The rope may break, the wheel may backward turn: 11 Begetting you, no Tuscan sire begot 12 Penelope the stern. 13 O, though no gift, no “prevalence of prayer,” 14 Nor lovers' paleness deep as violet, 15 Nor husband, smit with a Pierian fair, 16 Move you, have pity yet! 17 O harder e'en than toughest heart of oak, 18 Deafer than uncharm'd snake to suppliant moans! 19 This side, I warn you, will not always brook 20 Rain-water and cold stones.
3.11.1	1 Mercuri, nam te docilis magistro 2 movit Amphion lapides canendo, 3 tuque testudo resonare septem 4 callida nervis, 5 nec loquax olim neque grata, nunc et 6 divitum mensis et amica templis, 7 dic modos, Lyde quibus obstinatas 8 adplicet auris, 9 quae velut latis equa trima campis 10 ludit exsultim metuitque tangi 11 nuptiarum expers et adhuc protervo 12 cruda marito.	1 Come, Mercury, by whose minstrel spell 2 Amphion raised the Theban stones, 3 Come, with thy seven sweet strings, my shell, 4 Thy “diverse tones,” 5 Nor vocal once nor pleasant, now 6 To rich man's board and temple dear: 7 Put forth thy power, till Lyde bow 8 Her stubborn ear. 9 She, like a three-year colt unbroke, 10 Is frisking o'er the spacious plain, 11 Too shy to bear a lover's yoke, 12 A husband's rein. 13 The wood, the tiger, at thy call 14 Have

	13 tu potes tigris comitesque silvas 14 ducere et rivos celeres morari; 15 cessit immanis tibi blandienti 16 ianitor aulae 17 Cerberus, quamvis furiale centum 18 muniant angues caput eius atque 19 spiritus taeter saniesque manet 20 ore trilingui; 21 quin et Ixion Tityosque voltu 22 risit invito, stetit urna paulum 23 sicca, dum grato Danai puellas 24 carmine mulces. 25 audiat Lyde scelus atque notas 26 virginum poenas et inane lymphae 27 dolium fundo pereuntis imo 28 seraque fata, 29 quae manent culpas etiam sub Orco. 30 inpiae, (nam quid potuere maius?)	follow'd: thou caust rivers stay: 15 The monstrous guard of Pluto's hall 16 To thee gave way, 17 Grim Cerberus, round whose Gorgon head 18 A hundred snakes are hissing death, 19 Whose triple jaws black venom shed, 20 And sickening breath. 21 Ixion too and Tityos smooth'd 22 Their rugged brows: the urn stood dry 23 One hour, while Danaus' maids were sooth'd 24 With minstrelsy. 25 Let Lyde hear those maidens' guilt, 26 Their famous doom, the ceaseless drain 27 Of outpour'd water, ever spilt, 28 And all the pain 29 Reserved for sinners, e'en when dead: 30 Those impious hands, (could crime do more?)
3.11.31	31 inpiae sponsos potuere duro 32 perdere ferro. 33 una de multis face nuptiali 34 digna periurum fuit in parentem 35 splendide mendax et in omne virgo 36 nobilis aevum, 37 “surge” quae dixit iuveni marito, 38 “surge, ne longus tibi somnus unde 39 non times detur; socerum et scelestas 40 falle sorores, 41 quae velut nactae vitulos leaenae 42 singulos eheu lacerant: ego illis 43 mollior nec te feriam neque intra 44 claustra tenebo. 45 me pater saevis oneret catenis, 46 quod viro clemens misero peperci, 47 me vel extremos Numidarum in agros 48 classe releget: 49 i pedes quo te rapiunt et aurae, 50 dum favet nox et Venus, i secundo 51 omine et nostri memorem sepulcro 52 scalpe querelam.”	31 Those impious hands had hearts to shed 32 Their bridegrooms' gore! 33 One only, true to Hymen's flame, 34 Was traitress to her sire forsworn: 35 That splendid falsehood lights her name 36 Through times unborn. 37 “Wake!” to her youthful spouse she cried, 38 “Wake! or you yet may sleep too well: 39 Fly—from the father of your bride, 40 Her sisters fell: 41 They, as she-lions bullocks rend, 42 Tear each her victim: I, less hard 43 Than these, will slay you not, poor friend, 44 Nor hold in ward: 45 Me let my sire in fetters lay 46 For mercy to my husband shown: 47 Me let him ship far hence away, 48 To climes unknown. 49 Go; speed your flight o'er land and wave, 50 While Night and Venus shield you; go 51 Be blest: and on my tomb engrave 52 This tale of woe.”
3.12	1 Miserarum est neque amori dare ludum neque dulci 2 mala vino lavere, aut exanimari metuentis 3 patruae verbera linguae. 4 tibi qualum Cythereae puer ales, tibi telas 5 operosaeque Minervae studium aufert, Neobule, 6 Liparaei nitor Hebri, 7 simul unctos Tiberinis umeros lavit in undis, 8 eques ipso melior Bellerophonte, neque pugno 9 neque segni pede victus,	1 How unhappy are the maidens who with Cupid may not play, 2 Who may never touch the wine-cup, but must tremble all the day 3 At an uncle, and the scourging of his tongue! 4 Neobule, there's a robber takes your needle and your thread, 5 Lets the lessons of Minerva run no longer in your head; 6 It is Hebrus, the athletic and the young! 7 O, to see him when anointed he is plunging in the flood! 8 What a seat he has on horseback! was Bellerophon's as good? 9 As a boxer, as a runner, past compare! 10 When the deer are flying blindly all the open country o'er, 11 He

	10 catus idem per apertum fugientis agitato 11 grege cervos iaculari et celer arto latitantem 12 fruticeto excipere aprum.	can aim and he can hit them; he can steal upon the boar, 12 As it couches in the thicket unaware.
3.13	1 O fons Bandusiae splendidior vitro, 2 dulci digne mero non sine floribus, 3 cras donaberis haedo, 4 cui frons turgida cornibus 5 primis et venerem et proelia destinat; 6 frustra: nam gelidos inficiet tibi 7 rubro sanguine rivos 8 lascivi suboles gregis. 9 te flagrantis atrox hora Caniculae 10 nescit tangere, tu frigus amabile 11 fessis vomere tauris 12 praebes et pecori vago. 13 fies nobilium tu quoque fontium 14 me dicente cavis inpositam ilicem 15 saxis, unde loquaces 16 lymphae desiliunt tuae.	1 Bandusia's fount, in clearness crystalline, 2 O worthy of the wine, the flowers we vow! 3 Tomorrow shall be thine 4 A kid, whose crescent brow 5 Is sprouting all for love and victory. 6 In vain: his warm red blood, so early stirr'd. 7 Thy gelid stream shall dye, 8 Child of the wanton herd. 9 Thee the fierce Sirian star, to madness fired, 10 Forbears to touch: sweet cool thy waters yield 11 To ox with ploughing tired, 12 And lazy sheep afield. 13 Thou too one day shalt win proud eminence 14 'Mid honour'd founts, while I the ilex sing 15 Crowning the cavern, whence 16 Thy babbling wavelets spring.
3.14	1 Herculis ritu modo dictus, o plebs, 2 morte venalem petiisse laurum 3 Caesar Hispana repetit penatis 4 victor ab ora. 5 unico gaudens mulier marito 6 prodeat iustis operata sacris 7 et soror clari ducis et decorae 8 supplice vitta 9 virginum matres iuvenumque nuper 10 sospitum; vos, o pueri et puellae 11 iam virum expertae, male nominatis 12 parcite verbis. 13 hic dies vere mihi festus atras 14 exiget curas ego nec tumultum 15 nec mori per vim metuam tenente 16 Caesare terras. 17 i pete unguentum, puer, et coronas 18 et cadum Marsi memorem duelli, 19 Spartacum siqua potuit vagantem 20 fallere testa. 21 dic et argutae properet Neaerae 22 murreum nodo cohibere crinem; 23 si per invisum mora ianitorem 24 fiet, abito. 25 lenit albescens animos capillus 26 litium et rixae cupidos protervae; 27 non ego hoc ferrem calidus iuventa 28 consule Planco.	1 Our Hercules, they told us, Rome, 2 Had sought the laurel Death bestows: 3 Now Glory brings him conqueror home 4 From Spaniard foes. 5 Proud of her spouse, the imperial fair 6 Must thank the gods that shield from death; 7 His sister too:—let matrons wear 8 The suppliant wreath 9 For daughters and for sons restored: 10 Ye youths and damsels newly wed, 11 Let decent awe restrain each word 12 Best left unsaid. 13 This day, true holyday to me, 14 Shall banish care: I will not fear 15 Rude broils or bloody death to see, 16 While Caesar's here. 17 Quick, boy, the chaplets and the nard, 18 And wine, that knew the Marsian war, 19 If roving Spartacus have spared 20 A single jar. 21 And bid Neaera come and trill, 22 Her bright locks bound with careless art: 23 If her rough porter cross your will, 24 Why then depart. 25 Soon palls the taste for noise and fray, 26 When hair is white and leaves are sere: 27 How had I fired in life's warm May, 28 In Plancus' year!
3.15	1 Uxor pauperis Ibyci, 2 tandem nequitiae fige modum tuae 3 famosisque laboribus; 4 maturo propior desine funeri 5 inter ludere virgines 6 et stellis nebulam spargere candidis. 7 non, siquid Pholoen, satis 8 et te, Chlori, decet: filia rectius	1 Wife of Ibycus the poor, 2 Let aged scandals have at length their bound: 3 Give your graceless doings o'er, 4 Ripe as you are for going underground. 5 You the maidens' dance to lead, 6 And cast your gloom upon those beaming stars! 7 Daughter Pholoe may succeed, 8 But mother Chloris what she touches

	9 expugnat iuvenum domos, 10 pulso Thyias uti concita tympano. 11 illam cogit amor Nothi 12 lascivae similem ludere capreae, 13 te lanae prope nobilem 14 tonsae Luceriam, non citharae decent 15 nec flos purpureus rosae 16 nec poti, vetulam, faece tenus cadi.	mars. 9 Young men's homes your daughter storms, 10 Like Thyiad, madden'd by the cymbals' beat: 11 Nothus' love her bosom warms: 12 She gambols like a fawn with silver feet. 13 Yours should be the wool that grows 14 By fair Luceria, not the merry lute: 15 Flowers beseem not wither'd brows,. 16 Nor wither'd lips with emptied wine-jars suit.
3.16	1 Inclusam Danaen turris aenea 2 robustaeque fores et vigilum canum 3 tristes excubiae munierant satis 4 nocturnis ab adulteris, 5 si non Acrisium virginis abditae 6 custodem pavidum Iuppiter et Venus 7 risissent: fore enim tutum iter et patens 8 converso in pretium deo. 9 aurum per medios ire satellites 10 et perrumpere amat saxa potentius 11 ictu fulmineo: concidit auguris 12 Argivi domus ob lucrum 13 demersa exitio; diffidit urbium 14 portas vir Macedo et subruit aemulos 15 reges muneribus; munera navium 16 saevos inlaqueant duces. 17 crescentem sequitur cura pecuniam 18 maiorumque fames. iure perhorrui 19 late conspicuum tollere verticem, 20 Maecenas, equitum decus. 21 quanto quisque sibi plura negaverit, 22 ab dis plura feret nil cupientium 23 nudus castra peto et transfuga divitum 24 partis linquere gestio, 25 contemptae dominus splendidior rei, 26 quam si quidquid arat inpiger Apulus 27 occultare meis dicerer horreis, 28 magnas inter opes inops. 29 purae rivos aquae silvaque iugerum 30 paucorum et segetis certa fides meae 31 fulgentem imperio fertilis Africae 32 fallit sorte beatior. 33 quamquam nec Calabrae mella ferunt apes 34 nec Laestrygonia Bacchus in amphora 35 languescit mihi nec pinguia Gallicis 36 crescunt vellera pascuis: 37 inportuna tamen pauperies abest 38 nec, si plura velim, tu dare deneges. 39 contracto melius parva cupidine 40 vectigalia porrigam 41 quam si Mygdoniis regnum Alyattei	1 Full well had Danae been secured, in truth, 2 By oaken portals, and a brazen tower, 3 And savage watch-dogs, from the roving youth 4 That prowl at midnight's hour: 5 But Jove and Venus mock'd with gay disdain 6 The jealous warder of that close stronghold: 7 The way, they knew, must soon be smooth and plain 8 When gods could change to gold. 9 Gold, gold can pass the tyrant's sentinel, 10 Can shiver rocks with more resistless blow 11 Than is the thunder's. Argos' prophet fell, 12 He and his house laid low, 13 And all for gain. The man of Macedon 14 Cleft gates of cities, rival kings o'erthrew 15 By force of gifts: their cunning snares have won 16 Rude captains and their crew. 17 As riches grow, care follows: men repine 18 And thirst for more. No lofty crest I raise: 19 Wisdom that thought forbids, Maecenas mine, 20 The knightly order's praise. 21 He that denies himself shall gain the more 22 From bounteous Heaven. I strip me of my pride, 23 Desert the rich man's standard, and pass o'er 24 To bare Contentment's side, 25 More proud as lord of what the great despise 26 Than if the wheat thresh'd on Apulia's floor 27 I hoarded all in my huge granaries, 28 'Mid vast possessions poor. 29 A clear fresh stream, a little field o'ergrown 30 With shady trees, a crop that ne'er deceives, 31 Pass, though men know it not, their wealth, that own 32 All Afric's golden sheaves. 33 Though no Calabrian bees their honey yield 34 For me, nor mellowing sleeps the god of wine 35 In Formian jar, nor in Gaul's pasture-field 36 The wool grows long and fine, 37 Yet Poverty ne'er comes to break my peace; 38 If more I craved, you would not more refuse. 39 Desiring less, I better shall increase 40 My tiny revenues, 41 Than if to Alyattes' wide domains 42 I join'd the realms of Mygdon. Great desires 43

	42 campis continuem. multa petentibus 43 desunt multa: bene est cui deus obtulit 44 parca quod satis est manu.	Sort with great wants. 'Tis best, when prayer obtains 44 No more than life requires.
3.17	1 Aeli vetusto nobilis ab Lamo, 2 quando et priores hinc Lamias ferunt 3 denominatos et nepotum 4 per memores genus omne fastos, 5 auctore ab illo ducis originem, 6 qui Formiarum moenia dicitur 7 princeps et innantem Maricae 8 litoribus tenuisse Lirim, 9 late tyrannus:— cras foliis nemus 10 multis et alga litus inutili 11 demissa tempestas ab Euro 12 sternet, aquae nisi fallit augur 13 annosa cornix. dum potes, aridum 14 conpone lignum: cras genium mero 15 curabis et porco bimenstri 16 cum famulis operum solutis.	1 Aelius, of Lamus' ancient name 2 (For since from that high parentage 3 The prehistoric Lamias came 4 And all who fill the storied page, 5 No doubt you trace your line from him, 6 Who stretch'd his sway o'er Formiae, 7 And Liris, whose still waters swim 8 Whore green Marica skirts the sea, 9 Lord of broad realms), an eastern gale 10 Will blow to-morrow, and bestrew 11 The shore with weeds, with leaves the vale, 12 If rain's old prophet tell me true, 13 The raven. Gather, while 'tis fine, 14 Your wood; tomorrow shall be gay 15 With smoking pig and streaming wine, 16 And lord and slave keep holyday.
3.18	1 Faune, Nympharum fugientum amator, 2 per meos finis et aprica rura 3 lenis incedas abeasque parvis 4 aequus alumnis, 5 si tener pleno cadit haedus anno 6 larga nec desunt Veneris sodali 7 vina craterae, vetus ara multo 8 fumat odore. 9 ludit herboso pecus omne campo 10 cum tibi nonae redeunt Decembres, 11 festus in pratis vacat otioso 12 cum bove pagus, 13 inter audacis lupus errat agnos, 14 spargit agrestis tibi silva frondes, 15 gaudet invisam pepulisse fossor 16 ter pede terram.	1 O wont the flying Nymphs to woo, 2 Good Faunus, through my sunny farm 3 Pass gently, gently pass, nor do 4 My younglings harm. 5 Each year, thou know'st, a kid must die 6 For thee; nor lacks the wine's full stream 7 To Venus' mate, the bowl; and high 8 The altars steam. 9 Sure as December's Nones appear, 10 All o'er the grass the cattle play; 11 The village, with the lazy steer, 12 Keeps holyday. 13 Wolves rove among the fearless sheep; 14 The woods for thee their foliage strow; 15 The delver loves on earth to leap, 16 His ancient foe.
3.19	1 Quantum distet ab Inacho 2 Codrus pro patria non timidus mori 3 narras et genus Aeaci 4 et pugnata sacro bella sub Ilio: 5 quo Chium pretio cadum 6 mercemur, quis aquam temperet ignibus, 7 quo praebente domum et quota 8 Paelignis caream frigoribus, taces. 9 da lunae propere novae, 10 da noctis mediae, da, puer, auguris 11 Murenae: tribus aut novem 12 miscentur cyathis pocula commodis. 13 qui Musas amat imparis, 14 ternos ter cyathos attonitus petet 15 vates; tris prohibet supra 16 rixarum metuens tangere Gratia 17 nudis iuncta sororibus. 18 insanire iuvat: cur Berecyntiae 19 cessant flamina tibiae?	1 What the time from Inachus 2 To Codrus, who in patriot battle fell, 3 Who were sprung from Aeacus, 4 And how men fought at Ilion,—this you tell. 5 What the wines of Chios cost, 6 Who with due heat our water can allay, 7 What the hour, and who the host 8 To give us house-room,—this you will not say 9 Ho, there! wine to moonrise, wine 10 To midnight, wine to our new augur too! 11 Nine to three or three to nine, 12 As each man pleases, makes proportion true. 13 Who the uneven Muses loves, 14 Will fire his dizzy brain with three times three; 15 Three once told the Grace approves; 16 She with her two bright sisters, gay and free, 17 Shrinks, as maiden should, from strife: 18 But I'm for madness. What has dull'd the fire 19 Of the Berecyntian fife? 20

	20 cur pendet tacita fistula cum lyra? 21 parcentis ego dexteras 22 odi: sparge rosas, audiat invidus 23 dementem strepitum Lycus 24 et vicina seni non habilis Lyco. 25 spissa te nitidum coma, 26 puro te similem, Telephe, Vespero 27 tempestiva petit Rhode; 28 me lentus Glycerae torret amor meae.	Why hangs the flute in silence with the lyre? 21 Out on niggard-handed boys! 22 Rain showers of roses; let old Lycus hear, 23 Envious churl, our senseless noise, 24 And she, our neighbour, his ill-sorted fere. 25 You with your bright clustering hair, 26 Your beauty, Telephus, like evening's sky, 27 Rhoda loves, as young, as fair; 28 I for my Glycera slowly, slowly die.
3.20	1 Non vides, quanto moveas periclo, 2 Pyrrhe, Gaetulae catulos leaenae? 3 dura post paulo fugies inaudax 4 proelia raptor, 5 cum per obstantis iuvenum catervas 6 ibit insignem repetens Nearchum: 7 grande certamen, tibi praeda cedat, 8 maior an illa. 9 interim, dum tu celeres sagittas 10 promis, haec dentis acuit timendos, 11 arbiter pugnae posuisse nudo 12 sub pede palmam 13 fertur et leni recreare vento 14 sparsum odoratis umerum capillis, 15 qualis aut Nireus fuit aut aquosa 16 raptus ab Ida.
3.21	1 O nata mecum consule Manlio, 2 seu tu querellas sive geris iocos 3 seu rixam et insanos amores 4 seu facilem, pia testa, somnum, 5 quocumque lectum nomine Massicum 6 servas, moveri digna bono die, 7 descende Corvino iubente 8 promere languidiora vina. 9 non ille, quamquam Socraticis madet 10 sermonibus, te neglegit horridus: 11 narratur et prisci Catonis 12 saepe mero caluisse virtus. 13 tu lene tormentum ingenio admoves 14 plerumque duro, tu sapientium 15 curas et arcanum iocoso 16 consilium retegis Lyaeo, 17 tu spem reducis mentibus anxiis 18 virisque et addis cornua pauperi 19 post te neque iratos trementi 20 regum apices neque militum arma. 21 te Liber et si laeta aderit Venus 22 segnesque nodum solvere Gratiae 23 vivaeque producent lucernae, 24 dum rediens fugat astra Phoebus.	1 O born in Manlius' year with me, 2 Whate'er you bring us, plaint or jest, 3 Or passion and wild revelry, 4 Or, like a gentle wine-jar, rest; 5 Howe'er men call your Massic juice, 6 Its broaching claims a festal day; 7 Come then; Corvinus bids produce 8 A mellower wine, and I obey. 9 Though steep'd in all Socratic lore 10 He will not slight you; do not fear. 11 They say old Cato o'er and o'er 12 With wine his honest heart would cheer. 13 Tough wits to your mild torture yield 14 Their treasures; you unlock the soul 15 Of wisdom and its stores conceal'd, 16 Arm'd with Lyaeus' kind control. 17 'Tis yours the drooping heart to heal; 18 Your strength uplifts the poor man's horn; 19 Inspired by you, the soldier's steel, 20 The monarch's crown, he laughs to scorn, 21 Liber and Venus, wills she so, 22 And sister Graces, ne'er unknit, 23 And living lamps shall see you flow 24 Till stars before the sunrise flit.
3.22	1 Montium custos nemorumque, virgo, 2 quae laborantis utero puellas 3 ter vocata audis adimisque leto, 4 diva triformis, 5 imminens villae tua pinus esto, 6 quam per exactos ego laetus annos	1 Guardian of hill and woodland, Maid, 2 Who to young wives in childbirth's hour 3 Thrice call'd, vouchsafest sovereign aid, 4 O three-form'd power! 5 This pine that shades my cot be thine; 6 Here will I slay, as years come round,

	7 verris obliquum meditantis ictum 8 sanguine donem.	7 A youngling boar, whose tusks design 8 The side-long wound.
3.23	1 Caelo supinas si tuleris manus 2 nascente luna, rustica Phidyle, 3 si ture placaris et horna 4 fruge Laris avidaque porca: 5 nec pestilentem sentiet Africum 6 fecunda vitis nec sterilem seges 7 robiginem aut dulces alumni 8 pomifero grave tempus anno. 9 nam quae nivali pascitur Algido 10 devota quercus inter et ilices 11 aut crescit Albanis in herbis 12 victima, pontificum securis 13 cervice tinguet: te nihil attinet 14 temptare multa caede bidentium 15 parvos coronantem marino 16 rore deos fragilique myrto. 17 inmunis aram si tetigit manus, 18 non sumptuosa blandior hostia, 19 mollivit aversos Penatis 20 farre pio et saliente mica.	1 If, Phidyle, your hands you lift 2 To heaven, as each new moon is born, 3 Soothing your Lares with the gift 4 Of slaughter'd swine, and spice, and corn, 5 Ne'er shall Scirocco's bane assail 6 Your vines, nor mildew blast your wheat. 7 Ne'er shall your tender younglings fail 8 In autumn, when the fruits are sweet. 9 The destined victim 'mid the snows 10 Of Algidus in oakwoods fed, 11 Or where the Alban herbage grows, 12 Shall dye the pontiff's axes red; 13 No need of butcher'd sheep for you 14 To make your homely prayers prevail; 15 Give but your little gods their due, 16 The rosemary twined with myrtle frail. 17 The sprinkled salt, the votive meal, 18 As soon their favour will regain, 19 Let but the hand be pure and leal, 20 As all the pomp of heifers slain.
3.24.1	1 Intactis opulentior 2 thesauris Arabum et divitis Indiae 3 caementis licet occupes 4 terrenum omne tuis et mare publicum: 5 si figit adamantinos 6 summis verticibus dira Necessitas 7 clavos, non animum metu, 8 non mortis laqueis expedies caput. 9 campestres melius Scythae, 10 quorum plaustra vagas rite trahunt domos 11 vivunt et rigidi Getae, 12 inmetata quibus iugera liberas 13 fruges et Cererem ferunt 14 nec cultura placet longior annua 15 defunctumque laboribus 16 aequali recreat sorte vicarius. 17 illic matre carentibus 18 privignis mulier temperat innocens 19 nec dotata regit virum 20 coniunx nec nitido fidit adultero; 21 dos est magna parentium 22 virtus et metuens alterius viri 23 certo foedere castitas, 24 et peccare nefas aut pretium est mori. 25 o quisquis volet inpias 26 caedis et rabiem tollere civicam, 27 si quaeret pater urbium 28 subscribi statuis, indomitam audeat 29 refrenare licentiam, 30 clarus postgenitis: quatenus, heu nefas	1 Though your buried wealth surpass 2 The unsunn'd gold of Ind or Araby, 3 Though with many a ponderous mass 4 You crowd the Tuscan and Apulian sea, 5 Let Necessity but drive 6 Her wedge of adamant into that proud head, 7 Vainly battling will you strive 8 To 'scape Death's noose, or rid your soul of dread. 9 Better life the Scythians lead, 10 Trailing on waggon wheels their wandering home, 11 Or the hardy Getan breed, 12 As o'er their vast unmeasured steppes they roam; 13 Free the crops that bless their soil; 14 Their tillage wearies after one year's space; 15 Each in turn fulfils his toil; 16 His period o'er, another takes his place. 17 There the step-dame keeps her hand 18 From guilty plots, from blood of orphans clean; 19 There no downed wives command 20 Their feeble lords, or on adulterers lean. 21 Theirs are dowries not of gold, 22 Their parents' worth, their own pure chastity, 23 True to one, to others cold; 24 They dare not sin, or, if they dare, they die. 25 O, whoe'er has heart and head 26 To stay our plague of blood, our civic brawls, 27 Would he that his name be read 28 “Father of Rome” on lofty pedestals, 29 Let him chain this lawless will, 30 And be our children's hero! cursed spite!

3.24.31	31 virtutem incolumem odimus, 32 sublatam ex oculis quaerimus invidi. 33 quid tristes querimoniae, 34 si non supplicio culpa reciditur, 35 quid leges sine moribus 36 vanae proficiunt, si neque fervidis 37 pars inclusa caloribus 38 mundi nec Boreae finitimum latus 39 durataeque solo nives 40 mercatorem abigunt, horrida callidi 41 vincunt aequora navitae, 42 magnum pauperies opprobrium iubet 43 quidvis et facere et pati 44 virtutisque viam deserit arduae? 45 vel nos in Capitolium, 46 quo clamor vocat et turba faventium, 47 vel nos in mare proximum 48 gemmas et lapides aurum et inutile, 49 summi materiem mali, 50 mittamus, scelerum si bene paenitet. 51 eradenda cupidinis 52 pravi sunt elementa et tenerae nimis 53 mentes asperioribus 54 formandae studiis. nescit equo rudis 55 haerere ingenuus puer 56 venarique timet, ludere doctior, 57 seu Graeco iubeas trocho 58 seu malis vetita legibus alea, 59 cum periura patris fides 60 consortem socium fallat et hospites	31 Living worth we envy still, 32 Then seek it with strain'd eyes, when snatch'd from sight. 33 What can sad laments avail 34 Unless sharp justice kill the taint of sin? 35 What can laws, that needs must fail 36 Shorn of the aid of manners form'd within, 37 If the merchant turns not back 38 From the fierce heats that round the tropic glow, 39 Turns not from the regions black 40 With northern winds, and hard with frozen snow; 41 Sailors override the wave, 42 While guilty poverty, more fear'd than vice. 43 Bids us crime and suffering brave, 44 And shuns the ascent of virtue's precipice? 45 Let the Capitolian fane, 46 The favour'd goal of yon vociferous crowd, 47 Aye, or let the nearest main 48 Receive our gold, our jewels rich and proud: 49 Slay we thus the cause of crime, 50 If yet we would repent and choose the good: 51 Ours the task to take in time 52 This baleful lust, and crush it in the bud. 53 Ours to mould our weakling sons 54 To nobler sentiment and manlier deed: 55 Now the noble's first-born shuns 56 The perilous chase, nor learns to sit his steed: 57 Set him to the unlawful dice, 58 Or Grecian hoop, how skilfully he plays! 59 While his sire, mature in vice, 60 A friend, a partner, or a guest betrays,
3.24.61	61 indignoque pecuniam 62 heredi properet. scilicet inprobae 63 crescunt divitiae, tamen 64 curtae nescio quid semper abest rei.	61 Hurrying, for an heir so base, 62 To gather riches. Money, root of ill, 63 Doubt it not, still grows apace: 64 Yet the scant heap has somewhat lacking still.
3.25	1 Quo me, Bacche, rapis tui 2 plenum? quae nemora aut quos agor in specus, 3 velox mente nova? quibus 4 antris egregii Caesaris audiar 5 aeternum meditans decus 6 stellis inserere et consilio Iovis? 7 dicam insigne, recens, adhuc 8 indictum ore alio. non secus in iugis 9 exsomnis stupet Euhias 10 Hebrum prospiciens et nive candidam 11 Thracen ac pede barbaro 12 lustratam Rhodopen, ut mihi devio 13 ripas et vacuum nemus 14 mirari libet. o Naiadum potens 15 Baccharumque valentium 16 proceras manibus vertere fraxinos, 17 nil parvum aut humili modo,	1 Whither, Bacchus, tear'st thou me. 2 FiIl'd with thy strength? What dens, what forests these, 3 Thus in wildering race I see? 4 What cave shall hearken to my melodies, 5 Tuned to tell of Caesar's praise 6 And throne him high the heavenly ranks among? 7 Sweet and strange shall be my lays, 8 A tale till now by poet voice unsung. 9 As the Evian on the height, 10 Roused from her sleep, looks wonderingly abroad, 11 Looks on Thrace with snow-drifts white, 12 And Rhodope by barbarous footstep trod, 13 So my truant eyes admire 14 The banks, the desolate forests. O great King 15 Who the Naiads dost inspire, 16 And Bacchants, strong from earth huge trees to wring! 17 Not a lowly strain is mine, 18 No mere man's

	18 nil mortale loquar. dulce periculum est, 19 o Lenaee, sequi deum 20 cingentem viridi tempora pampino.	utterance. O, 'tis venture sweet 19 Thee to follow, God of wine, 20 Making the vine-branch round thy temples meet!
3.26	1 Vixi puellis nuper idoneus 2 et militavi non sine gloria; 3 nunc arma defunctumque bello 4 barbiton hic paries habebit, 5 laevum marinae qui Veneris latus 6 custodit. hic, hic ponite lucida 7 funalia et vectis et arcus 8 oppositis foribus minacis. 9 o quae beatam diva tenes Cyprum et 10 Memphin carentem Sithonia nive, 11 regina, sublimi flagello 12 tange Chloen semel arrogantem.	1 For ladies' love I late was fit, 2 And good success my warfare blest, 3 But now my arms, my lyre I quit, 4 And hang them up to rust or rest. 5 Here, where arising from the sea 6 Stands Venus, lay the load at last, 7 Links, crowbars, and artillery, 8 Threatening all doors that dared be fast. 9 O Goddess! Cyprus owns thy sway, 10 And Memphis, far from Thracian snow; 11 Raise high thy lash, and deal me, pray, 12 That haughty Chloe just one blow!
3.27.1	1 Inpios parrae recinentis omen 2 ducat et praegnans canis aut ab agro 3 rava decurrens lupa Lanuvino 4 fetaque volpes; 5 rumpat et serpens iter institutum, 6 si per obliquum similis sagittae 7 terruit mannos: ego cui timebo, 8 providus auspex, 9 antequam stantis repetat paludes 10 imbrium divina avis imminentium, 11 oscinem corvum prece suscitabo 12 solis ab ortu. 13 sis licet felix, ubicumque mavis, 14 et memor nostri, Galatea, vivas 15 teque nec laevos vetet ire picus 16 nec vaga cornix. 17 sed vides, quanto trepidet tumultu 18 pronus Orion. ego quid sit ater 19 Hadriae novi sinus et quid albus 20 peccet Iapyx. 21 hostium uxores puerique caecos 22 sentiant motus orientis Austri et 23 aequoris nigri fremitum et trementis 24 verbere ripas. 25 sic et Europe niveum doloso 26 credidit tauro latus et scatentem 27 beluis pontum mediasque fraudes 28 palluit audax. 29 nuper in pratis studiosa florum et 30 debitae Nymphis opifex coronae	1 When guilt goes forth, let lapwings shrill, 2 And dogs and foxes great with young, 3 And wolves from far Lanuvian hill, 4 Give clamorous tongue: 5 Across the roadway dart the snake, 6 Frightening, like arrow loosed from string, 7 The horses. I, for friendship's sake, 8 Watching each wing, 9 Ere to his haunt, the stagnant marsh, 10 The harbinger of tempest flies, 11 Will call the raven, croaking harsh, 12 From eastern skies. 13 Farewell!—and wheresoe'er you go, 14 My Galatea, think of me: 15 Let lefthand pie and roving crow 16 Still leave you free. 17 But mark with what a front of fear 18 Orion lowers. Ah! well I know 19 How Hadria glooms, how falsely clear 20 The west-winds blow. 21 Let foemen's wives and children feel 22 The gathering south-wind's angry roar, 23 The black wave's crash, the thunder-peal, 24 The quivering shore. 25 So to the bull Europa gave 26 Her beauteous form, and when she saw 27 The monstrous deep, the yawning grave, 28 Grew pale with awe. 29 That morn of meadow-flowers she thought, 30 Weaving a crown the nymphs to please:
3.27.31	31 nocte sublustri nihil astra praeter 32 vidit et undas. 33 quae simul centum tetigit potentem 34 oppidis Creten, “pater, o relictum 35 filiae nomen pietasque” dixit 36 “victa furore! 37 unde quo veni? levis una mors est 38 virginum culpae. vigilansne ploro 39 turpe conmissum an vitiis carentem	31 That gloomy night she look'd on nought 32 But stars and seas. 33 Then, as in hundred-citied Crete 34 She landed,—“O my sire!” she said, 35 “O childly duty! passion's heat 36 Has struck thee dead. 37 Whence came I? death, for maiden's shame, 38 Were little. Do I wake to weep 39 My sin? or am I pure of blame, 40 And is it sleep

	40 ludit imago 41 vana, quae porta fugiens eburna 42 somnium ducit? meliusne fluctus 43 ire per longos fuit an recentis 44 carpere flores? 45 siquis infamem mihi nunc iuvencum 46 dedat iratae, lacerare ferro et 47 frangere enitar modo multum amati 48 cornua monstri. 49 inpudens liqui patrios Penates, 50 inpudens Orcum moror. o deorum 51 siquis haec audis, utinam inter errem 52 nuda leones. 53 antequam turpis macies decentis 54 occupet malas teneraeque sucus 55 defluat praedae, speciosa quaero 56 pascere tigris 57 “vilis Europe” pater urget absens: 58 “quid mori cessas? potes hac ab orno 59 pendulum zona bene te secuta 60 laedere collum.	41 From dreamland brings a form to trick 42 My senses? Which was best? to go 43 Over the long, long waves, or pick 44 The flowers in blow? 45 O, were that monster made my prize, 46 How would I strive to wound that brow, 47 How tear those horns, my frantic eyes 48 Adored but now! 49 Shameless I left my father's home; 50 Shameless I cheat the expectant grave; 51 O heaven, that naked I might roam 52 In lions' cave! 53 Now, ere decay my bloom devour 54 Or thin the richness of my blood, 55 Fain would I fall in youth's first flower, 56 The tigers' food. 57 Hark! 'tis my father—‘Worthless one! 58 What, yet alive? the oak is nigh. 59 'Twas well you kept your maiden zone, 60 The noose to tie.
3.27.61	61 sive te rupes et acuta leto 62 saxa delectant, age te procellae 63 crede veloci, nisi erile mavis 64 carpere pensum 65 regius sanguis dominaeque tradi 66 barbarae paelex.”” aderat querenti 67 perfidum ridens Venus et remisso 68 filius arcu. 69 mox ubi lusit satis, “abstineto” 70 dixit “irarum calidaeque rixae, 71 cum tibi invisus laceranda reddet 72 cornua taurus. 73 uxor invicti Iovis esse nescis. 74 mitte singultus, bene ferre magnam 75 disce fortunam; tua sectus orbis 76 nomina ducet.”	61 Or if your choice be that rude pike, 62 New barb'd with death, leap down and ask 63 The wind to bear you. Would you like 64 The bondmaid's task, 65 You, child of kings, a master's toy, 66 A mistress' slave?’” Beside her, lo! 67 Stood Venus smiling, and her boy 68 With unstrung bow. 69 Then, when her laughter ceased, “Have done 70 With fume and fret,” she cried, “my fair; 71 That odious bull will give you soon 72 His horns to tear. 73 You know not you are Jove's own dame: 74 Away with sobbing; be resign'd 75 To greatness: you shall give your name 76 To half mankind.”
3.28	1 Festo quid potius die 2 Neptuni faciam? prome reconditum, 3 Lyde, strenua Caecubum, 4 munitaeque adhibe vim sapientiae. 5 inclinare meridiem 6 sentis et, veluti stet volucris dies, 7 parcis deripere horreo 8 cessantem Bibuli consulis amphoram. 9 nos cantabimus invicem 10 Neptunum et viridis Nereidum comas; 11 tu curva recines lyra 12 Latonam et celeris spicula Cynthiae; 13 summo carmine quae Cnidon 14 fulgentisque tenet Cycladas et Paphon 15 iunctis visit oloribus 16 dicetur, merita Nox quoque nenia.	1 Neptune's feast-day! what should man 2 Think first of doing? Lyde mine, be bold, 3 Broach the treasured Caecuban, 4 And batter Wisdom in her own stronghold. 5 Now the noon has pass'd the full, 6 Yet sure you deem swift Time has made a halt, 7 Tardy as you are to pull 8 Old Bibulus' wine-jar from its sleepy vault. 9 I will take my turn and sing 10 Neptune and Nereus' train with locks of green; 11 You shall warble to the string 12 Latona and her Cynthia's arrowy sheen. 13 Hers our latest song, who sways 14 Cnidos and Cyclads, and to Paphos goes 15 With her swans, on holydays; 16 Night too shall claim the homage music owes.

3.29.1	1 Tyrrhena regum progenies, tibi 2 non ante verso lene merum cado 3 cum flore, Maecenas, rosarum et 4 pressa tuis balanus capillis 5 iamdudum apud me est: eripe te morae 6 ne semper udum Tibur et Aefulae 7 declive contempleris arvum et 8 Telegoni iuga parricidae. 9 fastidiosam desere copiam et 10 molem propinquam nubibus arduis, 11 omitte mirari beatae 12 fumum et opes strepitumque Romae. 13 plerumque gratae divitibus vices 14 mundaeque parvo sub lare pauperum 15 cenae sine aulaeis et ostro 16 sollicitam explicuere frontem. 17 Iam clarus occultum Andromedae pater 18 ostendit ignem, iam Procyon furit 19 et stella vesani Leonis, 20 sole dies referente siccos; 21 iam pastor umbras cum grege languido 22 rivumque fessus quaerit et horidi 23 dumeta Silvani, caretque 24 ripa vagis taciturna ventis. 25 tu civitatem quis deceat status 26 curas et urbi sollicitus times 27 quid Seres et regnata Cyro 28 Bactra parent Tanaisque discors. 29 prudens futuri temporis exitum 30 caliginosa nocte premit deus	1 Heir of Tyrrhenian kings, for you 2 A mellow cask, unbroach'd as yet, 3 Maecenas mine, and roses new, 4 And fresh-drawn oil your locks to wet, 5 Are waiting here. Delay not still, 6 Nor gaze on Tibur, never dried, 7 And sloping Aesule, and the hill 8 Of Telegon the parricide. 9 O leave that pomp that can but tire, 10 Those piles, among the clouds at home; 11 Cease for a moment to admire 12 The smoke, the wealth, the noise of Rome! 13 In change e'en luxury finds a zest: 14 The poor man's supper, neat, but spare, 15 With no gay couch to seat the guest, 16 Has smooth'd the rugged brow of care. 17 Now glows the Ethiop maiden's sire; 18 Now Procyon rages all ablaze; 19 The Lion maddens in his ire, 20 As suns bring back the sultry days: 21 The shepherd with his weary sheep 22 Seeks out the streamlet and the trees, 23 Silvanus' lair: the still banks sleep 24 Untroubled by the wandering breeze. 25 You ponder on imperial schemes, 26 And o'er the city's danger brood: 27 Bactrian and Serian haunt your dreams, 28 And Tanais, toss'd by inward feud. 29 The issue of the time to be 30 Heaven wisely hides in blackest night,
3.29.31	31 ridetque, si mortalis ultra 32 fas trepidat. quod adest memento 33 conponere aequos; cetera fluminis 34 ritu feruntur, nunc medio alveo 35 cum pace delabentis Etruscum 36 in mare, nunc lapides adesos 37 stirpisque raptas et pecus et domos 38 volventis una, non sine montium 39 clamore vicinaeque silvae, 40 cum fera diluvies quietos 41 inritat amnis. ille potens sui 42 laetusque deget cui licet in diem 43 dixisse “vixi: cras vel atra 44 nube polum pater occupato 45 vel sole puro; non tamen inritum 46 quodcumque retro est efficiet neque 47 diffinget infectumque reddet 48 quod fugiens semel hora vexit.” 49 Fortuna saevo laeta negotio et 50 ludum insolentem ludere pertinax 51 transmutat incertos honores, 52 nunc mihi nunc alii benigna. 53 laudo manentem; si celeres quatit	31 And laughs, should man's anxiety 32 Transgress the bounds of man's short sight. 33 Control the present: all beside 34 Flows like a river seaward borne, 35 Now rolling on its placid tide, 36 Now whirling massy trunks uptorn, 37 And waveworn crags, and farms, and stock, 38 In chaos blent, while hill and wood 39 Reverberate to the enormous shock, 40 When savage rains the tranquil flood 41 Have stirr'd to madness. Happy he, 42 Self-centred, who each night can say, 43 “My life is lived: the morn may see 44 A clouded or a sunny day: 45 That rests with Jove: but what is gone, 46 He will not, cannot turn to nought; 47 Nor cancel, as a thing undone, 48 What once the flying hour has brought.” 49 Fortune, who loves her cruel game, 50 Still bent upon some heartless whim, 51 Shifts her caresses, fickle dame, 52 Now kind to me, and now to him: 53 She stays; 'tis well: but let her shake 54

	54 pennas, resigno quae dedit et mea 55 virtute me involvo probamque 56 pauperiem sine dote quaero. 57 non est meum, si mugiat Africis 58 malus procellis, ad miseras preces 59 decurrere et votis pacisci 60 ne Cypriae Tyriaeque merces	Those wings, her presents I resign, 55 Cloak me in native worth, and take 56 Chaste Poverty undower'd for mine. 57 Though storms around my vessel rave, 58 I will not fall to craven prayers, 59 Nor bargain by my vows to save 60 My Cyprian and Sidonian wares,
3.29.61	61 addant avaro divitias mari: 62 tunc me biremis praesidio scaphae 63 tutum per Aegaeos tumultus 64 aura feret geminusque Pollux.	61 Else added to the insatiate main. 62 Then through the wild Aegean roar 63 The breezes and the Brethren Twain 64 Shall waft my little boat ashore.
3.30	1 Exegi monumentum aere perennius 2 regalique situ pyramidum altius, 3 quod non imber edax, non aquilo impotens 4 possit diruere aut innumerabilis 5 annorum series et fuga temporum. 6 non omnis moriar multaque pars mei 7 vitabit Libitinam; usque ego postera 8 crescam laude recens, dum Capitolium 9 scandet cum tacita virgine pontifex. 10 dicar, qua violens obstrepit Aufidus 11 et qua pauper aquae Daunus agrestium 12 regnavit populorum, ex humili potens, 13 princeps Aeolium carmen ad Italos 14 deduxisse modos. sume superbiam 15 quaesitam meritis et mihi Delphica 16 lauro cinge volens, Melpomene, comam.	1 And now 'tis done: more durable than brass 2 My monument shall be, and raise its head 3 O'er royal pyramids: it shall not dread 4 Corroding rain or angry Boreas, 5 Nor the long lapse of immemorial time. 6 I shall not wholly die: large residue 7 Shall 'scape the queen of funerals. Ever new 8 My after fame shall grow, while pontiffs climb 9 With silent maids the Capitolian height. 10 “Born,” men will say, “where Aufidus is loud, 11 Where Daunus, scant of streams, beneath him bow'd 12 The rustic tribes, from dimness he wax'd bright, 13 First of his race to wed the Aeolian lay 14 To notes of Italy.” Put glory on, 15 My own Melpomene, by genius won, 16 And crown me of thy grace with Delphic bay.
4.1	1 Intermissa, Venus, diu 2 rursus bella moves? parce, precor precor. 3 non sum qualis eram bonae 4 sub regno Cinarae. desine, dulcium 5 mater saeva Cupidinum, 6 circa lustra decem flectere mollibus 7 iam durum imperiis: abi, 8 quo blandae iuvenum te revocant preces. 9 tempestivius in domum 10 Pauli purpureis ales oloribus 11 comissabere Maximi, 12 si torrere iecur quaeris idoneum; 13 namque et nobilis et decens 14 et pro sollicitis non tacitus reis 15 et centum puer artium 16 late signa feret militiae tuae 17 et, quandoque potentior 18 largi muneribus riserit aemuli, 19 Albanos prope te lacus 20 ponet marmoream sub trabe citrea. 21 illic plurima naribus 22 duces tura lyraeque et Berecyntiae 23 delectabere tibiae	1 Yet again thou wak'st the flame 2 That long had slumber'd! Spare me, Venus, spare! 3 Trust me, I am not the same 4 As in the reign of Cinara, kind and fair. 5 Cease thy softening spells to prove 6 On this old heart, by fifty years made hard, 7 Cruel Mother of sweet Love! 8 Haste, where gay youth solicits thy regard. 9 With thy purple cygnets fly 10 To Paullus' door, a seasonable guest; 11 There within hold revelry, 12 There light thy flame in that congenial breast. 13 He, with birth and beauty graced, 14 The trembling client's champion, ne'er tongue-tied, 15 Master of each manly taste, 16 Shall bear thy conquering banners far and wide. 17 Let him smile in triumph gay, 18 True heart, victorious over lavish hand, 19 By the Alban lake that day 20 'Neath citron roof all marble shalt thou stand: 21 Incense there and fragrant spice 22 With odorous fumes thy nostrils shall salute; 23 Blended notes thine ear entice, 24 The lyre, the pipe, the 24 mixtis carminibus non sine fistula; 25 illic bis pueri die 26 numen cum teneris virginibus tuum 27 laudantes pede candido 28 in morem Salium ter quatient humum. 29 me nec femina nec puer 30 iam nec spes animi credula mutui 31 nec certare iuvat mero 32 nec vincire novis tempora floribus. 33 sed cur heu, Ligurine, cur 34 manat rara meas lacrima per genas? 35 cur facunda parum decoro 36 inter verba cadit lingua silentio? 37 nocturnis ego somniis 38 iam captum teneo, iam volucrem sequor 39 te per gramina Martii 40 campi, te per aquas, dure, volubilis.	Berecyntine flute: 25 Graceful youths and maidens bright 26 Shall twice a day thy tuneful praise resound, 27 While their feet, so fair and white, 28 In Salian measure three times beat the ground. 29 I can relish love no more, 30 Nor flattering hopes that tell me hearts are true, 31 Nor the revel's loud uproar, 32 Nor fresh-wreathed flowerets, bathed in vernal dew. 33 Ah! but why, my Ligurine, 34 Steal trickling tear-drops down my wasted cheek? 35 Wherefore halts this tongue of mine, 36 So eloquent once, so faltering now and weak? 37 Now I hold you in my chain, 38 And clasp you close, all in a nightly dream; 39 Now, still dreaming, o'er the plain 40 I chase you; now, ah cruel! down the stream.

4.2.1	1 Pindarum quisquis studet aemulari, 2 Iulle, ceratis ope Daedalea 3 nititur pennis vitreo daturus 4 nomina ponto. 5 monte decurrens velut amnis, imbres 6 quem super notas aluere ripas, 7 fervet inmensusque ruit profundo 8 Pindarus ore, 9 laurea donandus Apollinari, 10 seu per audacis nova dithyrambos 11 verba devolvit numerisque fertur 12 lege solutis, 13 seu deos regesque canit, deorum 14 sanguinem, per quos cecidere iusta 15 morte Centauri, cecidit tremendae 16 flamma Chimaerae, 17 sive quos Elea domum reducit 18 palma caelestis pugilemve equomve 19 dicit et centum potiore signis 20 munere donat, 21 flebili sponsae iuvenemve raptum 22 plorat et viris animumque moresque 23 aureos educit in astra nigroque 24 invidet Orco. 25 multa Dircaeum levat aura cycnum, 26 tendit, Antoni, quotiens in altos 27 nubium tractus: ego apis Matinae 28 more modoque 29 grata carpentis thyma per laborem 30 plurimum circa nemus uvidique	1 Who fain at Pindar's flight would aim, 2 On waxen wings, Iulus, he 3 Soars heavenward, doom'd to give his name 4 To some new sea. 5 Pindar, like torrent from the steep 6 Which, swollen with rain, its banks o'erflows, 7 With mouth unfathomably deep, 8 Foams, thunders, glows, 9 All worthy of Apollo's bay, 10 Whether in dithyrambic roll 11 Pouring new words he burst away 12 Beyond control, 13 Or gods and god-born heroes tell, 14 Whose arm with righteous death could tame 15 Grim Centaurs, tame Chimaeras fell, 16 Out-breathing flame, 17 Or bid the boxer or the steed 18 In deathless pride of victory live, 19 And dower them with a nobler meed 20 Than sculptors give, 21 Or mourn the bridegroom early torn 22 From his young bride, and set on high 23 Strength, courage, virtue's golden morn, 24 Too good to die. 25 Antonius! yes, the winds blow free, 26 When Dirce's swan ascends the skies, 27 To waft him. I, like Matine bee, 28 In act and guise, 29 That culls its sweets through toilsome hours, 30 Am roaming Tibur's banks along,
4.2.31	31 Tiburis ripas operosa parvos 32 carmina fingo. 33 concines maiore poeta plectro 34 Caesarem, quandoque trahet ferocis 35 per sacrum clivum merita decorus 36 fronde Sygambros; 37 quo nihil maius meliusve terris 38 fata donavere bonique divi	31 And fashioning with puny powers 32 A laboured song. 33 Your Muse shall sing in loftier strain 34 How Caesar climbs the sacred height, 35 The fierce Sygambrians in his train, 36 With laurel dight, 37 Than whom the Fates ne'er gave mankind 38 A richer treasure or more dear, 39 Nor shall, though earth

	39 nec dabunt, quamvis redeant in aurum 40 tempora priscum. 41 concines laetosque dies et urbis 42 publicum ludum super inpetrato 43 fortis Augusti reditu forumque 44 litibus orbum. 45 tum meae, si quid loquar audiendum, 46 vocis accedet bona pars et “o sol 47 pulcher, o laudande!” canam recepto 48 Caesare felix. 49 teque, dum procedis, “Io Triumphe” 50 non semel dicemus, “Io Triumphe” 51 civitas omnis dabimusque divis 52 tura benignis. 53 te decem tauri totidemque vaccae, 54 me tener solvet vitulus, relicta 55 matre qui largis iuvenescit herbis 56 in mea vota, 57 fronte curvatos imitatus ignis 58 tertium lunae referentis ortum, 59 qua notam duxit, niveus videri, 60 cetera fulvos.	again should find 40 The golden year. 41 Your Muse shall tell of public sports, 42 And holyday, and votive feast, 43 For Caesar's sake, and brawling courts 44 Where strife has ceased. 45 Then, if my voice can aught avail, 46 Grateful for him our prayers have won, 47 My song shall echo, “Hail, all hail, 48 Auspicious Sun!” 49 There as you move, “Ho! Triumph, ho! 50 Great Triumph!” once and yet again 51 All Rome shall cry, and spices strow 52 Before your train. 53 Ten bulls, ten kine, your debt discharge: 54 A calf new-wean'd from parent cow, 55 Battening on pastures rich and large, 56 Shall quit my vow. 57 Like moon just dawning on the night 58 The crescent honours of his head; 59 One dapple spot of snowy white, 60 The rest all red.
4.3	1 Quem tu, Melpomene, semel 2 nascentem placido lumine videris, 3 illum non labor Isthmius 4 clarabit pugilem, non equos inpiger 5 curru ducet Achaico 6 victorem neque res bellica Deliis 7 ornatum foliis ducem, 8 quod regum tumidas contuderit minas, 9 ostendet Capitolio: 10 sed quae Tibur aquae fertile praefluunt 11 et spissae nemorum comae 12 fingent Aeolio carmine nobilem. 13 Romae principis urbium 14 dignatur suboles inter amabilis 15 vatum ponere me choros 16 et iam dente minus mordeor invido. 17 o testudinis aureae 18 dulcem quae strepitum, Pieri, temperas, 19 o mutis quoque piscibus 20 donatura cycni, si libeat, sonum, 21 totum muneris hoc tui est, 22 quod monstror digito praetereuntium 23 Romanae fidicen lyrae: 24 quod spiro et placeo, si placeo, tuum est.	1 He whom thou, Melpomene, 2 Hast welcomed with thy smile, in life arriving, 3 Ne'er by boxer's skill shall be 4 Renown'd abroad, for Isthmian mastery striving; 5 Him shall never fiery steed 6 Draw in Achaean car a conqueror seated; 7 Him shall never martial deed 8 Show, crown'd with bay, after proud kings defeated, 9 Climbing Capitolian steep: 10 But the cool streams that make green Tibur flourish, 11 And the tangled forest deep, 12 On soft Aeolian airs his fame shall nourish. 13 Rome, of cities first and best, 14 Deigns by her sons' according voice to hail me 15 Fellow-bard of poets blest, 16 And faint and fainter envy's growls assail me. 17 Goddess, whose Pierian art 18 The lyre's sweet sounds can modulate and measure, 19 Who to dumb fish canst impart 20 The music of the swan, if such thy pleasure: 21 O, 'tis all of thy dear grace 22 That every finger points me out in going 23 Lyrist of the Roman race; 24 Breath, power to charm, if mine, are thy bestowing!
4.4.1	1 Qualem ministrum fulminis alitem, 2 cui rex deorum regnum in avis vagas 3 permisit expertus fidelem	1 E'en as the lightning's minister, 2 Whom Jove o'er all the feather'd breed 3 Made sovereign, having proved him

	4 Iuppiter in Ganymede flavo, 5 olim iuventas et patrius vigor 6 nido laborum propulit inscium, 7 vernique iam nimbis remotis 8 insolitos docuere nisus 9 venti paventem, mox in ovilia 10 demisit hostem vividus impetus, 11 nunc in reluctantis dracones 12 egit amor dapis atque pugnae; 13 qualemve laetis caprea pascuis 14 intenta fulvae matris ab ubere 15 iam lacte depulsum leonem 16 dente novo peritura vidit: 17 videre Raetis bella sub Alpibus 18 Drusum gerentem Vindelici. quibus 19 mos unde deductus per omne 20 tempus Amazonia securi 21 dextras obarmet, quaerere distuli 22 nec scire fas est omnia, sed diu 23 lateque victrices catervae 24 consiliis iuvenis revictae 25 sensere, quid mens rite, quid indoles 26 nutrita faustis sub penetralibus 27 posset, quid Augusti paternus 28 in pueros animus Nerones. 29 fortes creantur fortibus et bonis: 30 est in iuvencis, est in equis patrum	sure 4 Erewhile on auburn Ganymede; 5 Stirr'd by warm youth and inborn power, 6 He quits the nest with timorous wing, 7 For winter's storms have ceased to lower, 8 And zephyrs of returuing spring 9 Tempt him to launch on unknown skies 10 Next on the fold he stoops downright; 11 Last on resisting serpents flies, 12 Athirst for foray and for flight: 13 As tender kidling on the grass 14 Espies, uplooking from her food, 15 A lion's whelp, and knows, alas! 16 Those new-set teeth shall drink her blood: 17 So look'd the Raetian mountaineers 18 On Drusus:—whence in every field 19 They learn'd through immemorial years 20 The Amazonian axe to wield, 21 I ask not now: not all of truth 22 We seekers find: enough to know 23 The wisdom of the princely youth 24 Has taught our erst victorious foe 25 What prowess dwells in boyish hearts 26 Rear'd in the shrine of a pure home, 27 What strength Augustus' love imparts 28 To Nero's seed, the hope of Rome. 29 Good sons and brave good sires approve: 30 Strong bullocks, fiery colts, attest
4.4.31	31 virtus neque inbellem feroces 32 progenerant aquilae columbam. 33 doctrina sed vim promovet insitam 34 rectique cultus pectora roborant; 35 utcumque defecere mores, 36 indecorant bene nata culpae. 37 quid debeas, o Roma, Neronibus, 38 testis Metaurum flumen et Hasdrubal 39 devictus et pulcher fugatis 40 ille dies Latio tenebris, 41 qui primus alma risit adorea, 42 dirus per urbis Afer ut Italas 43 ceu flamma per taedas vel Eurus 44 per Siculas equitavit undas. 45 post hoc secundis usque laboribus 46 Romana pubes crevit et inpio 47 vastata Poenorum tumultu 48 fana deos habuere rectos. 49 dixitque tandem perfidus Hannibal: 50 “cervi, luporum praeda rapacium, 51 sectamur ultro quos opimus 52 fallere et effugere est triumphus. 53 gens, quae cremato fortis ab Ilio 54 iactata Tuscis aequoribus sacra 55 natosque maturosque patres 56 pertulit Ausonias ad urbis, 57 duris ut ilex tonsa bipennibus 58 nigrae feraci frondis in Algido, 59 per damna, per caedis ab ipso	31 Their fathers' worth, nor weakling dove 32 Is hatch'd in savage eagle's nest. 33 But care draws forth the power within, 34 And cultured minds are strong for good: 35 Let manners fail, the plague of sin 36 Taints e'en the course of gentle blood. 37 How great thy debt to Nero's race, 38 O Rome, let red Metaurus say, 39 Slain Hasdrubal, and victory's grace 40 First granted on that glorious day 41 Which chased the clouds, and show'd the sun, 42 When Hannibal o'er Italy 43 Ran, as swift flames o'er pine-woods run, 44 Or Eurus o'er Sicilia's sea. 45 Henceforth, by fortune aiding toil, 46 Rome's prowess grew: her fanes, laid waste 47 By Punic sacrilege and spoil, 48 Beheld at length their gods replaced. 49 Then the false Libyan own'd his doom:— 50 “Weak deer, the wolves' predestined prey, 51 Blindly we rush on foes, from whom 52 'Twere triumph won to steal away. 53 That race which, strong from Ilion's fires, 54 Its gods, on Tuscan waters tost, 55 Its sons, its venerable sires, 56 Bore to Ausonia's citied coast; 57 That race, like oak by axes shorn 58 On Algidus with dark leaves rife, 59 Laughs carnage, havoc, all to scorn, 60

	60 ducit opes animumque ferro.	And draws new spirit from the knife.
4.4.61	61 non hydra secto corpore firmior 62 vinci dolentem crevit in Herculem 63 monstrumve submisere Colchi 64 maius Echioniaeve Thebae. 65 merses profundo, pulchrior evenit; 66 luctere, multa proruet integrum 67 cum laude victorem geretque 68 proelia coniugibus loquenda. 69 Carthagini iam non ego nuntios 70 mittam superbos: occidit, occidit 71 spes omnis et fortuna nostri 72 nominis Hasdrubale interempto. 73 nil Claudiae non perficient manus, 74 quas et benigno numine Iuppiter 75 defendit et curae sagaces 76 expediunt per acuta belli”.	61 Not the lopp'd Hydra task'd so sore 62 Alcides, chafing at the foil: 63 No pest so fell was born of yore 64 From Colchian or from Theban soil. 65 Plunged in the deep, it mounts to sight 66 More splendid: grappled, it will quell 67 Unbroken powers, and fight a fight 68 Whose story widow'd wives shall tell. 69 No heralds shall my deeds proclaim 70 To Carthage now: lost, lost is all: 71 A nation's hope, a nation's name, 72 They died with dying Hasdrubal.” 73 What will not Claudian hands achieve? 74 Jove's favour is their guiding star, 75 And watchful potencies unweave 76 For them the tangled paths of war.
4.5	1 Divis orte bonis, optume Romulae 2 custos gentis, abes iam nimium diu; 3 maturum reditum pollicitus patrum 4 sancto concilio redi. 5 lucem redde tuae, dux bone, patriae: 6 instar veris enim voltus ubi tuus 7 adfulsit populo, gratior it dies 8 et soles melius nitent. 9 ut mater iuvenem, quem Notus invido 10 flatu Carpathii trans maris aequora 11 cunctantem spatio longius annuo 12 dulci distinet a domo, 13 votis ominibusque et precibus vocat 14 curvo nec faciem litore dimovet: 15 sic desideriis icta fidelibus 16 quaerit patria Caesarem. 17 tutus bos etenim rura perambulat, 18 nutrit rura Ceres almaque Faustitas, 19 pacatum volitant per mare navitae; 20 culpari metuit fides, 21 nullis polluitur casta domus stupris, 22 mos et lex maculosum edomuit nefas, 23 laudantur simili prole puerperae, 24 culpam poena premit comes. 25 quis Parthum paveat, quis gelidum Scythen, 26 quis Germania quos horrida parturit 27 fetus incolumi Caesare? quis ferae 28 bellum curet Hiberiae? 29 condit quisque diem collibus in suis 30 et vitem viduas ducit ad arbores; 31 hinc ad vina redit laetus et alteris 32 te mensis adhibet deum; 33 te multa prece, te prosequitur mero 34 defuso pateris et Laribus tuum 35 miscet numen, uti Graecia Castoris 36 et magni memor Herculis. 37 “longas o utinam, dux bone, ferias	1 Best guardian of Rome's people, dearest boon 2 Of a kind Heaven, thou lingerest all too long: 3 Thou bad'st thy senate look to meet thee soon: 4 Do not thy promise wrong. 5 Restore, dear chief, the light thou tak'st away: 6 Ah! when, like spring, that gracious mien of thine 7 Dawns on thy Rome, more gently glides the day, 8 And suns serener shine. 9 See her whose darling child a long year past 10 Has dwelt beyond the wild Carpathian foam; 11 That long year o'er, the envious southern blast 12 Still bars him from his home: 13 Weeping and praying to the shore she clings, 14 Nor ever thence her straining eyesight turns: 15 So, smit by loyal passion's restless stings, 16 Rome for her Caesar yearns. 17 In safety range the cattle o'er the mead: 18 Sweet Peace, soft Plenty, swell the golden grain: 19 O'er unvex'd seas the sailors blithely speed: 20 Fair Honour shrinks from stain: 21 No guilty lusts the shrine of home defile: 22 Cleansed is the hand without, the heart within: 23 The father's features in his children smile 24 Swift vengeance follows sin. 25 Who fears the Parthian or the Scythian horde, 26 Or the rank growth that German forests yield, 27 While Caesar lives? who trembles at the sword 28 The fierce Iberians wield? 29 In his own hills each labours down the day, 30 Teaching the vine to clasp the widow'd tree: 31 Then to his cups again, where, feasting gay, 32 He hails his god in thee. 33 A household power, adored with prayers and wine, 34 Thou

	38 praestes Hesperiae!” dicimus integro 39 sicci mane die, dicimus uvidi, 40 cum sol Oceano subest.	reign'st auspicious o'er his hour of ease: 35 Thus grateful Greece her Castor made divine, 36 And her great Hercules. 37 Ah! be it thine long holydays to give 38 To thy Hesperia! thus, dear chief, we pray 39 At sober sunrise; thus at mellow eve, 40 When ocean hides the day.
4.6	1 Dive, quem proles Niobea magnae 2 vindicem linguae Tityosque raptor 3 sensit et Troiae prope victor altae 4 Pthius Achilles, 5 ceteris maior, tibi miles inpar, 6 filius quamvis Thetidis marinae 7 Dardanas turris quateret tremenda 8 cuspide pugnax— 9 ille, mordaci velut icta ferro 10 pinus aut inpulsa cupressus Euro, 11 procidit late posuitque collum in 12 pulvere Teucro; 13 ille non inclusus equo Minervae 14 sacra mentito male feriatos 15 Troas et laetam Priami choreis 16 falleret aulam, 17 sed palam captis gravis, heu nefas, heu, 18 nescios fari pueros Achivis 19 ureret flammis, etiam latentem 20 matris in alvo, 21 ni tuis victus Venerisque gratae 22 vocibus divum pater adnuisset 23 rebus Aeneae potiore ductos 24 alite muros. 25 doctor argutae fidicen Thaliae 26 Phoebe, qui Xantho lavis amne crinis, 27 Dauniae defende decus Camenae, 28 levis Agyieu. 29 spiritum Phoebus, mihi Phoebus artem 30 carminis nomenque dedit poetae. 31 virginum primae puerique claris 32 patribus orti, 33 Deliae tutela deae, fugacis 34 lyncas et cervos cohibentis arcu, 35 Lesbium servate pedem meique 36 pollicis ictum 37 rite Latonae puerum canentes, 38 rite crescentem face Noctilucam, 39 prosperam frugum celeremque pronos 40 volvere mensis. 41 nupta iam dices “ego dis amicum 42 saeculo festas referente luces 43 reddidi carmen docilis modorum 44 vatis Horati.”	1 Thou who didst make thy vengeful might 2 To Niobe and Tityos known, 3 And Peleus' son, when Troy's tall height 4 Was nigh his own, 5 Victorious else, for thee no peer, 6 Though, strong in his sea-parent's power, 7 He shook with that tremendous spear 8 The Dardan tower. 9 He, like a pine by axes sped, 10 Or cypress sway'd by angry gust, 11 Fell ruining, and laid his head 12 In Trojan dust. 13 Not his to lie in covert pent 14 Of the false steed, and sudden fall 15 On Priam's ill-starr'd merriment 16 In bower and hail: 17 His ruthless arm in broad bare day 18 The infant from the breast had torn, 19 Nay, given to flame, ah, well a way! 20 The babe unborn: 21 But, won by Venus' voice and thine, 22 Relenting Jove Aeneas will'd 23 With other omens more benign 24 New walls to build. 25 Sweet tuner of the Grecian lyre, 26 Whose locks are laved in Xanthus' dews, 27 Blooming Agyieus! help, inspire 28 My Daunian Muse! 29 'Tis Phoebus, Phoebus gifts my tongue 30 With minstrel art and minstrel fires: 31 Come, noble youths and maidens sprung 32 From noble sires, 33 Blest in your Dian's guardian smile, 34 Whose shafts the flying silvans stay, 35 Come, foot the Lesbian measure, while 36 The lyre I play: 37 Sing of Latona's glorious boy, 38 Sing of night's queen with crescent horn, 39 Who wings the fleeting months with joy, 40 And swells the corn. 41 And happy brides shall say, “'Twas mine, 42 When years the cyclic season brought, 43 To chant the festal hymn divine 44 By Horace taught.”
4.7	1 Diffugere nives, redeunt iam gramina	1 The snow is fled: the trees their

	campis 2 arboribusque comae; 3 mutat terra vices et decrescentia ripas 4 flumina praetereunt; 5 Gratia cum Nymphis geminisque sororibus audet 6 ducere nuda choros: 7 inmortalia ne speres, monet annus et almum 8 quae rapit hora diem. 9 frigora mitescunt Zephyris, ver proterit aestas 10 interitura, simul 11 pomifer autumnus fruges effuderit, et mox 12 bruma recurrit iners. 13 damna tamen celeres reparant caelestia lunae: 14 nos ubi decidimus 15 quo pius Aeneas, quo dives Tullus et Ancus, 16 pulvis et umbra sumus. 17 quis scit an adiciant hodiernae crastina summae 18 tempora di superi? 19 cuncta manus avidas fugient heredis amico 20 quae dederis animo. 21 cum semel occideris et de te splendida Minos 22 fecerit arbitria, 23 non, Torquate, genus, non te facundia, non te 24 restituet pietas; 25 infernis neque enim tenebris Diana pudicum 26 liberat Hippolytum 27 nec Lethaea valet Theseus abrumpere caro 28 vincula Pirithoo.	leaves put on, 2 The fields their green: 3 Earth owns the change, and rivers lessening run 4 Their banks between. 5 Naked the Nymphs and Graces in the meads 6 The dance essay: 7 “No 'scaping death” proclaims the year, that speeds 8 This sweet spring day. 9 Frosts yield to zephyrs; Summer drives out Spring, 10 To vanish, when 11 Rich Autumn sheds his fruits; round wheels the ring,— 12 Winter again! 13 Yet the swift moons repair Heaven's detriment: 14 We, soon as thrust 15 Where good Aeneas, Tullus, Ancus went, 16 What are we? dust. 17 Can Hope assure you one more day to live 18 From powers above? 19 You rescue from your heir whate'er you give 20 The self you love. 21 When life is o'er, and Minos has rehearsed 22 The grand last doom, 23 Not birth, nor eloquence, nor worth, shall burst 24 Torquatus' tomb. 25 Not Dian's self can chaste Hippolytus 26 To life recall, 27 Nor Theseus free his loved Pirithous 28 From Lethe's thrall.
4.8	1 Donarem pateras grataque commodus, 2 Censorine, meis aera sodalibus, 3 donarem tripodas, praemia fortium 4 Graiorum, neque tu pessuma munerum 5 ferres, divite me scilicet artium 6 quas aut Parrhasius protulit aut Scopas, 7 hic saxo, liquidis ille coloribus 8 sollers nunc hominem ponere, nunc deum 9 sed non haec mihi vis, nec tibi talium 10 res est aut animus deliciarum egens. 11 gaudes carminibus; carmina possumus 12 donare et pretium dicere muneri.	1 Ah Censorinus! to my comrades true 2 Rich cups, rare bronzes, gladly would I send: 3 Choice tripods from Olympia on each friend 4 Would I confer, choicer on none than you, 5 Had but my fate such gems of art bestow'd 6 As cunning Scopas or Parrhasius wrought, 7 This with the brush, that with the chisel taught 8 To image now a mortal, now a god. 9 But these are not my riches: your desire 10 Such luxury craves not, and your means disdain: 11 A poet's strain you love; a poet's strain 12 Accept, and learn the value of the lyre. 13 Not public gravings on a marble base, 14 Whence comes a second life to men of might 15 E'en in

	13 non incisa notis marmora publicis, 14 per quae spiritus et vita redit bonis 15 post mortem ducibus, non “celeres fugae 16 reiectaeque retrorsum Hannibalis minae” 17 non “incendia Karthaginis inpiae”, 18 eius, “qui domita nomen ab Africa 19 lucratus rediit”, clarius indicant 20 laudes quam “Calabrae Pierides” neque, 21 si chartae sileant quod bene feceris, 22 mercedem tuleris. quid foret Iliae 23 Mavortisque puer, si taciturnitas 24 obstaret meritis invida Romuli? 25 ereptum Stygiis fluctibus Aeacum 26 virtus et favor et lingua potentium 27 vatum divitibus consecrat insulis. 28 dignum laude virum Musa vetat mori, 29 caelo Musa beat. sic Iovis interest 30 optatis epulis inpiger Hercules, 31 clarum Tyndaridae sidus ab infimis 32 quassas eripiunt aequoribus ratis, 33 ornatus viridi tempora pampino 34 Liber vota bonos ducit ad exitus.	the tomb: not Hannibal's swift flight, 16 Nor those fierce threats flung back into his face, 17 Not impious Carthage in its last red blaze, 18 In clearer light sets forth his spotless fame, 19 Who from crush'd Afric took away—a name, 20 Than rude Calabria's tributary lays. 21 Let silence hide the good your hand has wrought, 22 Farewell, reward! Had blank oblivion's power 23 Dimm'd the bright deeds of Romulus, at this hour, 24 Despite his sire and mother, he were nought. 25 Thus Aeacus has 'scaped the Stygian wave, 26 By grace of poets and their silver tongue, 27 Henceforth to live the happy isles among. 28 No, trust the Muse: she opes the good man's grave, 29 And lifts him to the gods. So Hercules, 30 His labours o'er, sits at the board of Jove: 31 So Tyndareus' offspring shine as stars above, 32 Saving lorn vessels from the yawning seas: 33 So Bacchus, with the vine-wreath round his hair, 34 Gives prosperous issue to his votary's prayer.
4.9.1	1 Ne forte credas interitura quae 2 longe sonantem natus ad Aufidum 3 non ante volgatas per artis 4 verba loquor socianda chordis: 5 non, si priores Maeonius tenet 6 sedes Homerus, Pindaricae latent 7 Ceaeque et Alcaei minaces 8 Stesichorique graves Camenae 9 nec siquid olim lusit Anacreon 10 delevit aetas; spirat adhuc amor 11 vivuntque conmissi calores 12 Aeoliae fidibus puellae. 13 non sola comptos arsit adulteri 14 crinis et aurum vestibus inlitum 15 mirata regalisque cultus 16 et comites Helene Lacaena 17 primusve Teucer tela Cydonio 18 direxit arcu; non semel Ilios 19 vexata; non pugnavit ingens 20 Idomeneus Sthenelusve solus 21 dicenda Musis proelia; non ferox 22 Hector vel acer Deiphobus gravis 23 excepit ictus pro pudicis 24 coniugibus puerisque primus. 25 vixere fortes ante Agamemnona 26 multi; sed omnes inlacrimabiles 27 urgentur ignotique longa 28 nocte, carent quia vate sacro. 29 paullum sepultae distat inertiae 30 celata virtus. non ego te meis	1 Think not those strains can e'er expire, 2 Which, cradled 'mid the echoing roar 3 Of Aufidus, to Latium's lyre 4 I sing with arts unknown before. 5 Though Homer fill the foremost throne, 6 Yet grave Stesichorus still can please, 7 And fierce Alcaeus holds his own 8 With Pindar and Simonides. 9 The songs of Teos are not mute, 10 And Sappho's love is breathing still: 11 She told her secret to the lute, 12 And yet its chords with passion thrill. 13 Not Sparta's queen alone was fired 14 By broider'd robe and braided tress, 15 And all the splendours that attired 16 Her lover's guilty loveliness: 17 Not only Teucer to the field 18 His arrows brought, nor Ilion 19 Beneath a single conqueror reel'd: 20 Not Crete's majestic lord alone, 21 Or Sthenelus, earn'd the Muses' crown: 22 Not Hector first for child and wife, 23 Or brave Deiphobus, laid down 24 The burden of a manly life. 25 Before Atrides men were brave: 26 But ah! oblivion, dark and long, 27 Has lock'd them in a tearless grave, 28 For lack of consecrating song. 29 'Twixt worth and baseness, lapp'd in death, 30 What difference? You shall ne'er be dumb,
4.9.31	31 chartis inornatum silebo,	31 While strains of mine have voice and

	32 totve tuos patiar labores 33 inpune, Lolli, carpere lividas 34 obliviones. est animus tibi 35 rerumque prudens et secundis 36 temporibus dubiisque rectus, 37 vindex avarae fraudis et abstinens 38 ducentis ad se cuncta pecuniae, 39 consulque non unius anni, 40 sed quotiens bonus atque fidus 41 iudex honestum praetulit utili, 42 reiecit alto dona nocentium 43 voltu, per obstantis catervas 44 explicuit sua victor arma. 45 non possidentem multa vocaveris 46 recte beatum; rectius occupat 47 nomen beati qui deorum 48 muneribus sapienter uti 49 duramque callet pauperiem pati 50 peiusque leto flagitium timet, 51 non ille pro caris amicis 52 aut patria timidus perire.	breath: 32 The dull neglect of days to come 33 Those hard-won honours shall not blight: 34 No, Lollius, no: a soul is yours, 35 Clear-sighted, keen, alike upright 36 When fortune smiles, and when she lowers: 37 To greed and rapine still severe, 38 Spurning the gain men find so sweet: 39 A consul, not of one brief year, 40 But oft as on the judgment-seat 41 You bend the expedient to the right, 42 Turn haughty eyes from bribes away, 43 Or bear your banners through the fight, 44 Scattering the foeman's firm array. 45 The lord of boundless revenues, 46 Salute not him as happy: no, 47 Call him the happy, who can use 48 The bounty that the gods bestow, 49 Can bear the load of poverty, 50 And tremble not at death, but sin: 51 No recreant he when called to die 52 In cause of country or of kin.
4.10	1 O crudelis adhuc et Veneris muneribus potens, 2 insperata tuae cum veniet pluma superbiae 3 et, quae nunc umeris involitant, deciderint comae, 4 nunc et qui color est puniceae flore prior rosae 5 mutatus Ligurinum in faciem verterit hispidam, 6 dices “heu,” quotiens te speculo videris alterum, 7 “quae mens est hodie, cur eadem non puero fuit, 8 vel cur his animis incolumes non redeunt genae?”
4.11	1 Est mihi nonum superantis annum 2 plenus Albani cadus, est in horto, 3 Phylli, nectendis apium coronis; 4 est hederae vis 5 multa, qua crinis religata fulges, 6 ridet argento domus, ara castis 7 vincta verbenis avet immolato 8 spargier agno; 9 cuncta festinat manus, huc et illuc 10 cursitant mixtae pueris puellae, 11 sordidum flammae trepidant rotantes 12 vertice fumum. 13 ut tamen noris, quibus advoceris 14 gaudiis: Idus tibi sunt agendae, 15 qui dies mensem Veneris marinae 16 findit Aprilem, 17 iure sollemnis mihi sanctiorque 18 paene natali proprio, quod ex hac	1 Here is a cask of Alban, more 2 Than nine years old: here grows for you 3 Green parsley, Phyllis, and good store 4 Of ivy too 5 (Wreathed ivy suits your hair, you know): 6 The plate shines bright: the altar, strew'd 7 With vervain, hungers for the flow 8 Of lambkin's blood. 9 There's stir among the serving folk; 10 They bustle, bustle, boy and girl; 11 The flickering flames send up the smoke 12 In many a curl. 13 But why, you ask, this special cheer? 14 We celebrate the feast of Ides, 15 Which April's month, to Venus dear, 16 In twain divides. 17 O, 'tis a day for reverence, 18 E'en my own birthday scarce so dear, 19 For my Maecenas counts from thence 20 Each added year. 21 'Tis Telephus that you'd

	19 luce Maecenas meus adfluentis 20 ordinat annos. 21 Telephum, quem tu petis, occupavit 22 non tuae sortis iuvenem puella 23 dives et lasciva tenetque grata 24 compede vinctum. 25 terret ambustus Phaethon avaras 26 spes et exemplum grave praebet ales 27 Pegasus terrenum equitem gravatus 28 Bellerophontem, 29 semper ut te digna sequare et ultra 30 quam licet sperare nefas putando 31 disparem vites. age iam, meorum 32 finis amorum, 33 (non enim posthac alia calebo 34 femina) condisce modos, amanda 35 voce quos reddas: minuentur atrae 36 carmine curae.	bewitch: 22 But he is of a high degree; 23 Bound to a lady fair and rich, 24 He is not free. 25 O think of Phaethon half burn'd, 26 And moderate your passion's greed: 27 Think how Bellerophon was spurn'd 28 By his wing'd steed. 29 So learn to look for partners meet, 30 Shun lofty things, nor raise your aims 31 Above your fortune. Come then, sweet, 32 My last of flames 33 (For never shall another fair 34 Enslave me), learn a tune, to sing 35 With that dear voice: to music care 36 Shall yield its sting.
4.12	1 Iam veris comites, quae mare temperant, 2 inpellunt animae lintea Thraciae, 3 iam nec prata rigent nec fluvii strepunt 4 hiberna nive turgidi. 5 nidum ponit, Ityn flebiliter gemens, 6 infelix avis et Cecropiae domus 7 aeternum opprobrium, quod male barbaras 8 regum est ulta libidines. 9 dicunt in tenero gramine pinguium 10 custodes ovium carmina fistula 11 delectantque deum, cui pecus et nigri 12 colles Arcadiae placent. 13 adduxere sitim tempora, Vergili: 14 sed pressum Calibus ducere Liberum 15 si gestis, iuvenum nobilium cliens, 16 nardo vina merebere. 17 nardi parvus onyx eliciet cadum, 18 qui nunc Sulpiciis adcubat horreis, 19 spes donare novas largus amaraque 20 curarum eluere efficax. 21 ad quae si properas gaudia, cum tua 22 velox merce veni: non ego te meis 23 inmunem meditor tinguere poculis, 24 plena dives ut in domo. 25 verum pone moras et studium lucri 26 nigrorumque memor, dum licet, ignium 27 misce stultitiam consiliis brevem: 28 dulce est desipere in loco.	1 The gales of Thrace, that hush the unquiet sea, 2 Spring's comrades, on the bellying canvas blow: 3 Clogg'd earth and brawling streams alike are free 4 From winter's weight of snow. 5 Wailing her Itys in that sad, sad strain, 6 Builds the poor bird, reproach to after time 7 Of Cecrops' house, for bloody vengeance ta'en 8 On foul barbaric crime. 9 The keepers of fat lambkins chant their loves 10 To silvan reeds, all in the grassy lea, 11 And pleasure Him who tends the flocks and groves 12 Of dark-leaved Arcady. 13 It is a thirsty season, Virgil mine: 14 But would you taste the grape's Calenian juice, 15 Client of noble youths, to earn your wine 16 Some nard you must produce. 17 A tiny box of nard shall bring to light 18 The cask that in Sulpician cellar lies: 19 O, it can give new hopes, so fresh and bright, 20 And gladden gloomy eyes. 21 You take the bait? then come without delay 22 And bring your ware: be sure, 'tis not my plan 23 To let you drain my liquor and not pay, 24 As might some wealthy man. 25 Come, quit those covetous thoughts, those knitted brows, 26 Think on the last black embers, while you may, 27 And be for once unwise. When time allows, 28 'Tis sweet the fool to play.
4.13	1 Audivere, Lyce, di mea vota, di 2 audivere, Lyce: fis anus et tamen 3 vis formosa videri 4 ludisque et bibis inpudens	1 The gods have heard, the gods have heard my prayer; 2 Yes, Lyce! you are growing old, and still 3 You struggle to look fair; 4 You drink, and dance, and

	5 et cantu tremulo pota Cupidinem 6 lentum sollicitas. ille virentis et 7 doctae psallere Chiae 8 pulcris excubat in genis. 9 inportunus enim transvolat aridas 10 quercus et refugit te quia luridi 11 dentes, te quia rugae 12 turpant et capitis nives. 13 nec Coae referunt iam tibi purpurae 14 nec cari lapides tempora, quae semel 15 notis condita fastis 16 inclusit volucris dies. 17 quo fugit venus, heu, quove color, decens 18 quo motus? quid habes illius, illius, 19 quae spirabat amores, 20 quae me surpuerat mihi 21 felix post Cinaram notaque et artium 22 gratarum facies? sed Cinarae brevis 23 annos fata dederunt, 24 servatura diu parem 25 cornicis vetulae temporibus Lycen, 26 possent ut iuvenes visere fervidi 27 multo non sine risu 28 dilapsam in cineres facem.	trill 5 Your songs to youthful Love, in accents weak 6 With wine, and age, and passion. Youthful Love! 7 He dwells in Chia's cheek, 8 And hears her harp-strings move. 9 Rude boy, he flies like lightning o'er the heath 10 Past wither'd trees like you; you're wrinkled now; 11 The white has left your teeth 12 And settled on your brow. 13 Your Coan silks, your jewels bright as stars, 14 Ah no! they bring not back the days of old, 15 In public calendars 16 By flying Time enroll'd. 17 Where now that beauty? where those movements? where 18 That colour? what of her, of her is left, 19 Who, breathing Love's own air, 20 Me of myself bereft, 21 Who reign'd in Cinara's stead, a fair, fair face, 22 Queen of sweet arts? but Fate to Cinara gave 23 A life of little space; 24 And now she cheats the grave 25 Of Lyce, spared to raven's length of days, 26 That youth may see, with laughter and disgust, 27 A fire-brand, once ablaze, 28 Now smouldering in grey dust.
4.14.1	1 Quae cura patrum quaeve Quiritium 2 plenis honorum muneribus tuas, 3 Auguste, virtutes in aevum 4 per titulos memoresque fastos 5 aeternet, o, qua sol habitabilis 6 inlustrat oras, maxime principum, 7 quem legis expertes Latinae 8 Vindelici didicere nuper 9 quid Marte posses. milite nam tuo 10 Drusus Genaunos, inplacidum genus, 11 Breunosque velocis et arcis 12 Alpibus inpositas tremendis 13 deiecit acer plus vice simplici; 14 maior Neronum mox grave proelium 15 conmisit immanisque Raetos 16 auspiciis pepulit secundis, 17 spectandus in certamine Martio 18 devota morti pectora liberae 19 quantis fatigaret ruinis, 20 indomitas prope qualis undas 21 exercet Auster Pleiadum choro 22 scindente nubis, inpiger hostium 23 vexare turmas et frementem 24 mittere equum medios per ignis. 25 sic tauriformis volvitur Aufidus, 26 qui regna Dauni praefluit Apuli, 27 cum saevit horrendamque cultis 28 diluviem meditatur agris, 29 ut barbarorum Claudius agmina 30 ferrata vasto diruit impetu	1 What honours can a grateful Rome, 2 A grateful senate, Caesar, give 3 To make thy worth through days to come 4 Emblazon'd on our records live, 5 Mightiest of chieftains whomsoe'er 6 The sun beholds from heaven on high? 7 They know thee now, thy strength in war, 8 Those unsubdued Vindelici. 9 Thine was the sword that Drusus drew, 10 When on the Breunian hordes he fell, 11 And storm'd the fierce Genaunian crew 12 E'en in their Alpine citadel, 13 And paid them back their debt twice told 14 'Twas then the elder Nero came 15 To conflict, and in ruin roll'd 16 Stout Raetian kernes of giant frame. 17 O, 'twas a gallant sight to see 18 The shocks that beat upon the brave 19 Who chose to perish and be free! 20 As south winds scourge the rebel wave 21 When through rent clouds the Pleiads weep, 22 So keen his force to smite, and smite 23 The foe, or make his charger leap 24 Through the red furnace of the fight. 25 Thus Daunia's ancient river fares, 26 Proud Aufidus, with bull-like horn, 27 When swoln with choler he prepares 28 A deluge for the fields of corn. 29 So Claudius charged and overthrew 30 The grim barbarian's mail-clad host,

4.14.31	31 primosque et extremos metendo 32 stravit humum sine clade victor, 33 te copias, te consilium et tuos 34 praebente divos. nam tibi quo die 35 portus Alexandrea supplex 36 et vacuam patefecit aulam, 37 Fortuna lustro prospera tertio 38 belli secundos reddidit exitus 39 laudemque et optatum peractis 40 imperiis decus adrogavit. 41 te Cantaber non ante domabilis 42 Medusque et Indus, te profugus Scythes 43 miratur, o tutela praesens 44 Italiae dominaeque Romae. 45 te fontium qui celat origines 46 Nilusque et Hister, te rapidus Tigris, 47 te beluosus qui remotis 48 obstrepit Oceanus Britannis, 49 te non paventis funera Galliae 50 duraeque tellus audit Hiberiae, 51 te caede gaudentes Sygambri 52 conpositis venerantur armis.	31 The foremost and the hindmost slew, 32 And conquer'd all, and nothing lost. 33 The force, the forethought, were thine own, 34 Thine own the gods. The selfsame day 35 When, port and palace open thrown, 36 Low at thy footstool Egypt lay, 37 That selfsame day, three lustres gone, 38 Another victory to thine hand 39 Was given; another field was won 40 By grace of Caesar's high command. 41 Thee Spanish tribes, unused to yield, 42 Mede, Indian, Scyth that knows no home, 43 Acknowledge, sword at once and shield 44 Of Italy and queenly Rome. 45 Ister to thee, and Tanais fleet, 46 And Nile that will not tell his birth, 47 To thee the monstrous seas that beat 48 On Britain's coast, the end of earth, 49 To thee the proud Iberians bow, 50 And Gauls, that scorn from death to flee; 51 The fierce Sygambrian bends his brow, 52 And drops his arms to worship thee.
4.15	1 Phoebus volentem proelia me loqui 2 victas et urbis increpuit lyra, 3 ne parva Tyrrhenum per aequor 4 vela darem. tua, Caesar, aetas 5 fruges et agris rettulit uberes 6 et signa nostro restituit Iovi 7 derepta Parthorum superbis 8 postibus et vacuum duellis 9 Ianum Quirini clausit et ordinem 10 rectum evaganti frena licentiae 11 iniecit emovitque culpas 12 et veteres revocavit artis, 13 per quas Latinum nomen et Italae 14 crevere vires famaque et imperi 15 porrecta maiestas ad ortus 16 solis ab Hesperio cubili. 17 custode rerum Caesare non furor 18 civilis aut vis exiget otium, 19 non ira, quae procudit ensis 20 et miseras inimicat urbis. 21 non qui profundum Danuvium bibunt 22 edicta rumpent Iulia, non Getae, 23 non Seres infidique Persae, 24 non Tanain prope flumen orti. 25 nosque et profestis lucibus et sacris 26 inter iocosi munera Liberi 27 cum prole matronisque nostris, 28 rite deos prius adprecati, 29 virtute functos more patrum duces 30 Lydis remixto carmine tibiis 31 Troiamque et Anchisen et almae 32 progeniem Veneris canemus.	1 Of battles fought I fain had told, 2 And conquer'd towns, when Phoebus smote 3 His harp-string: “Sooth, 'twere over-bold. 4 To tempt wide seas in that frail boat.” 5 Thy age, great Caesar, has restored 6 To squalid fields the plenteous grain, 7 Given back to Rome's almighty Lord 8 Our standards, torn from Parthian fane, 9 Has closed Quirinian Janus' gate, 10 Wild passion's erring walk controll'd, 11 Heal'd the foul plague-spot of the state, 12 And brought again the life of old, 13 Life, by whose healthful power increased 14 The glorious name of Latium spread 15 To where the sun illumes the east 16 From where he seeks his western bed. 17 While Caesar rules, no civil strife 18 Shall break our rest, nor violence rude, 19 Nor rage, that whets the slaughtering knife 20 And plunges wretched towns in feud. 21 The sons of Danube shall not scorn 22 The Julian edicts; no, nor they 23 By Tanais' distant river horn, 24 Nor Persia, Scythia, or Cathay. 25 And we on feast and working-tide, 26 While Bacchus' bounties freely flow, 27 Our wives and children at our side, 28 First paying Heaven the prayers we owe, 29 Shall sing of chiefs whose deeds are done, 30 As wont our sires, to flute or shell, 31 And Troy, Anchises, and the son 32 Of Venus on our tongues shall dwell.