Terencio · Andria

Texto en latín y traducción inglesa alineados por pasaje; cada sección de la traducción figura una sola vez, junto al primer pasaje que abarca.

Fuente: Perseus Digital Library (Tufts University), urn:cts:latinLit:phi0134.phi001. Texto crítico y traducción tomados sin cambios de los archivos TEI del repositorio.

Licencia CC BY-SA 4.0 (se comparte con la misma licencia). Edición de lectura generada por Vitruvius Digital Library (Diego Kurilo), 2026. Lectura en línea: https://diegoalonsok-png.github.io/vitruvius-digital-library/lector-clasico.html?obra=phi0134.phi001

Locus	Latín	Traducción inglesa
front	cast FABULAE INTERLOCUTORES. BYRRHIA, servus. CHARINTUS, adolescens. CHREMES, senex. CRITO, hospes. DAVUS, servus. DROMO, lorarius. GLYCERIUM, meretrix. LESBIA, obstetrix. MYSIS, ancilla. PAMPHILUS, adolescens. SIMO, senex. SOSIA, libertus. subject_1 INTRODUCTION. THE Andria derives its name from Glycerium, the heroine of the play; who was from Andros. Upon her previous history turns the dénouement of the plot. Chremes and Phania were brothers, two Athenian citizens. On occasion of a voyage to Asia Chremes had left his only daughter Pasibula with Phania, who shortly afterwards followed his brother to Asia to escape from a war that was raging in Greece. He was overtaken by a storm, and shipwrecked, together with Pasibula, upon the island Andros. He there attached himself as a client to a citizen, who entertained him liberally, and upon his death, which occurred shortly after, adopted Pasibula and brought her up with his own daughter Chrysis, having changed her name to Glycerium. Chrysis upon the death of her father went to Athens with her reputed sister, and, after making shift for an honest livelihood, at last took up the profession of a courtezan. At her house many young men congregated, and among others Pamphilus, the son of Simo, who there saw and fell in love with Glycerium, and became her accepted lover, making her a promise of marriage, which was rendered more binding by the parting injunctions of Chrysis, who upon her deathbed commended Glycerium as a sacred	cast Dramatis Personae SIMO, an aged Athenian. PAMPHILUS, son of Simo. SOSIA, freedman of Simo. CHREMES, an aged Athenian. CHARINUS, a young Athenian, in love with Philumena. CRITO, a native of Andros. DAVUS, servant of Simo. DROMO, servant of Simo. BYRRHIA, servant of Charinus. GLYCERIUM, a young woman beloved by Pamphilus. MYSIS, her maid-servant. LESBIA a midwife. scene Scene.—Athens; before the houses of SIMO and GLYCERIUM. subject THE SUBJECT. CHREMES and Phania were brothers, citizens of Athens. Chremes going to Asia, leaves his daughter, Pasibula, in the care of his brother Phania, who, afterward setting sail with Pasibula for Asia, is wrecked off the Isle of Andros. Escaping with their lives, they are kindly received by a native of the island; and Phania soon afterward dies there. The Andrian changes the name of the girl to Glycerium, and brings her up, as his own child, with his daughter Chrysis. On his death, Chrysis and Glycerium sail for Athens to seek their fortune there. Chrysis being admired by several Athenian youths, Pamphilus, the son of Simo, an opulent citizen, chances to see Glycerium, and falls violently in love with her. She afterward becomes pregnant by him, on which he makes her a promise of marriage. In the mean time, Chremes, who is now living at Athens, and is ignorant of the fate of Pasibula, agrees with Simo, the father of Pamphilus, to give Philumena, another daughter, in marriage to Pamphilus. While these arrangements are being made, Chrysis dies; on which Simo

	trust to Pamphilus. Meanwhile Pamphilus has another affair on his hands. For Chremes has had another daughter since the loss of Pasibula, and is very anxious that she should be well married to such an excellent young man as Pamphilus, who, happily, while enjoying himself in his own way, has gained a character which is the admiration of every one. So Philumena and Pamphilus are betrothed by their parents, entirely without the knowledge of the bridegroom elect. All this time Simo has fully believed in his son's excellence; but is undeceived by an event which takes place at the funeral of Chrysis, where Pamphilus shows something more than an ordinary solicitude for a young woman whom Simo ascertains to be the sister of Chrysis. The matter takes wind, and reaches the ears of Chremes, with the additional circumstance of Pamphilus' connexion with her, upon which he breaks off the match. subject_2 This brings us to the point at which the action of the play commences. Simo determines to tell Pamphilus that he is to be married to Philumena, hoping to place him in a dilemma; for if he refused, then he could take him severely to task; if he consented, then Chremes might be gained over, and after all the match might take place. Accordingly he tells Pamphilus by the way in the Forum that he is to be married that very day. Pamphilus returns home in amazement; but is met by Mysis, servant of Glycerium, who revives his old affection for her mistress. Davus meanwhile sifts the whole matter to the bottom; finds that the marriage is a pretence, and accordingly recommends Pamphilus to humour his father to the utmost, and express his entire readiness to marry as soon as he pleases. At the same time he is to keep up his intimacy with Glycerium, that Chremes may be as shy of his connexion as he is now. Meanwhile there is a by-plot at work. One Charinus, a friend of Pamphilus, who is in love with Philumena, hears with dismay that she is to be married to his friend, and urges him to do all in his power to defer the marriage if	accidentally discovers his son's connection with Glycerium. Chremes, also coming to hear of it, declines the match, having no idea that Glycerium is really his own daughter. Simo, however, in order to test his son's feelings, resolves to pretend that the marriage-day is fixed. Meeting Pamphilus in the town, he desires him to go home and prepare for the wedding, which is to take place immediately. In his perplexity, the youth has recourse to his servant Davus, who, having heard of the refusal of Chremes, suspects the design of Simo. At this conjuncture, Charinus, a friend of Pamphilus, who is enamored of Philumena, but has been rejected by her father, entreats Pamphilus to put off the marriage, for at least a few days. Disclosing his own aversion to the match, Pamphilus readily engages to do this. In order the more effectually to break it off, Davus advises Pamphilus to pretend a readiness to comply with his father's wishes, supposing that of course Chremes will steadily persist in his refusal. Pamphilus does as he is advised, on which Simo again applies to Chremes, who, after some entreaty, gives his consent. Just at this conjuncture, Glycerium is delivered of a son; and by the advice of Davus, it is laid before the door of Simo's house. Chremes happening to see it there, and ascertaining that Pamphilus is its father, again refuses to give him his daughter. At this moment, Crito, a native of Andros, arrives, who, being a relative of Chrysis, has come to Athens to look after her property. Through him, Chremes discovers that Glycerium is no other than his long-lost daughter, Pasibula; on which he consents to her immediate marriage with Pamphilus, who promises Charinus that he will use his best endeavors to obtain for him the hand of Philumena. production THE TITLE OF THE PLAY. PERFORMED at the Megalensian Games; M. Fulvius and M. Glabrio being Curule Aediles. Ambivius Turpio and Lucius Atilius Praenestinus performed it. Flaccus, the freedman of Claudius, composed the music, to a pair of treble flutes possible. So affairs stand when Glycerium is brought to bed of a son, Simo, who hears what is going on, imagining, and being confirmed by Davus in the belief, that this is merely an artifice of Glycerium and her friends to prevent Pamphilus' marriage. He accordingly again treats with Chremes on the subject of the marriage of Pamphilus and Philumena, and extorts a reluctant consent. This places Davus in a great strait; for Pamphilus now reproaches him with his untoward advice, which has got him into this mischief; and Charinus too is indignant to the last degree at the treachery of Pamphilus. As a last resource Davus places the child before Simo's door, and contrives that Chremes shall hear its history from Mysis. This causes a fresh rupture between Chremes and Simo. At this moment there arrives a native of Andros, Crito, next of kin to Chrysis, who has come to Athens to claim her property. He clears up the previous history of Glycerium, who is joyfully recognized as Chremes' daughter, and all parties are made happy; Simo being with some difficulty gained over to forgive past offences, and to receive his son and Davus into favour again. production ANDRIA. ACTA LUDIS MEGALENSIB M. FULVIO ET M. GLABRIONE AEDILIB. CURULIB. EGERUNT L. AMBIVIUS TURPIO, L. ATTILIUS PRAENESTINUS. MODOS FECIT FLACCUS CLAUDII FILIUS, TIBIIS PARIBUS DEXTRIS ET SINISTRIS. ET EST TOTA GRAECA. EDITA M. MARCELLO, CN. SULPITIO COSS.	and bass flutes alternately. And it is entirely Grecian. Published—M. Marcellus and Cneius Sulpicius being Consuls. argument THE SUMMARY OF C. SULPITIUS APOLLINARIS. PAMPHILUS seduces Glycerium, wrongfully supposed to be a sister of a Courtesan, an Andrian by birth; and she having become pregnant, he gives his word that she shall be his wife; but his father has engaged for him another, the daughter of Chremes; and when he discovers the intrigue he pretends that the nuptials are about to take place, desiring to learn what intentions his son may have. By the advice of Davus, Pamphilus does not resist; but Chremes, as soon as he has seen the little child born of Glycerium, breaks off the match, and declines him for a son-in-law. Afterward, this Glycerium, un-expectedly discovered to be his own daughter, he bestows as a wife on Pamphilus, the other on Charinus.

prologue.pr	1 Poeta quum primum animum ad scribendum appulit, 2 Id sibi negoti credidit solum dari 3 Populo ut placerent quas fecisset fabulas. 4 Verum aliter evenire multo intelligit. 5 Nam in prologis scribundis operam abutitur, 6 Non qui argumentum narret, sed qui malevoli 7 Veteris poetae maledictis respondeat. 8 Nunc quam rem vitio dent quaeso animum advortite.	1 THE POET, when first he applied his mind to writing, thought that the only duty which devolved on him was, that the Plays he should compose might please the public. But he perceives that it has fallen out entirely otherwise; 5 for he is wasting his labor in writing Prologues, not for the purpose of relating the plot, but to answer the slanders of a malevolent old Poet. Now I beseech you, give your attention to the thing which they impute as a fault. Menander composed the Andrian and the Perinthian. 10 He who knows

	9 Menander fecit Andriam et Perinthiam. 10 Qui utramvis recte norit ambas noverit. 11 Non ita dissimili sunt argumento, sed tamen 12 Dissimili oratione sunt factae ac stilo. 13 Quae convenere in Andriam ex Perinthia 14 Fatetur transtulisse atque usum pro suis. 15 Id isti vituperant factum; atque in eo disputant, 16 Contaminari non decere fabulas. 17 Faciuntne intelligendo ut nihil intelligant. 18 Qui quum hunc accusant Naevium, Plautum, Ennium 19 Accusant, quos hic noster auctores habet: 20 Quorum aemulari exoptat negligentiam 21 Potius, quam istorum obscuram diligentiam. 22 Dehinc ut quiescant porro moneo et desinant 23 Maledicere, malefacta ne noscant sua. 24 Favete, adeste aequo animo, et rem cognoscite, 25 Ut pernoscatis, ecquid spei sit reliquum, 26 Posthac quas faciet de integro comoedias, 27 Spectandae an exigendae sint vobis prius.	either of them well, will know them both; they are in plot not very different, and yet they have been composed in different language and style. What suited, he confesses he has transferred into the Andrian from the Perinthian, and has employed them as his own. 15 These parties censure this proceeding; and on this point they differ from him, that Plays ought not to be mixed up together. By being thus knowing, do they not show that they know nothing at all? For while they are censuring him, they are censuring Naevius, Plautus, and Ennius, whom our Poet has for his precedents; 20 whose carelessness he prefers to emulate, rather than the mystifying carefulness of those parties. Therefore, I advise them to be quiet in future, and to cease to slander; that they may not be made acquainted with their own misdeeds. Be well disposed, then; attend with unbiased mind, and consider the matter, 25 that you may determine what hope is left; whether the Plays which he shall in future compose anew, are to be witnessed, or are rather to be driven off the stage.
1.1.28	28 Vos istaec intro auferte: abite. Sosia, 29 Adesdum: paucis te volo. 29b Dictum puta: 30 Nempe ut curentur recte haec. 30b Immo aliud. 30c Quid est 31 Quod tibi mea ars efficere hoc possit amplius? 32 Nihil istac opus est arte ad hanc rem quam paro: 33 Sed iis quas semper in te intellexi sitas, 34 Fide et taciturnitate. 34b Exspecto quid velis. 35 Ego postquam te emi, a parvulo ut semper tibi 36 Apud me iusta et clemens fuerit servitus 37 Scis: feci e servo ut esses libertus mihi.	28 Do you carry those things away in-doors; begone. (Beckoning to SOSIA.) Sosia, just step here; I want a few words with you. 29b Consider it as said; 30 that these things are to be taken care of, I suppose. 30b No, it’s another matter. 30c What is there that my ability can effect for you more than this? 32 There’s no need of that ability in the matter which I have in hand; but of those qualities which I have ever known as existing in you, fidelity and secrecy. 34b I await your will. 35 Since I purchased you, you know that, from a little child, your servitude with me has always been easy and light. From a slave I made you my freedman ; for this reason, because you served me with readiness. The greatest recompense that I possessed, I

	38 Propterea quod servibas liberaliter. 39 Quod habui summum pretium, persolvi tibi. 40 In memoria habeo. 40b Haud muto factum. 40c Gaudeo 41 Si tibi quid feci aut facio quod placet, Simo, 42 Et gratum id fuisse advorsum te habeo gratiam. 43 Sed mihi hoc molestum est: nam istaec commemoratio 44 Quasi exprobratio est immemoris benefici. 45 Quin tu uno verbo dic quid est quod me velis. 46 Ita faciam: hoc primum in hac re praedico tibi; 47 Quas credis esse has non sunt verae nuptiae. 48 Cur simulas igitur? 48b Rem omnem a principio audies; 49 Eo pacto et gnati vitam, et consilium meum 50 Cognosces, et quid facere in hac re te velim.	bestowed upon you. 40 I bear it in mind. 40b I am not changed. 40c If I have done or am doing aught that is pleasing to you, Simo, I am glad that it has been done; and that the same has been gratifying to you, I consider sufficient thanks. But this is a cause of uneasiness to me; for the recital is, as it were, a censure to one forgetful of a kindness. 45 But tell me, in one word, what it is that you want with me. 46 I'll do so. In the first place, in this affair I give you notice: this, which you suppose to be such, is not a real marriage. 48 Why do you pretend it then? 48b You shall hear all the matter from the beginning; by that means you'll be acquainted with both my son's mode of life and my own design, 50 and what I want you to do in this affair. For after he had passed youthfulness, Sosia, and had obtained free scope of living, (for before, how could you know or understand his disposition, while youthful age, fear, and a master were checking him?)— 54b That's true. 55 What all young men, for the most part, do,—devote their attention to some particular pursuit, either to training horses or dogs for hunting, or to the philosophers; in not one of these did he engage in particular beyond the rest, and yet in all of them in a moderate degree. 60 I was pleased. 60b Not without reason; for this I deem in life to be especially advantageous; that one do nothing to excess. 62 Such was his mode of life; readily to bear and to comply with all; with whomsoever he was in company, to them to resign himself; to devote himself to their pursuits; at variance with no one; 65 never preferring himself to them. Thus most readily you may acquire praise without envy, and gain friends. 67 He has wisely laid down his rule of life; for in these days obsequiousness begets friends; sincerity, dislike. 69 Meanwhile, three years ago, a certain woman 70 from Andros removed hither into this neighborhood, driven by poverty and the neglect of her relations, of surpassing beauty and in the bloom of youth. 73 Ah! I'm afraid that this Andrian will bring some mischief. 74 At first, in a modest way, she passed her life with thriftiness and in hardship, 75 seeking a livelihood with her wool and loom. But after an admirer made advances, promising her a recompense, first one and then another; as the disposition of all mankind has a downward tendency from industry toward pleasure, she accepted their proposals, and then began to trade upon her beauty. 80 Those who then were her admirers, by chance, as it often happens, took my son thither that he might be in their company. Forthwith I said to myself, He is surely caught; he is smitten. In the morning I used to observe their servant-boys coming or going away; I used to make inquiry, Here, my lad, 85 tell me, will you, who had Chrysis yesterday? for that was the name of the Andrian.

1.1.51	51 Nam is postquam excessit ex ephebis, Sosia, 52 Liberius vivendi fuit potestas: nam antea 53 Qui scire posses, aut ingenium noscere, 54 Dum aetas, metus, magister, prohibebant? 54b Ita est. 55 Quod plerique omnes faciunt adolescentuli, 56 Ut animum ad aliquod studium adiungant, aut equos 57 Alere aut canes ad venandum, aut ad philosophos: 58 Horum ille nihil egregie praeter caetera 59 Studebat: et tamen omnia haec mediocriter. 60 Gaudebam. 60b Non iniuria: nam id arbitror 61 Apprime in vita esse utile ut ne quid nimis. 62 Sic vita erat: facile omnes perferre ac pati 63 Cum quibus erat cunque una: iis sese dedere: 64 Eorum obsequi studiis: advorsus nemini: 65 Nunquam praeponens se illis: ita facillime 66 Sine invidia laudem invenias et amicos pares. 67 Sapienter vitam instituit: namque hoc tempore 68 Obsequium amicos, veritas odium

	parit. 69 Interea mulier quaedam abhinc triennium 70 Ex Andro commigravit huc viciniae, 71 Inopia et cognatorum negligentia 72 Coacta, egregia forma atque aetate integra. 73 Hei vereor ne quid Andria apportet mali. 74 Primum haec pudice vitam parce ac duriter 75 Agebat, lana ac tela victum quaeritans. 76 Sed postquam amans accessit, pretium pollicens, 77 Unus et item alter, ita ut ingenium est omnium 78 Hominum a labore proclive ad libidinem, 1.1.79	79 Accepit conditionem, dein quaestum occipit. 80 Qui tum illam amabant forte, ita ut fit, filium 81 Perduxere illuc secum ut una esset meum. 82 Egomet continuo mecum, Certe captus est, 83 Habet. Observabam mane illorum servulos 84 Venientes aut abeuntes: rogitabam, Heus puer, 85 Dic sodes, quis heri Chrysidem habuit? Nam Andriae 86 Illi id erat nomen. 86b Teneo. 86c Phaedrum, aut Cliniam 87 Dicebant, aut Niceratum; nam hi tres tum simul 88 Amabant. Eho, quid Pamphilus? Quid? symbolam 89 Dedit, coenavit. Gaudebam. Item alio die 90 Quaerebam: comperiebam nihil ad Pamphilum 91 Quidquam attinere. Enimvero spectatum satis 92 Putabam, et magnum exemplum continentiae. 93 Nam qui cum ingeniis conflictatur eiusmodi, 94 Neque commovetur animus in ea re tamen, 95 Scias posse habere iam ipsum suae vitae modum. 96 Cum id mihi placebat tum uno ore omnes omnia 97 Bona dicere, et laudare fortunas	86b I understand. 86c Phaedrus, or Clinias, or Niceratus, they used to say; for these three then loved her at the same time. Well now, what did Pamphilus do? What? He gave his contribution; he took part in the dinner. Just so on another day 90 I made inquiry, but I discovered nothing whatever that affected Pamphilus. In fact, I thought him sufficiently proved, and a great pattern of continence; for he who is brought into contact with dispositions of that sort, and his feelings are not aroused even under such circumstances, 95 you may be sure that he is already capable of undertaking the governance of his own life. This pleased me, and every body with one voice began to say all kinds of flattering things, and to extol my good fortune, in having a son endowed with such a disposition. What need is there of talking? Chremes, influenced by this report, 100 came to me of his own accord, to offer his only daughter as a wife to my son, with a very large portion. It pleased me; I betrothed him; this was the day appointed for the nuptials. 103 What then stands in the way? Why should they not take place? 103b You shall hear. In about a few days after these things had been agreed on, 105 Chrysis, this neighbor, dies. 105b Bravo! You've made me happy. I was afraid for him on account of Chrysis. 106b Then my meas 98 Qui gnatum haberem tali ingenio praeditum. 99 Quid verbis opus est? hac fama impulsus Chremes, 100 Ultro ad me venit unicam gnatam suam 101 Cum dote summa filio uxorem ut daret. 102 Placuit; despondi. Hic nuptiis dictus est dies. 103 Quid obstat cur non verae fiant? 103b Audies. 104 Fere in diebus paucis quibus haec acta sunt 105 Chrysis vicina haec moritur.	son was often there, with those who had admired Chrysis; with them he took charge of the funeral; sorrowful, in the mean time, he sometimes wept with them in condolence. Then that pleased me. 110 Thus I reflected: He by reason of this slight intimacy takes her death so much to heart; what if he himself had wooed her? What will he do for me his father? All these things I took to be the duties of a humane disposition and of tender feelings. Why do I detain you with many words? 115 Even I myself, for his sake, went forth to the funeral, as yet suspecting no harm. 116b Ha! what is this? 116c You shall know. She is brought out; we proceed. In the mean time, among the females who were there present, I saw by chance one young woman of beauteous form. 119b Very likely. 119c And of countenance, Sosia, 120 so modest, so charming, that nothing could surpass. As she appeared to me to lament beyond the rest, and as she was of a figure handsome and genteel beyond the other women, I approached the female attendants; I inquired who she was. They said that she was the sister of Chrysis. 125 It instantly struck my mind: Ay, ay, this is it; hence those tears, hence that sympathy. 127 How I dread what you are coming to! 127b The funeral procession meanwhile advances; we follow; we come to the burying-place. She is placed upon the pile; they weep. In the mean time, this sister, 130 whom I mentioned, approached the flames too incautiously, with considerable danger. There, at that moment, Pamphilus, in his extreme alarm, discovers his well-dissembled and long-hidden passion; he runs up, clasps the damsel by the waist. My Glycerium, says he, what are you doing? Why are you going to destroy yourself. 135 Then she, so that you might easily recognize their habitual attachment, weeping, threw herself back upon him—how affectionately! 137 What do you say? 137b I returned thence in anger, and hurt at heart: and yet there was not sufficient ground for reproving him. He might say; What have I done? How have I deserved this, or offended, father? 140 She who wished to throw herself into the flames, I prevented; I saved her. The defense is a reasonable one. 141b You judge aright; for if you censure him who has assisted to preserve life, what are you to do to him who causes loss or misfortune to it? 144 Chremes comes to me next day, exclaiming: 145 "Disgraceful conduct!"—that he had ascertained that Pamphilus was keeping this foreign woman as a wife. I steadfastly denied that to be the fact. He insisted that it was the fact. In short, I then left him refusing to bestow his daughter. 149b Did not you then reprove your son? 149c Not even this 1.1.105b	105b O factum bene! 106 Beasti; metui a Chryside. 106b Ibi tum filius 107 Cum illis qui amabant Chrysidem una aderat frequens; 108 Curabat una funus, tristis interim, 109 Nonnunquam collacrumabat: placuit tum id mihi. 110 Sic cogitabam; Hic, parvae consuetudinis 111 Causa, mortem huius tam fert familiariter: 112 Quid si ipse amasset? quid mihi hic faciet patri? 113 Haec ego putabam esse omnia humani ingeni 114 Mansuetique animi officia. Quid multis moror? 115 Egomet quoque eius causa in funus prodeo, 116 Nihil suspicans etiam mali. 116b Hem, quid est? 116c Scies. 117 Effertur: imus. Interea inter mulieres 118 Quae ibi aderant forte unam adspicio adolescentulam, 119 Forma. 119b Bona fortasse. 119c Et vultu, Sosia, 120 Adeo modesto, adeo venusto, ut nihil supra. 121 Quia tum mihi lamentari praeter caeteras 122 Visa est, et quia erat forma praeter caeteras 123 Honesta et liberali, accedo ad pedisequas; 124 Quae sit rogo. Sororem esse

	aiunt Chrysidis. 125 Percussit illico animum: at at! hoc illud est, 126 Hinc illae lacrumae; haec illa est misericordia. 127 Quam timeo, quorsum evadas. 127b Funus interim 128 Procedit: sequimur: ad sepulcrum venimus:
1.1.129	129 In ignem posita est: fletur. Interea haec soror 130 Quam dixi ad flammam accessit imprudentius, 131 Satis cum periclo. Ibi tum exanimatus Pamphilus 132 Bene dissimulatum amorem et celatum indicat. 133 Accurrit: mediam mulierem complectitur: 134 Mea Glycerium, inquit, quid agis? cur te is perditum? 135 Tum illa, ut consuetum facile amorem cerneres, 136 Reiecit se in eum flens quam familiariter. 137 Quid ais? 137b Redeo inde iratus atque aegre ferens. 138 Nec satis ad obiurgandum causae. Diceret, 139 Quid feci? quid commerui aut peccavi pater? 140 Quae sese in ignem iniicere voluit, prohibui, 141 Servavi. Honesta oratio est. 141b Recte putas. 142 Nam si illum obiurges vitae qui auxilium tulit, 143 Quid facias illi qui dederit damnum aut malum? 144 Venit Chremes postridie ad me clamitans, 145 Indignum facinus; comperisse Pamphilum 146 Pro uxore habere hanc peregrinam. Ego illud sedulo 147 Negare factum; ille instat factum: denique 148 Ita tum discedo ab illo, ut qui se filiam 149 Neget daturum. 149b Non tu ibi gnatum? 149c Ne haec quidem 150 Satis vehemens causa ad obiurgandum. 150b Qui cedo? 151 Tute ipse his rebus finem praescripsti pater.	150 was a cause sufficiently strong for censuring him. 150b How so? Tell me. 151 You yourself, father, he might say, have prescribed a limit to these proceedings. The time is near, when I must live according to the humor of another; meanwhile, for the present allow me to live according to my own. 154 What room for reproving him, then, is there left? 155 If on account of his amour he shall decline to take a wife, that, in the first place, is an offense on his part to be censured. And now for this am I using my endeavors, that, by means of the pretended marriage, there may be real ground for rebuking him, if he should refuse; at the same time, that if that rascal Davus has any scheme, 160 he may exhaust it now, while his knaveries can do no harm: who, I do believe, with hands, feet, and all his might, will do every thing; and more for this, no doubt, that he may do me an ill turn, than to oblige my son. 163b For what reason? 163c Do you ask? Bad heart, bad disposition. Whom, however, if I do detect — 165 But what need is there of talking? If it should turn out, as I wish, that there is no delay on the part of Pamphilus, Chremes remains to be prevailed upon by me; and I do hope that all will go well. Now it’s your duty to pretend these nuptials cleverly, to terrify Davus; and watch my son, 170 what he’s about, what schemes he is planning with him. 170b ’Tis enough; I’ll take care; now let’s go in-doors. 171b You go first; I’ll follow. 172 There’s no doubt but that my son doesn’t wish for a wife; so alarmed did I perceive Davus to be just now, when he heard that there was going to be a marriage. But the very man is coming out of the house. (Stands aside.)

	152 Prope adest cum alieno more vivendum est mihi: 153 Sine nunc meo me vivere interea modo.
1.1.154	154 Qui igitur relictus est obiurgandi locus? 155 Si propter amorem uxorem nolit ducere, 156 Ea primum ab illo animadvertenda iniuria est. 157 Et nunc id operam do ut per falsas nuptias 158 Vera obiurgandi causa sit si deneget: 159 Simul sceleratus Davus siquid consili 160 Habet ut consumat nunc cum nihil obsint doli; 161 Quem ego credo manibus pedibus obnixe omnia 162 Facturum; magis id adeo mihi ut incommodet 163 Quam ut obsequatur gnato. 163b Quapropter? 163c Rogas? 164 Mala mens, malus animus. Quem quidem ego si sensero— 165 Sed quid opus est verbis? Sin eveniat quod volo, 166 In Pamphilo ut nil sit morae, restat Chremes, 167 Qui mi exorandus est: et spero confore. 168 Nunc tuum est officium has bene ut adsimules nuptias: 169 Perterrefacias Davum: observes filium, 170 Quid agat, quid cum illo consili captet. 170b Sat est: 171 Curabo: eamus nunc iam intro. 171b I prae, sequar.
1.2.172	172 Non dubium est quin uxorem nolit filius: 173 Ita Davum modo timere sensi, ubi nuptias 174 Futuras esse audivit. Sed ipse exit foras. 175 Mirabar hoc si sic abiret, et heri semper lenitas 176 Verebar quorsum evaderet: 177 Qui postquam audierat non datum iri filio uxorem suo 178 Numquam cuiquam nostrum verbum fecit, neque id aegre tulit. 179 At nunc faciet; neque, ut opinor, sine tuo magno malo.	175 I was wondering if this matter was to go off thus; and was continually dreading where my master’s good humor would end; for, after he had heard that a wife would not be given to his son, he never uttered a word to any one of us, or took it amiss. 179 But now he’ll do so: and that, I fancy, not without heavy cost to you. 180 He meant this, that we, thus unsuspecting, should be led away by delusive joy; that now in hope, all fear being removed, we might during our supineness be surprised, so that there might be no

	180 Id voluit, nos sic nec opinantes duci falso gaudio, 181 Sperantes, iam amoto metu, interea oscitantes opprimi, 182 Ut ne esset spatium cogitandi ad disturbandas nuptias: 183 Astute. 183b Carnufex, quae loquitur? 183c Herus est, neque provideram. 184 Dave. 184b Hem, quid est? 184c Ehodum ad me! 184d Quid hic volt? 184e Quid ais? 184f Qua de re? 184g Rogas? 185 Meum gnatum rumor est amare. 185b Id populus curat scilicet. 186 Hocine agis, an non? 186b Ego vero istuc. 186c Sed nunc ea me exquirere 187 Iniqui patris est. Nam quod antehac fecit nihil ad me adtinet. 188 Dum tempus ad eam rem tulit, sivi animum ut expleret suum: 189 Nunc hic dies aliam vitam affert, alios mores postulat. 190 Dehinc postulo, sive aequum est te oro, Dave, ut redeat iam in viam.	time for planning a rupture of the marriage. How clever! 183b The villain! what does he say? 183c It’s my master, and I didn’t see him. 184 Davus. 184b Well, what is it? 184c Just step this way to me. 184d What does he want? 184e What are you saying? 184f About what? 184g Do you ask the question? There’s a report that my son’s in love. 185b The public troubles itself about that, of course. 186 Will you attend to this, or not? 186b Certainly, I will, to that. 186c But for me to inquire now into these matters, were the part of a severe father. For what he has done hitherto, doesn’t concern me at all. So long as his time of life prompted to that course, I allowed him to indulge his inclination: now this day brings on another mode of life, demands other habits. 190 From this time forward, I do request, or if it is reasonable, I do entreat you, Davus, that he may now return to the right path. 191 What can this mean? 191b All who are intriguing take it ill to have a wife given them. 192 So they say. 192b And if anyone has adopted a bad instructor in that course, he generally urges the enfeebled mind to pursuits still more unbecoming. 194 I’faith, I do not comprehend. 194b No? Ha— 194c No—I am Davus, not Oedipus. 195 Of course then, you wish me to speak plainly in what further I have to say. 195b Certainly, by all means. 196 If I this day find out that you are attempting any trickery about this marriage, to the end that it may not take place; or are desirous that in this matter it should be proved how knowing you are; I’ll hand you over, Davus, beaten with stripes, to the mill, even to your dying day, 200 upon this condition and pledge, that if ever I release you, I shall grind in your place. Now, do you understand this? Or not yet even this? 201b Yes, perfectly: you have now spoken so plainly upon the subject, you have not used the least circumlocution. 203 In any thing would I more willingly allow myself to be imposed upon than in this matter. 204 Fair words, I entreat. 204b You are ridiculing me: you don’t at all deceive me. I give you warning, 205 don’t act rashly, and don’t say you were not warned. Take care.

1.2.191	191 Hoc quid sit? 191b Omnes qui amant graviter sibi dari uxorem ferunt. 192 Ita aiunt. 192b Tum siquis magistrum cepit ad eam rem improbum 193 Ipsum animum aegrotum ad deteriorem partem plerumque applicat. 194 Non hercle intelligo. 194b Non? hem! 194c Non: Davus sum, non Oedipus. 195 Nempe ergo aperte vis quae restant me loqui. 195b Sane quidem. 196 Si sensero hodie quicquam in his te nuptiis 197 Fallaciae conari quo fiant minus, 198 Aut velle in ea re ostendi quam sis callidus, 199 Verberibus caesum te in pistrinum Dave dedam usque ad necem, 200 Ea lege atque omine, ut si te inde exemerim ego pro te molam. 201 Quid, hoc intellextin? an nondum etiam ne hoc quidem? 201b Immo callide; 202 Ita aperte ipsam rem modo locutus nil circuitione usus es. 203 Ubi vis facilius passus sim, quam in hac re, me deludier. 204 Bona verba, quaeso. 204b Irrides: nil me fallis. Edico tibi 205 Ne temere facias: neque tu hoc dicas tibi non praedictum. Cave.
1.3	206 Enimvero, Dave, nil loci est segnitiae neque socordiae, 207 Quantum intellexi modo senis sententiam de nuptiis: 208 Quae si non astu providentur me aut herum pessum dabunt. 209 Nec quid agam certum est: Pamphilumne adiutem an auscultem seni. 210 Si illum relinquo eius vitae timeo: sin opitulor huius minas; 211 Cui verba dare difficile est. Primum iam de amore hoc comperit: 212 Me infensus servat ne quam faciam in nuptiis fallaciam. 213 Si senserit perii: aut si lubitum fuerit causam ceperit, 214 Quo iure quaque iniuria praecipitem in pistrinum dabit.	206 Assuredly, Davus, there’s no room for slothfulness or inactivity, so far as I’ve just now ascertained the old man’s mind about the marriage; which if it is not provided against by cunning, will be bringing either myself or my master to ruin. What to do, I am not determined; whether I should assist Pamphilus or obey the old man. 210 If I desert the former, I fear for his life; if I assist him, I dread the other’s threats, on whom it will be a difficult matter to impose. In the first place, he has now found out about this amour; with hostile feelings he watches me, lest I should be devising some trickery against the marriage. If he discovers it, I’m undone; or even if he chooses to

	215 Ad haec mala hoc mihi accedit etiam: haec Andria, 216 Si ista uxor sive amica est, gravida e Pamphilo est. 217 Audireque eorum est operae pretium audaciam: 218 Nam inceptio est amentium haud amantium: 219 Quicquid peperisset decreverunt tollere: 220 Et fingunt quandam inter se nunc fallaciam, 221 Civem Atticam esse hanc. Fuit olim hinc quidam senex, 222 Mercator: navem is fregit apud Andrum insulam: 223 Is obiit mortem: ibi tum hanc eiectam Chrysidis 224 Patrem recepisse orbam, parvam: Fabulae. 225 Mihi quidem hercle non fit verisimile; atque ipsis commentum placet. 226 Sed Mysis ab ea egreditur: at ego hinc me ad forum ut 227 Conveniam Pamphilum, ne de hac re pater imprudentem opprimat.	allege any pretext, whether rightfully or wrongfully, he will consign me headlong to the mill. 215 To these evils this one is besides added for me. This Andrian, whether she is his wife, or whether his mistress, is pregnant by Pamphilus. It is worth while to hear their effrontery; for it is an undertaking worthy of those in their dotage, not of those who dote in love ; whatever she shall bring forth, they have resolved to rear ; 220 and they are now contriving among themselves a certain scheme, that she is a citizen of Attica. There was formerly a certain old man of this place, a merchant; he was shipwrecked off the Isle of Andros; he died. They say that there, the father of Chrysis, on that occasion, sheltered this girl, thrown on shore, an orphan, a little child. What nonsense! 225 To myself at least it isn’t very probable; the fiction pleases them, however. But Mysis is coming out of the house. Now I’ll betake myself hence to the Forum, that I may meet with Pamphilus, lest his father should take him by surprise about this matter.
1.4	228 Audivi Archylis iamdudum: Lesbiam adduci iubes. 229 Sane pol illa temulenta est mulier et temeraria, 230 Nec satis digna cui committas primo partu mulierem; 231 Tamen eam adducam. Importunitatem spectate aniculae, 232 Quia compotrix eius est. Di date facultatem obsecro 233 Huic pariundi, atque illi in aliis potius peccandi locum. 234 Sed quidnam Pamphilum exanimatum video? Vereor quid siet. 235 Opperiar ut sciam numquidnam haec turbae tristitia adferat.	228 I’ve heard you already, Archylis; you request Lesbia to be fetched. Really, upon my faith, she is a wine-bibbing and a rash woman, 230 and not sufficiently trustworthy for you to commit to her care a female at her first delivery; is she still to be brought? (She receives an answer from within, and comes forward.) Do look at the inconsiderateness of the old woman; because she is her pot-companion. Ye Gods, I do entreat you, give her ease in her delivery, and to that woman an opportunity of making her mistakes elsewhere in preference. But why do I see Pamphilus so out of spirits? I fear what it may be. 235 I’ll wait, that I may know whether this sorrow portends any disaster.
1.5.236	236 Hocine est humanum factum aut inceptum? hocine est officium patris? 237 Quid illud est? 237b Pro deum atque hominum fidem, quid est si non haec contumelia est? 238 Uxorem decrerat dare sese mihi	236 Is it humane to do or to devise this? Is this the duty of a father? 237 What does this mean? 237b O, by our faith in the Gods! what is, if this is not, an indignity? He had resolved that he himself would give me a wife to-day; ought I not to have known

	hodie: nonne oportuit 239 Praescisse me ante? nonne prius communicatum oportuit? 240 Miseram me, quod verbum audio? 241 Quid Chremes qui denegarat se commissurum mihi 242 Gnatam suam uxorem? id mutavit, quia me immutatum videt. 243 Itan obstinate operam dat ut me a Glycerio miserum abstrahat: 244 Quod si fit pereo funditus. 245 Adeon’ hominem esse invenustum aut infelicem quemquam ut ego sum? 246 Pro deum atque hominum fidem! 247 Nullon’ ego Chremetis pacto adfinitatem effugere potero? 248 Quot modis contemptus, spretus? facta, transacta omnia: hem, 249 Repudiatus repetor: quamobrem? nisi si id est quod suspicor: 250 Aliquid monstri alunt: ea quoniam nemini obtrudi potest, 251 Itur ad me. 251b Oratio haec me miseram exanimavit metu. 252 Nam quid ego nunc dicam de patre? ah 253 Tantam rem tam neglegenter agere! praeteriens modo 254 Mihi apud forum, Uxor tibi ducenda est, Pamphile, hodie, inquit, para: 255 Abi domum. Id mi visus est dicere, Abi cito, et suspende te. 256 Obstipui: censen’ me verbum potuisse ullum proloqui? aut 257 Ullam causam, saltem ineptam, falsam, iniquam? Obmutui. 258 Quod si ego rescissem id prius quid facerem, si quis nunc me roget? 259 Aliquid facerem ut hoc ne facerem. Sed nunc quid primum exsequar? 260 Tot me impediunt curae, quae meum animum divorsae trahunt, 261 Amor, misericordia huius, nuptiarum sollicitatio, 262 Tum patris pudor qui me tam leni passus animo est usque adhuc 263 Quae meo quomque animo libitum est facere. Eine ego ut advorser? hei mihi!	this beforehand? Ought it not to have been mentioned previously? 240 Wretched me! What language do I hear? 241 What does Chremes do? He who had declared that he would not intrust his daughter to me as a wife; because he himself sees me unchanged he has changed. Thus perversely does he lend his aid, that he may withdraw wretched me from Glycerium. If this is effected, I am utterly undone. 245 That any man should be so unhappy in love, or so unfortunate as I am! Oh, faith of Gods and men! shall I by no device be able to escape this alliance with Chremes? In how many ways am I contemned, and held in scorn? Every thing done, and concluded! Alas! once rejected I am sought again; for what reason? Unless perhaps it is this, which I suspect it is: 250 they are rearing some monster, and as she can not be pushed off upon any one else, they have recourse to me. 251b This language has terrified wretched me with apprehension. 252 But what am I to say about my father? Alas! that he should so thoughtlessly conclude an affair of such importance! Passing me in the Forum just now, he said, Pamphilus, you must be married to-day: 255 get ready; be off home. He seemed to me to say this: Be off this instant, and go hang yourself. I was amazed; think you that I was able to utter a single word, or any excuse, even a frivolous, false, or lame one? I was speechless. But if any one were to ask me now what I would have done, if I had known this sooner, why, I would have done any thing rather than do this. But now, what course shall I first adopt? 260 So many cares beset me, which rend my mind to pieces; love, sympathy for her, the worry of this marriage; then, respect for my father, who has ever, until now, with such an indulgent disposition, allowed me to do whatever was agreeable to my feelings. Ought I to oppose him? Ah me! I am in uncertainty what to do. 264b I’m wretchedly afraid how this uncertainty is to terminate. 265 But now there’s an absolute necessity, either for him to speak to her, or for me to speak to him about her. While the mind is in suspense, it is swayed by a slight impulse one way or the other. 267 Who is it speaking here? (Seeing her.) Mysis? Good-morrow to you. 267b Oh! Good-morrow to you, Pamphilus. 267c How is she? 267d Do you ask? She is oppressed with grief, and on this account the poor thing is anxious, because some time ago the marriage was arranged for this day. Then, too, she fears this, 270 that you may forsake her. 270b Ha! could I attempt that? Could I suffer her, poor thing, to be deceived on my account? She, who has confided to me her affection, and her entire existence? She, whom I have held especially dear to my feelings as my wife? Shall I suffer her mind, well and chastely trained and tutored, 275 to be overcome by poverty and corrupted? I will not do it. 276b I should have no fear if it rested with yourself alone; but whether you may be able to withstand compulsion— 277b Do you deem me so cowardly, so utterly ungrateful, inhuman, and so brutish, that neither intimacy, nor affection, nor shame, 280 can move or admonish me to keep faith? 281 This one thing I know, that she is deserving that you should not forget her. 282 Forget her? Oh Mysis, Mysis, at this moment are those words of Chrysis concerning Glycerium written on my mind. Now at the point of death, she called me; 285 I went to her; you had withdrawn; we were alone; she began: My dear Pamphilus, you see her beauty and her youth; and it is not unknown to you to what extent both of these are now of use to her, in protecting both her chastity and her interests. By this right hand I do entreat you, and by your good Genius, 290 by your own fidelity, and by her bereft condition, do not withdraw yourself from her, or forsake her; if I have loved you as my own brother, or if she has always prized you above all others, or has been obedient to you in all things. 295 You do I give to her as a husband, friend, protector, father. This property of mine do I intrust to you, and commit to your care. She placed her in my hands; that instant, death came upon her. I accepted her; having accepted, I will protect her. 298b So indeed I hope. 299 But why are you leaving her? 299b I’m going to fetch the midwife. 299c Make all haste. And—do you hear?— 300 take care, and not one word about the marriage, lest that too should add to her illness. 300b I understand.

1.5.264	264 Incertum est quid agam. 264b Misera timeo incertum hoc quorsum accidat. 265 Sed nunc peropus est, aut hunc cum ipsa, aut me aliquid de illa adversum hunc loqui. 266 Dum in dubio est animus, paulo momento huc vel illuc impellitur. 267 Quis hic loquitur? Mysis? salve. 267b O salve, Pamphile. 267c Quid agit? 267d Rogas? 268 Laborat e dolore; atque ex hoc misera sollicita est, diem 269 Quia olim in hunc sunt constitutae nuptiae: tum autem hoc timet, 270 Ne deseras se. 270b Hem, egone istuc conari queam? 271 Ego propter me illam decipi miseram sinam 272 Quae mihi suum animum atque omnem vitam credidit, 273 Quam ego animo egregie caram pro uxore habuerim? 274 Bene et pudice eius doctum atque eductum sinam 275 Coactum egestate ingenium immutarier? 276 Non faciam. 276b Haud vereor si in te solo sit situm; 277 Sed ut vim queas ferre. 277b Adeone me ignavum putas, 278 Adeone porro ingratum, aut inhumanum, aut ferum, 279 Ut neque me consuetudo neque amor neque pudor 280 Commoveat neque commoneat ut servem fidem? 281 Unum hoc scio, esse meritam ut memor esses sui. 282 Memor essem? o Mysis Mysis, etiam nunc mihi 283 Scripta illa sunt in animo dicta Chrysidis 284 De Glycerio. Iam ferme moriens me vocat: 285 Accessi: vos semotae: nos soli: incipit: 286 Mi Pamphile, huius formam atque aetatem vides:

1.5.287	287 Nec clam te est quam illi utraeque res nunc utiles 288 Et ad pudicitiam et ad rem tutandam sient. 289 Quod ego te per hanc dextram oro et ingenium tuum, 290 Per tuam fidem, perque huius solitudinem, 291 Te obtestor, ne abs te hanc segreges neu deseras, 292 Si te in germani fratris dilexi loco, 293 Sive haec te solum semper fecit maximi, 294 Seu tibi morigera fuit in rebus omnibus. 295 Te isti virum do amicum tutorem patrem. 296 Bona nostra haec tibi permitto et tuae mando fidei. 297 Hanc mihi in manum dat: mors continuo ipsam occupat. 298 Accepi: acceptam servabo. 298b Ita spero quidem. 299 Sed cur tu abis ab illa? 299b Obstetricem arcesso. 299c Propera, atque audin'? 300 Verbum unum cave de nuptiis, ne ad morbum hoc etiam. 300b Teneo.
2.1.301	301 Quid ais Byrrhia? daturne illa Pamphilo hodie nuptum? 301b Sic est. 302 Qui scis? 302b Apud forum modo e Davo audivi. 302c Vae misero mihi. 303 Ut animus in spe atque in timore usque antehac attentus fuit, 304 Ita postquam adempta spes est lassus cura confectus stupet. 305 Quaeso edepol, Charine, quoniam non potest id fieri quod vis, 306 Id velis quod possit. 306b Nil volo aliud nisi Philumenam. 306c Ah, 307 Quanto satius est te id dare operam qui istum amorem ex animo amoveas, 308 Quam id loqui quo magis libido frustra incendatur tua. 309 Facile omnes cum valemus recta	301 How say you, Byrrhia? Is she to be given in marriage to Pamphilus to-day? 301b It is so. 302 How do you know? 302b I heard it just now from Davus at the Forum. 302c Woe unto wretched me! As, hitherto, until now, my mind has been racked amid hope and fear; so, since hope has been withdrawn, wearied with care, it sinks overwhelmed. 305 By my troth, Charinus, since that which you wish can not come to pass, prithee, do wish that which can. 306b I wish for nothing else but Philumena. 306c Alas! How much better were it for you to endeavor to expel that passion from your mind, than to be saying that by which your desire is to no purpose still more inflamed. 309 We all, when we are well, with ease give good advice to the sick. If you were in my situation, you would think consilia aegrotis damus. 310 Tu si hic sis aliter sentias. 310b Age age, ut libet. 310c Sed Pamphilum 311 Video: omnia experiri certum est prius quam pereo. 311b Quid hic agit? 312 Ipsum hunc orabo: huic supplicabo: amorem huic narrabo meum: 313 Credo impetrabo ut aliquot saltem nuptiis prodat dies: 314 Interea fiet aliquid, spero. 314b Id aliquid nihil est. 314c Byrrhia, 315 Quid tibi videtur? adeon' ad eum? 315b Quidni? Si nihil impetres, 316 Ut te arbitretur sibi paratum moechum si illam duxerit? 317 Abin' hinc in malam rem cum suspicione istac, scelus? 318 Charinum video: salve. 318b O salve Pamphile.	otherwise. 310b Well, well, just as you like. 310c But I see Pamphilus; I'm determined I'll try every thing before I despair. 311b What does he mean? 312 I will entreat his own self; I will supplicate him; I will disclose to him my love. I think that I shall prevail upon him to put off the marriage for some days at least; in the mean time, something will turn up, I trust. 314b That something is nothing. 314c Byrrhia, 315 how seems it to you? Shall I accost him? 315b Why not? Should you not prevail, that at least he may look upon you as a gallant ready provided for him, if he marries her. 317 Away with you to perdition with that vile suggestion, you rascal! 318 I espy Charinus. (Accosting him.) Good-morrow! 318b O, good-morrow. Pamphilus, I'm come to you, seeking hope, safety, counsel, and assistance. 320 I'faith, I have neither time for counsel, nor resources for assistance. But what's the matter now? 321b To-day you are going to take a wife? 321c So they say. 321d Pamphilus, if you do that, you behold me this day for the last time. 322b Why so 322c Ah me! I dread to tell it; prithee, do you tell it, Byrrhia. 323b I'll tell it. 323c What is it? 324 He's in love with your betrothed. 324b Assuredly he's not of my way of thinking. Come now, tell me,

2.1.319	319 Ad te advenio spem, salutem, auxilium, consilium expetens. 320 Neque pol consili locum habeo, neque auxili copiam. 321 Sed istuc quidnam est? 321b Hodie uxorem ducis? 321c Aiunt. 321d Pamphile, 322 Si id facis hodie postremum me vides. 322b Quid ita? 322c Hei mihi, 323 Vereor dicere: huic dic quaeso Byrrhia. 323b Ego dicam. 323c Quid est? 324 Sponsam hic tuam amat. 324b Nae iste haud mecum sentit: Ehodum dic mihi: 325 Numquidnam amplius tibi cum illa fuit Charine? 325b Ah Pamphile	325 have you had any more to do with her, Charinus? 325b Oh Pamphilus, nothing. 326b How much I wish you had. 326c Now, by our friendship and by my affection, I do beseech you, in the first place, not to marry her. 327b For my own part I'll use my endeavors. 327c But if that can not be, or if this marriage is agreeable to you— 328b Agreeable to me? 328c Put it off for some days at least, while I go elsewhere, that I may not be witness. 329b Now listen, once for all: 330 I think it, Charinus, to be by no means the part of an ingenuous man, when he confers nothing, to expect that it should be considered as an obligation on his part. I am more desirous to avoid this match, than you to gain it. 333 You have restored me to life. 333b Now, if you can do any thing, either you

	326 Nihil. 326b Quam vellem. 326c Nunc te per amicitiam et per amorem obsecro 327 Principio ut ne ducas. 327b Dabo equidem operam. 327c Sed si id non potes, 328 Aut tibi nuptiae haec sunt cordi. 328b Cordi? 328c Saltem aliquot dies 329 Profer, dum proficiscor aliquo ne videam. 329b Audi nunc iam. 330 Ego Charine neutiquam officium liberi esse hominis puto 331 Cum is nihil promereat postulare id gratiae adponi sibi. 332 Nuptias effugere ego istas malo, quam tu adipiscier.	yourself, or Byrrhia here, manage, fabricate, invent, contrive some means, whereby she may be given to you; 335 this I shall aim at, how she may not be given to me. 335b I am satisfied. 335c Most opportunely I perceive Davus, on whose advice I have depended. 336b But you, i'faith, tell me nothing, except those things which there is no need for knowing. (Pushing him away.) Get you gone from here. 337b Certainly I will, and with all my heart. (Exit.)
2.1.333	333 Reddidisti animum. 333b Nunc si quid potes aut tute aut hic Byrrhia, 334 Facite, fingite, invenite, efficite qui detur tibi: 335 Ego id agam qui mihi ne detur. 335b Sat habeo. 335c Davom optume 336 Video cuius consilio fretus sum. 336b At tu hercle haud quidquam mihi; 337 Nisi ea quae nihil opus sunt sciri. Fugin' hinc? 337b Ego vero ac libens.
2.2.338	338 Di boni, boni quid porto! sed ubi inveniam Pamphilum, 339 Ut metum in quo nunc est adimam, atque expleam animum gaudio? 340 Laetus est nescio quid. 340b Nihil est: nondum haec rescivit mala. 341 Quem ego nunc credo, si iam audierit sibi paratas nuptias— 342 Audin' tu illum? 342b toto me oppido exanimatum quaerere. 343 Sed ubi quaeram? quo nunc primum intendam? 343b Cessas adloqui? 344 Abeo. 344b Dave: ades. Resiste. 344c Quis homo est, qui me? O Pamphile, 345 Te ipsum quaero. Euge Charine: ambo opportune. Vos volo. 346 Dave, perii. 346b Quin tu hoc audi.	338 Ye gracious Gods, what good news I bring! But where shall I find Pamphilus, that I may remove the apprehension in which he now is, and fill his mind with joy—? 340 He's rejoiced about something, I don't know what. 340b It's of no consequence; he hasn't yet heard of these misfortunes. 341 For I do believe now, if he has already heard that a marriage is prepared for him— 342 Don't you hear him? 342b He is seeking me distractedly all the city over. But where shall I look for him? Or in which direction now first to betake me— 343b Do you hesitate to accost him? 344 I have it. 344b Davus, come here! Stop! 344c Who's the person that's—(Turning round.) O Pamphilus, 345 you are the very man I'm looking for. Well done, Charinus! both in the nick of time: I want you both. 346 Davus, I'm undone! 346b Nay but, do hear this. 346c I'm

	346c Interii. 346d Quid timeas scio. 347 Mea quidem hercle certe in dubio vita est. 347b Et quid tu scio. 348 Nuptiae mihi. 348b Etsi scio. 348c Hodie. 348d Obtundis, tametsi intellego. 349 Id paves ne ducas tu illam, tu autem ut ducas. 349b Rem tenes. 350 Istuc ipsum. 350b Atque istuc ipsum nihil pericli est: me vide. 351 Obsecro te, quam primum hoc me libera miserum metu. 351b Hem, 352 Libero; tibi uxorem non dat iam Chremes.	utterly ruined! 346d I know what you are afraid of. 347 I'faith, my life indeed is really in danger. 347b And what you are afraid of, I know. 348 My marriage— 348b As if I did not know it? 348c This day— 348d Why keep dinning me with it, when I know it all? (To PAMPHILUS.) This are you afraid of, lest you should marry her; and you (to CHARINUS,) lest you should not marry her. 349b You understand the matter. 350 That's the very thing. 350b And that very thing is in no danger; trust me for that. 351 I do entreat you, release wretched me as soon as possible from this apprehension. 351b Well, then, I will release you; Chremes is not going to give you his daughter at present. 352b How do you know? 352c You shall know. Your father just now laid hold of me; he said that a wife was to be given you to-day, and many other things as well, which just now I haven't time to relate. 355 Hastening to you immediately, I ran on to the Forum that I might tell you these things. When I didn't find you, I ascended there to ahigh place. I looked around; you were nowhere. There by chance I saw Byrrhia, his servant (pointing to CHARINUS.). I inquired of him; he said he hadn't seen you. This puzzled me. I considered what I was to do. As I was returning in the mean time, a surmise from the circumstances themselves occurred to me: How now,— 360 a very small amount of good cheer; he out of spirits; a marriage all of a sudden; these things don't agree. 361b But to what purpose this? 361c I forthwith betook myself to the house of Chremes. When I arrived there—stillness before the door; then I was pleased at that. 363 You say well. 363b Proceed. 363c I stopped there. In the mean time I saw no one going in, no one going out; no matron at the house, 365 no preparation, no bustle. I drew near; looked in— 365b I understand; a considerable indication. 366b Do these things seem to accord with a wedding? 367 I think not, Davus. 367b Think, do you say? You don't view it rightly; the thing is certain. Besides, coming away from there I saw the servant-boy of Chremes carrying some vegetables and little fishes, an obol's worth, for the old man's dinner. 370 This day, Davus, have I been delivered by your means. 370b And yet not at all. 371 Why so? Surely he will not give her to him, after all this. (Pointing to PAMPHILUS.) 371b You silly fellow! as though it were a necessary consequence that if he doesn't give her to him you should marry her: unless, indeed, you look about you; unless you entreat and make court to the old man's friends. 373b You advise well. I'll go; although, upon my faith, this hope has often eluded me already. Farewell!

2.2.352b	352b Qui scis? 352c Scies. 353 Tuus pater me modo prehendit: ait tibi uxorem dari 354 Hodie; item alia multa quae nunc non est narrandi locus. 355 Continuo ad te properans percurro ad forum ut dicam tibi haec. 356 Ubi te non invenio ibi ascendo in quendam excelsum locum. 357 Circumspicio; nusquam. Ibi forte huius video Byrrhiam; 358 Rogo: negat vidisse. Mihi molestum. Quid agam, cogito. 359 Redeunti interea ex ipsa re mihi incidit suspicio: hem, 360 Paululum obsoni: ipsus tristis: de improviso nuptiae: 361 Non cohaerent. 361b Quorsumnam istuc? 361c Ego me continuo ad Chremem. 362 Cum illo advenio solitudo ante ostium: iam id gaudeo. 363 Recte dicis. 363b Perge. 363c Maneo: interea introire neminem 364 Video exire neminem, matronam nullam in aedibus, 365 Nil ornati, nil tumulti: accessi: intro aspexi. 365b Scio. 366 Magnum signum. 366b Num videntur convenire haec nuptiis? 367 Non opinor Dave. 367b Opinor narras? non recte accipis. 368 Certa res est. Etiam puerum inde abiens conveni Chremi 369 Olera et pisciculos minutos ferre obolo in coenam seni. 370 Liberatus sum hodie Dave tua opera. 370b Ac nullus quidem. 371 Quid ita? Nempe huic prorsus illam non dat. 371b Ridiculum caput,

2.2.372	372 Quasi necesse sit, si huic non dat, te illam uxorem ducere: 373 Nisi vides, nisi senis amicos oras, ambis. 373b Bene mones. 374 Ibo: etsi hercle saepe iam me spes haec frustrata est. Vale.
2.3.375	375 Quid igitur sibi vult pater? cur simulat? 375b Ego dicam tibi. 376 Si id succenseat nunc quia non det tibi uxorem Chremes, 377 Ipsus sibi esse iniurius videatur, neque id iniuria, 378 Prius quam tuum ut sese habeat animum ad nuptias perspexerit. 379 Sed si tu negaris ducere, ibi culpam in te transferet: 380 Tum illae turbae fient. 380b Quidvis patiar. 380c Pater est Pamphile. 381 Difficile est: tum haec sola est mulier: dictum ac factum invenerit 382 Aliquam causam quamobrem eiiciat oppido. 382b Eiiciat? 382c Cito. 383 Cedo igitur quid faciam Dave? 383b Dic te ducturum. 383c Hem. 383d Quid est? 384 Egon dicam? 384b Cur non? 384c Numquam faciam. 384d Ne nega. 385 Suadere noli. 385b Ex ea re quid fiat vide. 386 Ut ab illa excludar huc concludar. 386b Non ita est. 387 Nempe hoc sic esse opinor: dicturum patrem, 388 Ducas volo hodie uxorem: tu, ducam, inquies: 389 Cedo quid iurgabit tecum? Hic reddes omnia 390 Quae nunc sunt certa ei consilia incerta ut sient,	375 What then does my father mean? Why does he thus make pretense? 375b I'll tell you. If now he were angry with you, because Chremes will not give you a wife, he would seem to himself to be unjust, and that not without reason, before he has ascertained your feelings as to the marriage, how they are disposed. But if you refuse to marry her, in that case he will transfer the blame to you; 380 then such disturbances will arise. 380b I will submit to any thing from him. 380c He is your father, Pamphilus. It is a difficult matter. Besides, this woman is defenseless. No sooner said than done; he will find some pretext for driving her away from the city. 382b Driving her away? 382c Aye, and quickly too. 383 Tell me then, Davus, what am I to do? 383b Say that you will marry her. 383c Ha! 383d What's the matter? 384 What, am I to say so? 384b Why not? 384c Never will I do it. 384d Don't say so. 385 Don't attempt to persuade me. 385b Consider what will be the result of it. 386 That I shall be deprived of the one, and fixed with the other. 386b Not so. In fact, I think it will be thus: Your father will say: I wish you to marry a wife to-day. You reply: I'll marry her. Tell me, how can he raise a quarrel with you? Thus you will cause all the plans 390 which are now arranged by him to be disarranged, without any danger; for this is not to be doubted, that Chremes will not give you his daughter. Therefore do not hesitate in those measures which you are

	391 Sine omni periclo: nam hocce haud dubium est quin Chremes	taking, on this account, lest he should change his sentiments. Tell your father that you consent; so that although he may desire it, he may not be able to be angry at you with reason. 395 For that which you rely on, I will easily refute; No one, you think, will give a wife to a person of these habits. But he will find a beggar for you, rather than allow you to be corrupted by a mistress. If, however, he shall believe that you bear it with a contented mind, you will render him indifferent; at his leisure he will look out for another wife for you; in the mean time something lucky may turn up. 399 Do you think so? 399b It really is not a matter of doubt. 399c Consider to what you are persuading me. 399d Nay, but do be quiet. 400 Well, I'll say it; but, that he mayn't come to know that she has had a child by me, is a thing to be guarded against; for I have promised to bring it up. 401b Oh, piece of effrontery. 401c She entreated me that I would give her this pledge, by which she might be sure she should not be deserted. 403 It shall be attended to; but your father's coming. Take care that he doesn't perceive that you are out of spirits.
2.3.392	392 Tibi non det gnatam. Nec tu ea causa minueris 393 Haec quae facis ne is mutet suam sententiam. 394 Patri dic velle, ut cum velit tibi iure irasci non queat. 395 Nam quod tu speres propulsabo facile. Uxorem his moribus 396 Dabit nemo; inveniet inopem potius quam te corrumpi sinat. 397 Sed si te aequo animo ferre accipiet, neglegentem feceris: 398 Aliam otiosus quaeret: interea aliquid acciderit boni. 399 Itan credis? 399b Haud dubium id quidem est. 399c Vide quo me inducas. 399d Quin taces? 400 Dicam. Puerum autem ne resciscat mihi esse ex illa cautio est: 401 Nam pollicitus sum suscepturum. 401b O facinus audax! 401c Hanc fidem 402 Sibi me obsecravit qui se sciret non deserturum ut darem.

	403 Curabitur. Sed pater adest. Cave te esse tristem sentiat.
2.4	404 Reviso quid agant aut quid captent consili. 405 Hic nunc non dubitat quin te ducturum neges. 406 Venit meditatus alicunde ex solo loco: 407 Orationem sperat invenisse se 408 Qui differat te: proin tu fac apud te ut sies. 409 Modo ut possim Dave. 409b Crede inquam hoc mihi Pamphile, 410 Numquam hodie tecum commutaturum patrem 411 Unum esse verbum si te dices ducere.	404 I've come back to see what they are about, or what scheme they are hatching. 405 He has no doubt at present but that you'll refuse to marry. Having considered his course, he's come from a retired spot somewhere or other; he hopes that he has framed a speech by which to disconcert you; do you take care, then, to be yourself. 409 If I am only able, Davus. 409b Trust me for that, Pamphilus, I tell you; your father will never this day exchange a single word with you, if you say that you will marry.
2.5	412 Herus me relictis rebus iussit Pamphilum 413 Hodie observare, ut quid ageret de nuptiis 414 Scirem: id propterea nunc hunc venientem sequor. 415 Ipsum adeo praesto video cum Davo: hoc agam. 416 Utrumque adesse video. 416b Hem, serva. 416c Pamphile! 417 Quasi de inproviso respice ad eum. 417b Ehem pater. 418 Probe. 418b Hodie uxorem ducas ut dixi volo. 419 Nunc nostrae timeo parti quid hic respondeat. 420 Neque istic neque alibi tibi erit usquam in me mora. 420b Hem. 421 Obmutuit. 421b Quid dixit? 421c Facis ut te decet 422 Cum istuc quod postulo impetro cum gratia. 423 Sum verus? 423b Herus, quantum audio, uxore excidit. 424 I nunc iam intro; ne in mora cum opus sit sies. 425 Eo. 425b Nullane in re esse homini cuiquam fidem? 426 Verum illud verbum est, vulgo quod dici solet, 427 Omnes sibi malle melius esse quam alteri.	412 My master has ordered me, leaving my business, to keep an eye on Pamphilus today, what he is doing with regard to the marriage. I was to learn it; for that reason, I have now followed him (pointing to SIMO.) as he came hither. 415 Himself, as well, I see standing with Davus close at hand; I'll note this. 416 I see that both of them are here. 416b Now then, be on your guard. 416c Pamphilus! 417 Look round at him as though taken unawares. 417b What, my father! 418 Capital! 418b I wish you to marry a wife to-day, as I was saying. 419 Now I'm in dread for our side, as to what he will answer. 420 Neither in that nor in any thing else shall you ever find any hesitation in me. 420b Hah! 421 He is struck dumb. 421b What a speech! 421c You act as becomes you, when that which I ask I obtain with a good grace. 423 Am I right? 423b My master, so far as I learn, has missed his wife. 424 Now, then, go in-doors, that you mayn't be causing delay when you are wanted. 425 I'll go. 425b Is there, in no case, putting trust in any man? That is a true proverb which is wont to be commonly quoted, that all had rather it to be well for themselves than for another. I remember noticing, when I saw her, that she was a young woman of handsome figure; wherefore I am the more disposed to excuse Pamphilus, 430 if he has preferred that he himself, rather than the other, should 428 Ego illam vidi virginem; forma bona 429 Memini videre: quo aequior sum Pamphilo, 430 Si se illam in somnis quam illum amplecti maluit. 431 Renuntiabo, ut pro hoc malo mihi det malum.	embrace her in his slumbers. I'll carry back these tidings, that, in return for this evil he may inflict evil upon me.

2.6	432 Hic nunc me credit aliquam sibi fallaciam 433 Portare, et ea me hic restitisse gratia. 434 Quid Davus narrat? 434b Aeque quicquam nunc quidem. 435 Nihilne? hem. 435b Nihil prorsus. 435c Atqui expectabam quidem. 436 Praeter spem evenit: sentio: hoc male habet virum. 437 Potin es mihi verum dicere? 437b Nihil facilius. 438 Num illi molestae quippiam hae sunt nuptiae 439 Huiusce propter consuetudinem hospitae? 440 Nihil hercle: aut, si adeo, bidui est aut tridui 441 Haec sollicitudo: nosti: deinde desinet. 442 Etenim ipsus secum recta reputavit via. 443 Laudo. 443b Dum licitum est ei, dumque aetas tulit, 444 Amavit: tum id clam: cavit ne umquam infamiae 445 Ea res sibi esset, ut virum fortem decet: 446 Nunc uxore opus est: animum ad uxorem appulit. 447 Subtristis visus est esse aliquantulum mihi. 448 Nil propter hanc rem: sed est quod succenset tibi. 449 Quidnam est? 449b Puerile est. 449c Quid est? 449d Nihil. 449e Quin dic quid est? 450 Ait nimium parce facere sumptum. 450b Mene? 450c Te. 451 Vix, inquit, drachmis est obsonatum decem: 452 Num filio videtur uxorem dare? 453 Quem, inquit, vocabo ad coenam meorum aequalium	432 He now supposes that I'm bringing some trick to bear against him, and that on that account I've remained here. 434 What does he say, Davus? 434b Just as much as nothing. 435 What, nothing? Eh? 435b Nothing at all. 435c And yet I certainly was expecting something. 436 It has turned out contrary to your expectations. (Aside.) I perceive it; this vexes the man. 437 Are you able to tell me the truth? 437b I? Nothing more easy. 438 Is this marriage at all disagreeable to him, on account of his intimacy with this foreign woman? 440 No, faith; or if at all, it is a two or three days' annoyance this—you understand. It will then cease. Moreover, he himself has thought over this matter in a proper way. 443 I commend him. 443b While it was allowed him, and while his years prompted him, 444 he intrigued; even then it was secretly. He took precaution that that circumstance should never be a cause of disgrace to him, as behooves a man of principle; 446 now that he must have a wife, he has set his mind upon a wife. 447 He seemed to me to be somewhat melancholy in a slight degree. 448 Not at all on account of her, but there's something he blames you for. 449 What is it, pray? 449b It's a childish thing. 449c What is it? 449d Nothing at all. 449e Nay but, tell me what it is. 450 He says that you are making too sparing preparations. 450b What, I? 450c You.—He says that there has hardly been fare provided to the amount of ten drachmae.—Does he seem to be bestowing a wife on his son? Which one now, in preference, of my companions shall I invite to the dinner? And, it must be owned, 455 you really are providing too parsimoniously—I do not commend you. 455b Hold your tongue. 456 I've touched him up. 456b I'll see that

	454 Potissimum nunc? et, quod dicendum hic siet, 455 Tu quoque perparce nimium. Non laudo. 455b Tace. 456 Commovi. 456b Ego istaec recte ut fiant videro. 457 Quidnam hoc rei est? quid hic vult veterator sibi? 458 Nam si hic mali est quicquam, hem illic est huic rei caput.	these things are properly done. (DAVUS goes into the house.) What's the meaning of this? What does this old rogue mean? But if there's any knavery here, why, he's sure to be the source of the mischief.
3.1	459 Ita pol quidem res est ut dixti Lesbia: 460 Fidelem haud ferme mulieri invenias virum. 461 Ab Andria est ancilla haec. 461b Quid narras? 461c Ita est. 462 Sed hic Pamphilus— 462b Quid dicit? 462c firmavit fidem. 462d Hem. 463 Utinam aut hic surdus aut haec muta facta sit. 464 Nam quod peperisset iussit tolli. 464b O Iupiter! 465 Quid ego audio? Actum est siquidem haec vera praedicat. 466 Bonum ingenium narras adolescentis. 466b Optimum. 467 Sed sequere me intro, ne in mora illi sis. 467b Sequor. 468 Quod remedium nunc huic malo inveniam? 468b Quid hoc? 469 Adeone est demens? Ex peregrina? Iam scio; ah! 470 Vix tandem sensi stolidus. 470b Quid hic sensisse ait? 471 Haec primum adfertur iam mihi ab hoc fallacia: 472 Hanc simulant parere quo Chremetem absterreant. 473 Iuno Lucina fer opem, serva me, obsecro. 474 Hui tam cito? ridiculum: postquam ante ostium 475 Me audivit stare approperat. Non sat commode 476 Divisa sunt temporibus tibi, Dave, haec. 476b Mihin? 477 Num immemor es discipuli? 477b Ego quid narres nescio. 478 Hicine me si imparatum in veris nuptiis	459 Upon my faith, the fact is really as you mentioned, Lesbia, 460 you can hardly find a man constant to a woman. 461 This maid-servant comes from the Andrian. 461b What do you say? 461c It is so. 462 But this Pamphilus— 462b What is she saying? 462c Has proved his constancy. 462d Hah! 463 I wish that either he were deaf, or she struck dumb. 464 For the child she brings forth, he has ordered to be brought up. 464b O Jupiter! 465 What do I hear! It's all over, if indeed this woman speaks the truth. 466 You mention a good disposition on the part of the young man. 466b A most excellent one. But follow me in-doors, that you mayn't keep her waiting. 467b I'll follow. 468 What remedy now shall I find for this mishap? 468b What does this mean? Is he so infatuated? The child of a foreign woman? Now I understand; ah! 470 scarcely even at last, in my stupidity, have I found it out. 470b What does he say he has found out? 471 This piece of knavery is being now for the first time palmed upon me by this fellow; they are pretending that she's in labor, in order that they may alarm Chremes. 473 Juno Lucina, grant me thine aid, save me, I do entreat thee! 474 Whew! so sudden? What nonsense! As soon as 475 she has heard that I'm standing before the door, she makes all haste. These incidents, Davus, have not been quite happily adapted by you as to the points of time. 476b By me? 477 Are your scholars forgetful? 477b I don't know what you are talking about. 478 If he at the real marriage of my son had taken me off my guard, what sport he would have made of me. 480 Now it is at his own risk; I'm sailing in harbor.

	479 Adortus esset quos mihi ludos redderet? 480 Nunc huius periclo fit, ego in portu navigo.
3.2.481	481 Adhuc Archylis quae assolent quaeque oportet 482 Signa esse ad salutem omnia huic esse video. 483 Nunc primum fac istaec lavet: post deinde 484 Quod iussi ei dari bibere et quantum imperavi 485 Date: mox ego huc revertar. 486 Per ecastor scitus puer est natus Pamphilo. 487 Deos quaeso ut sit superstes, quandoquidem ipse est ingenio bono, 488 Cumque huic est veritus optimae adulescenti facere iniuriam. 489 Vel hoc quis non credat qui te norit abs te esse ortum? 489b Quidnam id est? 490 Non imperabat coram quid opus facto esset puerperae: 491 Sed postquam egressa est illis quae sunt intus clamat de via. 492 O Dave, itan contemnor abs te? aut itane tandem idoneus 493 Tibi videor esse quem tam aperte fallere incipias dolis? 494 Saltem accurate, ut metui videar certe si resciverim. 495 Certe hercle nunc hic se ipsus fallit haud ego. 495b Edixin tibi, 496 Interminatus sum ne faceres? num veritus? quid retulit? 497 Credon tibi hoc, nunc peperisse hanc e Pamphilo? 498 Teneo quid erret: et quid agam habeo. 498b Quid taces? 499 Quid credas? quasi non tibi renunciata sint haec sic fore. 500 Mihin quisquam? 500b Eho an tute intellexti hoc assimulari? 500c Irrideor. 501 Renunciatum est: nam qui istaec tibi incidit suspicio? 502 Qui? quia te noram. 502b Quasi tu dicas factum id consilio meo. 503 Certe enim scio. 503b Non satis me pernosti etiam qualis sim Simo.	481 As yet, Archylis, all the customary symptoms which ought to exist toward recovery, I perceive in her. Now, in the first place, take care and let her bathe; then, after that, what I ordered to be given her to drink, and as much as I prescribed, 485 do you administer: presently I will return hither. (To herself aloud.) By all that’s holy, a fine boy has been born to Pamphilus. I pray the Gods that he may survive, since the father himself is of a good disposition, and since he has hesitated to do an injustice to this most excellent young woman. 489 Even this, who is there that knows you that would not believe that it originated in you? 489b Why, what is this? 490 She didn’t order in their presence what was requisite to be done for the woman lying in; but after she has come out, she bawls from the street to those who are in the house. O Davus, am I thus trifled with by you? Or pray, do I seem to you so very well suited to be thus openly imposed upon by your tricks? At all events it should have been with pre-caution; that at least I might have seemed to be feared, if I should detect it. 495 Assuredly, upon my faith, it’s he that’s, now deceiving himself, not I. 495b I gave you warning, I forbade you with threats to do it. Have you been awed? What has it availed? Am I to believe you now in this, that this woman has had a child by Pamphilus? 498 I understand where he’s mistaken; and I see what I must do. 498b Why are you silent? 499 What would you believe? As though word had not been brought you that thus it would happen. 500 Any word brought to me? 500b Come now, did you of your own accord perceive that this was counterfeited? 500c I am being trifled with. 501 Word has been brought you; for otherwise how could this suspicion have occurred to you? 502 How? Because I knew you. 502b As though you meant to say that this has been done by my contrivance. 503 Why, I’m sure of it, to a certainty. 503b Not yet even do you know me sufficiently, Simo, what sort of person I am. 504 I, not know you! 504b But if I begin to tell you any thing, at once 505 you think that deceit is being practiced upon you in guile; therefore, upon my faith, I don’t dare now even to whisper. 506 This one thing I am sure of, that no person has been delivered here. 506b You have discovered that? Still, not a bit the less will they presently be laying the child here before the door. Of this, then, I now warn you, master, that it will happen, that you may be aware of it. Don’t you hereafter be saying that this was done through the advice or artifices of Davus. 510 I wish this suspicion of yours to be entirely removed from myself. 511 How do you know that? 511b I’ve heard so, and I believe it: many things combine for me to form this conjecture. In the first place then, she declared that she was pregnant by Pamphilus; that has been proved to be false. Now, when she sees that preparations are being made for the wedding at our house, the maid-servant is directly sent 515 to fetch the midwife to her, and to bring a child at the same time. Unless it is managed for you to see the child, the marriage will not be at all impeded. 517 What do you say to this? When you perceived that they were adopting this plan, why didn’t you tell Pamphilus immediately? 519 Why, who has induced him to leave her, but myself? For, indeed, we all 520 know how desperately he loved her. Now he wishes for a wife. In fine, do you intrust me with that affair; proceed however, as before, to celebrate these nuptials, just as you are doing, and I trust that the Gods will prosper this matter. 523 Very well; be off in-doors; wait for me there, and get ready what’s necessary to be prepared. (DAVUS goes into the house.) He hasn’t prevailed upon me even now altogether to believe these things, 525 and I don’t know whether what he has said is all true; but I deem it of little moment; this is of far greater importance to me—that my son himself has promised me. Now I’ll go and find Chremes; I'll ask him for a wife for my son; if I obtain my request, at what other time rather than to-day should I prefer these nuptials taking place? 530 For as my son has promised, I have no doubt but that if he should prove unwilling, I can fairly compel him. And look! here's Chremes himself, just at the very time.

3.2.504	504 Ego non te? 504b Sed si quid narrare occoepi, continuo dari 505 Tibi verba censes falso: itaque hercle nihil iam muttire audeo. 506 Hoc ego scio unum neminem peperisse hic. 506b Intellexti. 507 Sed nihilo setius mox deferent puerum huc ante ostium. 508 Id ego iam nunc tibi renuntio here futurum, ut sis sciens. 509 Ne tu hoc mihi posterius dicas Davi factum consilio aut dolis. 510 Prorsus a me opinionem hanc tuam esse ego amotam volo. 511 Unde id scis? 511b Audivi et credo: multa concurrunt simul 512 Qui coniecturam hanc nunc facio. Iam primum haec se e Pamphilo 513 Gravidam dixit esse; inventum est falsum: nunc, postquam videt 514 Nuptias domi apparari, missa est ancilla ilico 515 Obstetricem arcessitum ad eam, et puerum ut afferret simul. 516 Hoc nisi fit puerum ut tu videas, nihil moventur nuptiae. 517 Quid ais? Quom intellexeras 518 Id consili capere, cur non dixti extemplo Pamphilo? 519 Quis igitur eum ab illa abstraxit nisi ego? nam omnes nos quidem 520 Scimus quam misere hanc amarit: nunc sibi uxorem expetit. 521 Postremo id mihi da negoti: tu tamen idem has nuptias 522 Perge facere ita ut facis: et id spero adiuturos deos. 523 Immo abi intro: ibi me opperire, et quod parato opus est para. 524 Non impulit me haec nunc omnino ut crederem: 525 Atque haud scio an quae dixit sint vera omnia: 526 Sed parvi pendo: illud mihi multo maximum est

	527 Quod mihi pollicitus est ipse gnatus. Nunc Chremem 528 Conveniam: orabo gnato uxorem: si impetro, 529 Quid alias malim quam hodie has fieri nuptias? 530 Nam gnatus quod pollicitus est haud dubium est mihi
3.2.531	531 Si nolit quin eum merito possim cogere. 532 Atque adeo in ipso tempore eccum ipsum obviam.
3.3.533	533 Iubeo Chremetem. 533b O, te ipsum quaerebam. 533c Et ego te. 533d Optato advenis. 534 Aliquot me adiere ex te auditum qui aiebant hodie filiam 535 Meam nubere tuo gnato: id viso tune an illi insaniant. 536 Ausculta paucis: et quid ego te velim et tu quod quaeris scies. 537 Ausculto: loquere quid velis. 538 Per te deos oro et nostram amicitiam Chreme 539 Quae incepta a parvis cum aetate accrevit simul, 540 Perque unicam gnatam tuam et gnatum meum, 541 Cuius tibi potestas summa servandi datur, 542 Ut me adiuves in hac re, atque ita ut nuptiae 543 Fuerant futurae fiant. 543b Ah ne me obsecra: 544 Quasi hoc te orando a me impetrare oporteat. 545 Alium esse censes nunc me atque olim cum dabam? 546 Si in rem est utrique ut fiant, arcessi iube. 547 Sed si ex ea re plus mali est quam commodi 548 Utrique, id oro te in commune ut consulas, 549 Quasi illa tua sit, Pamphilique ego sim pater. 550 Immo ita volo itaque postulo ut fiat Chreme: 551 Neque postulem abs te nisi ipsa res moneat. 551b Quid est? 552 Irae sunt inter Glycerium et gnatum. 552b Audio. 553 Ita magnae ut sperem posse avelli.	533 I greet you, Chremes. 533b O, you are the very person I was looking for. 533c And I for you. 533d You meet me at a welcome moment. Some persons have been to me, to say that they had heard from you, that my daughter 535 was to be married to your son to-day; I’ve come to see whether they are out of their senses or you. 536 Listen; in a few words you shall learn both what I want of you, and what you seek to know. 537 I am listening; say what you wish. 538 By the Gods, I do entreat you, Chremes, and by our friendship, which, commencing with our infancy, has grown up with our years, 540 and by your only daughter and by my own son (of preserving whom the entire power lies with you), that you will assist me in this matter; and that, just as this marriage was about to be celebrated, it may be celebrated. 543b O, don’t importune me; as though you needed to obtain this of me by entreaty. 545 Do you suppose I am different now from what I was formerly, when I promised her? If it is for the advantage of them both that it should take place, order her to be sent for. But if from this course there would result more harm than advantage for each, this I do beg of you, that you will consult for their common good, as though she were your own daughter, and I the father of Pamphilus. 550 Nay, so I intend, and so I wish it to be, Chremes; and I would not ask it of you, did not the occasion itself require it. 551b What is the matter? 552 There is a quarrel between Glycerium and my son. 552b I hear you. 553 So munch so, that I’m in hopes they may be separated.

	553b Fabulae. 554 Profecto sic est. 554b Sic hercle ut dicam tibi:	553b Nonsense! 554 It really is so. 554b After this fashion, i’faith, I tell you, 555 the quarrels of lovers are the renewal of love. 556 Well—this I beg of you, that we may prevent it. While an opportunity offers, and while his passion is cooled by affronts, before the wiles of these women and their tears, craftily feigned, 560 bring back his love-sick mind to compassion, let us give him a wife. I trust, Chremes, that, when attached by intimacy and a respectable marriage, he will easily extricate himself from these evils. 563 So it appears to you; but I do not think that either he can possibly hold to her with constancy, or that I can put up with it if he does not. 565 How then can you be sure of that, unless you make the experiment? 566 But for that experiment to be made upon a daughter is a serious thing— 567 Why look, all the inconvenience in fine amounts to this—possibly, which may the Gods forfend, a separation may take place. But if he is reformed, see how many are the advantages: 570 in the first place, you will have restored a son to your friend; you will obtain a sure son-in-law for yourself, and a husband for your daughter. 572 What is one to say to all this? If you feel persuaded that this is beneficial, I don’t wish that any advantage should be denied you. 574 With good reason, Chremes, have I always considered you a most valuable friend. 575 But how say you —? 575b What? 575c How do you know that they are now at variance? 576 Davus himself, who is privy to all their plans, has told me so; and he advises me to expedite the match as fast as I can. Do you think he would do so, unless he was aware that my son desired it? You yourself as well shall presently hear what he says. (Goes to the door of his house and calls.) Halloo there! Call Davus out here. 580 Look, here he is; I see him just coming out.
3.3.555	555 Amantium irae amoris integratio est. 556 Hem, id te oro ut ante eamus dum tempus datur, 557 Dumque eius libido occlusa est contumeliis,	580b I was coming to you. 580c Why, what’s the matter? 581 Why isn’t the bride sent for? It’s now growing late in the day. 581b Do you hear me? I’ve been for some time not a little apprehensive of you, Davus, lest you

	558 Prius quam harum scelera et lacrimae confictae dolis 559 Reducunt animum aegrotum ad misericordiam: 560 Uxorem demus: spero consuetudine et 561 Coniugio liberali devinctum Chreme 562 Dein facile ex illis sese emersurum malis. 563 Tibi ita hoc videtur: at ego non posse arbitror 564 Neque illum hanc perpetuo habere, neque me perpeti. 565 Qui scis ergo istuc nisi periclum feceris? 566 At istuc periclum in filia fieri grave est. 567 Nempe incommoditas denique huc omnis redit: 568 Si eveniat quod Di prohibeant, discessio. 569 At si corrigitur, quot commoditates vide: 570 Principio amico filium restitueris; 571 Tibi generum firmum et filiae invenias virum. 572 Quid istic? si ita istuc animum induxti esse utile, 573 Nolo tibi ullum commodum in me claudier. 574 Merito te semper maximi feci Chreme. 575 Sed quid ais? 575b Quid? 575c Qui scis eos nunc discordare inter se? 576 Ipsus mihi Davus qui intimus est eorum consiliis dixit; 577 Et is mihi suadet nuptias quantum queam ut maturem. 578 Num censes faceret filium nisi sciret eadem haec velle? 579 Tute adeo iam eius verba audies. Heus evocate huc Davum. 580 Atque eccum: video ipsum foras exire.	should do that which the common class of servants is in the habit of doing, namely, impose upon me by your artifices; because my son is engaged in an amour. 584b What, I do that? 584c I fancied so; 585 and therefore, fearing that, I concealed from you what I shall now mention. 585b What? 585c You shall know; for now I almost feel confidence in you. 586b Have you found out at last what sort of a person I am? 587 The marriage was not to have taken place. 587b How? Not to have taken place? 587c But I was making pretense, that I might test you all. 588b What is it you tell me? 588c Such is the fact. 588d Only see! I was not able to discover that. Dear me! what a cunning contrivance! 590 Listen to this. Just as I ordered you to go from here into the house, he (pointing to CHREMES.) most opportunely met me. 590b Ha! Are we undone, then? 591b I told him what you just now told me. 592 Why, what am I to hear? 592b I begged him to give his daughter, and with difficulty I prevailed upon him. 592c Utterly ruined! 592d Eh—What was it you said? 593b Extremely well done, I say. 593c There’s no delay on his part now. 594 I’ll go home at once; I’ll tell her to make due preparation, and bring back word here. 595 Now I do entreat you, Davus, since you by yourself have brought about this marriage for me— 596 I myself, indeed! 596b Do your best still to reform my son. 597 Troth, I’ll do it with all due care. 597b Do it now, while his mind is agitated. 598 You may be at ease. 598b Come then; where is he just now? 598c A wonder if he isn’t at home. 599 I’ll go to him; and what I’ve been telling you, I’ll tell him as well. 599b I’m a lost man! 600 What reason is there why I shouldn’t take my departure straightway hence for the mill? There’s no room left for supplicating; I’ve upset every thing now; I’ve deceived my master; I’ve plunged my master’s son into a marriage; I’ve been the cause of its taking place this very day, without his hoping for it, and against the wish of Pamphilus. Here’s cleverness for you! But, if I had kept myself quiet, no mischief would have happened. (Starting.) 605 But see, I espy him; I’m utterly undone! Would that there were some spot here for me, from which I might this instant pitch myself headlong!

3.4.580b	580b Ad te ibam. 580c Quidnam est? 581 Cur uxor non accersitur? iam advesperascit. 581b Audin tu illum? 582 Ego dudum non nihil veritus sum Dave abs te, ne faceres idem 583 Quod vulgus servorum solet dolis ut me deluderes 584 Propterea quod amat filius. 584b Egone istuc facerem? 584c Credidi: 585 Idque adeo metuens vos celavi quod nunc dicam. 585b Quid? 585c Scies: 586 Nam propemodum habeo iam fidem. 586b Tandem cognosti qui siem? 587 Non fuerant nuptiae futurae. 587b Quid? non? 587c Sed ea gratia 588 Simulavi vos ut pertentarem. 588b Quid ais? 588c Sic res est. 588d Vide, 589 Numquam istuc ego quivi intellegere. Vah consilium callidum. 590 Hoc audi: ut hinc te introire iussi opportune hic fit mihi obviam. 590b Hem, 591 Numnam periimus? 591b Narro huic quae tu dudum narrasti mihi. 592 Quidnam audio? 592b Gnatam ut det oro, vixque id exoro. 592c Occidi. 592d Hem,
3.4.593	593 Quid dixisti? 593b Optime inquam factum. 593c Nunc per hunc nulla est mora. 594 Domum modo ibo: ut apparentur dicam: atque huc renuntio. 595 Nunc te oro Dave quoniam solus mihi effecisti has nuptias— 596 Ego vero solus. 596b corrigere mihi gnatum porro enitere. 597 Faciam hercle sedulo. 597b Potes nunc dum animus

	irritatus est. 598 Quiescas. 598b Age igitur ubi nunc est ipsus? 598c Mirum ni domi est. 599 Ibo ad eum: atque eadem haec tibi quae dixi dicam itidem illi. 599b Nullus sum. 600 Quid causae est quin hinc in pistrinum recta proficiscar via? 601 Nihil est preci loci relictum; iam perturbavi omnia: 602 Herum fefelli; in nuptias conieci herilem filium; 603 Feci hodie ut fierent insperante hoc atque invito Pamphilo. Hem 604 Astutias! quod si quiessem nihil evenisset mali. 605 Sed eccum video ipsum: occidi. 606 Utinam mihi esset aliquid hic quo me nunc praecipitem darem.
3.5	607 Ubi illic est scelus qui me perdidit? 607b Perii. 607c Atque hoc confiteor mihi 608 Iure obtigisse; quandoquidem tam iners tam nulli consili 609 Sum. Servon fortunas meas me commisisse futili? 610 Ergo pretium ob stultitiam fero: sed inultum numquam id auferet. 611 Posthac incolumem sat scio fore me nunc si hoc devito malum. 612 Nam quid ego nunc dicam patri? Negabon velle me modo 613 Qui sum pollicitus ducere? Qua fiducia id facere audeam? 614 Nec quid me nunc faciam scio. 614b Nec quid me; atque id ago sedulo. 615 Dicam aliquid iam inventurum ut huic malo aliquam producam moram. 616 Ohe. 616b Visus sum. 616c Ehodum bone vir quid ais? viden me consiliis tuis 617 Miserum impeditum esse? 617b At iam expediam. 617c Expedies? 617d Certe Pamphile. 618 Nempe ut modo. 618b Immo melius spero. 618c Oh tibi ego ut credam furcifer? 619 Tu rem impeditam et perditam restituas? Hem quo fretus siem, 620 Qui me hodie ex tranquillissima re coniecisti in nuptias. 621 Annon dixi esse hoc futurum? 621b Dixti.	607 Where is he? The villain, who this day—I’m ruined; 607c and I confess that this has justly befallen me, for being such a dolt, so devoid of sense; that I should have in-trusted my fortunes to a frivolous slave! 610 I am suffering the reward of my folly; still he shall never get off from me un-punished for this. 611 I’m quite sure that I shall be safe in future, if for the present I get clear of this mishap. 612 But what now am I to say to my father? Am I to deny that I am ready, who have just promised to marry? With what effrontery could I presume to do that? I know not what to do with myself. 614b Nor I with myself, and yet I’m giving all due attention to it. 615 I’ll tell him that I will devise something, in order that I may procure some respite in this dilemma. 616 Oho! 616b I’m seen. 616c How now, good sir, what are you about? Do you see how dreadfully I am hampered by your devices? 617b Still, I’ll soon extricate you. 617c You, extricate me? 617d Assuredly, Pamphilus. 618 As you have just done, I suppose. 618b Why no, better, I trust. 618c What, am I to believe you, you scoundrel? 620 You, indeed, make good a matter that’s all embarrassment and ruin! Just see, in whom I’ve been placing reliance—you who this day from a most happy state have been and plunged me into a marriage. Didn’t I say that this would be the case? 621b You did say so.

	621c Quid meritus? 621d Crucem. 622 Sed sine paululum ad me redeam: iam aliquid dispiciam. 622b Hei mihi 623 Cum non habeo spatium ut de te sumam supplicium ut volo: 624 Namque hoc tempus praecavere mihi me haud te ulcisci sinit.	621c What do you deserve? 621d The cross. But allow me a little time to recover myself; I'll soon hit upon something. 622b Ah me! not to have the leisure to inflict punishment upon you as I desire! for the present conjuncture warns me to take precautions for myself, not to be taking vengeance on you.
4.1.625	625 Hocine est credibile aut memorabile 626 Tanta vecordia innata cuiquam ut siet 627 Ut malis gaudeant atque ex incommodis 628 Alterius sua ut comparent commoda? ah 629 Idne est verum? immo id est genus hominum pessimum in 630 Denegando modo quis pudor paululum adest: 631 Post ubi tempus promissa iam perfici, 632 Tum coacti necessario se aperiunt, 633 Et timent: et tamen res premit denegare: 634 Ibi tum eorum impudentissima oratio est, 635 Quis tu es? quis mihi es? cur meam tibi? Heus, 636 Proximus sum egomet mihi. Attamen Ubi fides, 637 Si roges, nihil pudet; hic ubi opus est 638 Non verentur: illic ubi nihil opus est ibi verentur. 639 Sed quid agam? adeamne ad eum, et cum eo iniuriam hanc expostulem? 640 Ingeram mala multa? Atque aliquis dicat, Nihil promoveris. 641 Multum: molestus certe ei fuero: atque animo morem gessero. 642 Charine et me et te imprudens, nisi quid Di respiciunt, perdidi. 643 Itane imprudens? tandem inventa est causa: solvisti fidem. 644 Quid tandem? 644b Etiam nunc me ducere istis dictis postulas? 645 Quid istuc est? 645b Postquam me amare dixi complacita est tibi. 646 Heu me miserum qui tuum animum ex animo spectavi meo. 647 Falsus es. 647b Nonne tibi satis esse hoc visum	625 Is this to be believed or spoken of; that malice so great could be inborn in any one as to exult at misfortunes, and to derive advantage from the distresses of another! Oh, is this true? Assuredly, that is the most dangerous class of men, 630 in whom there is only a slight degree of hesitation at refusing; afterward, when the time arrives for fulfilling their promises, then, obliged, of necessity they discover themselves. They are afraid, and yet the circumstances compel them to refuse. Then, in that case, their very insolent remark is, 635 Who are you? What are you to me? What should I give up to you what's my own? Look you, I am the most concerned in my own interests. But if you inquire where is honor, they are not ashamed. Here, where there is occasion, they are not afraid; there, where there is no occasion, they are afraid. But what am I to do? Ought I not to go to him, and reason with him upon this outrage, 640 and heap many an invective upon him? Yet some one may say, you will avail nothing. Nothing? At least I shall have vexed him, and have given vent to my own feelings. 642 Charinus, unintentionally I have ruined both myself and you, unless the Gods in some way befriend us. 643 Unintentionally, is it! An excuse has been discovered at last. You have broken your word. 644 How so, pray? 644b Do you expect to deceive me a second time by these speeches? 645 What does this mean? 645b Since I told you that I loved her, she has become quite pleasing to you. Ah wretched me! to have judged of your disposition from my own. 647 You are mistaken. 647b Did this pleasure appear to you not to be quite complete, unless you tantalized me in my passion, and lured me on by solidum est gaudium, 648 Nisi me lactasses amantem et falsa spe produceres. 649 Habeas. 649b Habeam? ah nescis quantis in malis verser miser; 650 Quantasque hic suis consiliis mihi confecit sollicitudines	groundless hopes?—You may take her. 649b I, take her? Alas! you know not in what perplexities, to my sorrow, I am involved, 650 and what vast anxieties this executioner of mine (pointing to DAVUS.) has contrived for me by his devices. 651b What is it so wonderful, if he takes example from yourself? 652 You would not say that if you understood either myself or my affection. 653 I’m quite aware (ironically.); you have just now had a dispute with your father, and he is now angry with you in consequence, and has not been able to-day to prevail upon you to marry her. 655 No, not at all,—as you are not acquainted with my sorrows, these nuptials were not in preparation for me; and no one was thinking at present of giving me a wife. 658 I am aware; you have been influenced by your own inclination. 658b Hold; you do not yet know all. 659b For my part, I certainly do know that you are about to marry her. 660 Why are you torturing me to death? Listen to this. He (pointing to DAVUS.) never ceased to urge me to tell my father that I would marry her; to advise and persuade me, even until he compelled me. 663 Who was this person? 663b Davus. 663c Davus! 663e For what reason? 663f I don’t know; except that I must have been under the displeasure of the Gods, for me to have listened to him. 665 Is this the fact, Davus? 665b It is the fact. 665c Ha! What do you say, you villain? Then may the Gods send you an end worthy of your deeds. Come now, tell me, if all his enemies had wished him to be plunged into a marriage, what advice but this could they have given? 669 I have been deceived, but I don’t despair. 669b I’m sure of that. 670 This way it has not succeeded; we’ll try another. Unless, perhaps, you think that because it failed at first, this misfortune can not now possibly be changed for better luck. 673 Certainly not; for I quite believe that if you set about it, you will be making two marriages for me out of one. 675 I owe you this, Pamphilus, in respect of my servitude, to strive with hands and feet, night and day; to submit to hazard of my life, to serve you. It is your part, if any thing has fallen out contrary to expectation, to forgive me. What I was contriving has not succeeded; still, I am using all endeavors; 680 or, do you yourself devise something better, and dismiss me. 681 I wish to; restore me to the position in which you found me. 682 I'll do so. 682b But it must be done directly. 682c But the door of Glycerium's house here makes a noise. 683 That's nothing to you. 683b I'm in search of— 683c Dear me, what, now at last? 683d Presently I'll give you what I've hit upon.

4.1.651	651 Meus carnufex. 651b Quid istuc tam mirum est de te si exemplum capit? 652 Haud istuc dicas si cognoris vel me vel amorem meum. 653 Scio: cum patre altercasti dudum: et is nunc propterea tibi 654 Succenset: nec te quivit hodie cogere illam ut duceres. 655 Immo etiam, quo tu minus scis aerumnas meas, 656 Hae nuptiae non apparabantur mihi: 657 Nec postulabat nunc quisquam uxorem dare. 658 Scio: tu coactus tua voluntate es. 658b Mane: 659 Nondum scis. 659b Scio equidem illam ducturum esse te. 660 Cur me enicas? Hoc audi. Numquam destitit 661 Instare ut dicerem me esse ducturum patri; 662 Suadere, orare, usque adeo donec perpulit. 663 Quis homo istuc? 663b Davus.— 663c Davus? 663d interturbat. 663e Quamobrem? 663f Nescio: 664 Nisi mihi deos satis scio fuisse iratos qui eis auscultaverim. 665 Factum hoc est Dave? 665b Factum. 665c Hem, quid ais scelus? 666 At tibi Di dignum factis exitium duint. 667 Eho, dic mihi, si omnes hunc coniectum in nuptias

	668 Inimici vellent quod nisi hoc consilium darent? 669 Deceptus sum at non defatigatus. 669b Scio.
4.1.670	670 Hac non successit, alia aggrediemur via. 671 Nisi id putas, quia primo processit parum, 672 Non posse iam ad salutem converti hoc malum. 673 Immo etiam: nam satis credo si advigilaveris 674 Ex unis geminas mihi conficies nuptias. 675 Ego Pamphile hoc tibi pro servitio debeo, 676 Conari manibus pedibus noctesque et dies; 677 Capitis periclum adire, dum prosim tibi: 678 Tuum est si quid praeter spem evenit mihi ignoscere. 679 Parum succedit quod ago: at facio sedulo. 680 Vel melius tute reperi, me missum face. 681 Cupio: restitue in quem me accepisti locum. 682 Faciam. 682b At iam hoc opus est. 682c Hem! sed, mane. Concrepuit a Glycerio ostium. 683 Nihil ad te. 683b Quaero. 683c Hem, nuncin demum? 683d At iam hoc tibi inventum dabo.
4.2.684	684 Iam ubi ubi erit inventum tibi curabo et mecum adductum 685 Tuum Pamphilum: tu modo anime mi noli te macerare. 686 Mysis. 686b Quid est? Ehem Pamphile, opportune te mihi offers. 686c Quid est? 687 Orare iussit si se ames hera iam ut ad sese venias: 688 Videre ait te cupere. 688b Vah, perii: hoc malum integrascit. 689 Sicine me atque illam opera tua nunc miseros sollicitarier? 690 Nam idcirco arcessor, nuptias quod mihi apparari sensit. 691 Quibus quidem quam facile potuerat quiesci si hic quiesset. 692 Age si hic non insanit satis sua sponte instiga.	684 Now, wherever he is, I’ll take care that your own Pamphilus shall be found for you, and brought to you by me; do you only, my life, cease to vex yourself. 686 Mysis. 686b Who is it? Why, Pamphilus, you do present yourself opportunely to me. 687 My mistress charged me to beg of you, if you love her, to come to her directly; she says she wishes to see you. 688b Alas! I am undone; this dilemma grows apace! (To DAVUS.) For me and her, unfortunate persons, now to be tortured this way through your means; 690 for I am sent for, because she has discovered that my marriage is in preparation. 691 From which, indeed, how easily a respite could have been obtained, if he (pointing to DAVUS.) had kept himself quiet. 692 Do proceed; if he isn’t sufficiently

	692b Atque edepol 693 Ea res est: proptereaque nunc misera in maerore est. 693b Mysis, 694 Per omnes tibi adiuro deos numquam eam me deserturum; 695 Non si capiundos mihi sciam esse inimicos omnes homines. 696 Hanc mihi expetivi, contigit: conveniunt mores: valeant 697 Qui inter nos discidium volunt: hanc nisi mors mihi adimet nemo. 698 Resipisco. 698b Non Apollinis magis verum atque hoc responsum est. 699 Si poterit fieri ut ne pater per me stetisse credat 700 Quo minus hae fierent nuptiae, volo. Sed si id non poterit, 701 Id faciam in proclivi quod est per me stetisse ut credat. 702 Quis videor? 702b Miser aeque atque ego. 702c Consilium quaero. 702d Fortis! 703 Scio quid conere? 703b Hoc ego tibi profecto effectum reddam.	angry of his own accord, do you irritate him. 692b Aye faith, that is the case; and for that reason, poor thing, she is now in distress. 693b Mysis, I swear by all the Gods that I will never forsake her; 695 not if I were to know that all men would be my enemies in consequence. Her have I chosen for mine; she has fallen to my lot; our feelings are congenial; farewell they, who wish for a separation between us; nothing but Death separates her from me. 698 I begin to revive. 698b Not the responses of Apollo are more true than this. If it can possibly be contrived that my father may not believe 700 that this marriage has been broken off through me, I could wish it. But if that can not be, I will do that which is easily effected, for him to believe that through me it has been caused. What do you think of me? 702b That you are as unhappy as myself. 702c I’m contriving an expedient. 702d You are a clever hand; 703 if you do set about any thing. 703b Assuredly, I’ll manage this for you. 704 There’s need of it now. 704b But I’ve got it now. 704c What is it? 704d For him (pointing to PAMPHILUS) I’ve got it, not for you, don’t mistake. 705 I’m quite satisfied. 705b What will you do? Tell me. 705c I’m afraid that this day won’t be long enough for me to execute it, so don’t suppose that I’ve now got leisure for relating it; do you betake yourself off at once, for you are a hinderance to me. 708 I’ll go and see her. 708b What are you going to do? Whither are you going from here? 708c Do you wish me to tell you the truth? 708d No, not at all; (aside.) he’s making the beginning of a long story for me.
4.2.704	704 Iam hoc opus est. 704b Quin iam habeo. 704c Quid est? 704d Huic, non tibi habeo, ne erres. 705 Sat habeo. 705b Quid facies? cedo. 705c Dies mihi hic ut satis sit vereor 706 Ad agendum: ne vacuum esse me nunc ad narrandum credas. 707 Proinde hinc vos amolimini: nam mihi impedimento estis. 708 Ego hanc visam.	709b What will become of me? 710 Come now, you unreasonable person, are you not satisfied that I give you a little respite, by putting off his marriage? 711b But yet, Davus— 711c What then? 712 That I may marry her— 712b Absurd. 712c Be sure to come hither (pointing in the direction of his house.) to my house, if you can effect any thing. 713 Why should I come? I can do nothing for you. 713b But still, if any thing—

	708b Quid tu? quo hinc te agis? 708c Verum vis dicam? 708d Immo etiam 709 Narrationis incipit mihi initium. 709b Quid me fiet? 710 Eho tu impudens non satis habes quod tibi dieculam addo 711 Quantum huic promoveo nuptias? 711b Dave attamen. 711c Quid ergo? 712 Ut ducam. 712b Ridiculum. 712c Huc face ad me ut venias si quid poteris. 713 Quid veniam? nihil habeo. 713b At tamen siquid. 713c Age veniam. 713d Si quid 714 Domi ero. 714b Tu Mysis dum exeo parumper opperire hic. 715 Quapropter? 715b Ita facto est opus.	713c Well, well, I'll come. 713d If you can; I shall be at home. 714b Do you, Mysis, remain here a little while, until I come out. 715 For what reason? 715b There's a necessity for so doing. 715c Make haste. 715d I'll be here this moment, I tell you.
4.2.715c	715c Matura. 715d Iam inquam hic adero.
4.3	716 Nihilne esse proprium cuiquam? Di vestram fidem: 717 Summum bonum esse herae putavi hunc Pamphilum, 718 Amicum, amatorem, virum in quovis loco 719 Paratum: verum ex eo nunc misera quem capit 720 Dolorem! facile hic plus mali est, quam illic boni. 721 Sed Davus exit. Mi homo quid istuc obsecro est? 722 Quo portas puerum? 722b Mysis nunc opus est tua 723 Mihi ad hanc rem exprompta memoria atque astutia. 724 Quidnam incepturus? 724b Accipe a me hunc ocius, 725 Atque ante nostram ianuam appone. 725b Obsecro 726 Humine? 726b Ex ara hinc sume verbenas tibi 727 Atque eas substerne. 727b Quamobrem id tute non facis? 728 Quia si forte opus sit ad herum iurandum mihi 729 Non apposuisse ut liquido possim. 729b Intelligo: 730 Nova nunc religio in te istaec incessit cedo?	716 That nothing can be secure to any one! Ye Gods, by our trust in you! I used to make sure that this Pamphilus was a supreme blessing for my mistress; a friend, a protector, a husband secured under every circumstance; yet what anguish is she, poor thing, now suffering through him? 720 Clearly there's more trouble for her now than there was happiness formerly. But Davus is coming out. (Enter DAVUS from the house of GLYCERIUM with the child.) My good sir, prithee, what is that? Whither are you carrying the child? 722b Mysis, I now stand in need of your cunning being brought into play in this matter, and of your address. 724 Why, what are you going to do? 724b Take it from me directly, and lay it down before our door. 725b Prithee, on the ground? 726b Take some sacred herbs from the altar here, and strew them under it. 727b Why don't you do it yourself? 728 That if perchance I should have to swear to my master that I did not place it there, I may be enabled to do so with a clear conscience. 729b I understand; 730 have these new scruples only just now occurred to you, pray? 731 Bestir yourself

	731 Move ocius te, ut quid agam porro intelligas. 732 Pro Iupiter. 732b Quid est? 732c Sponsae pater intervenit. 733 Repudio quod consilium primum intenderam. 734 Nescio quid narres. 734b Ego quoque hinc ab dextera 735 Venire me assimulabo: tu ut subservias 736 Orationi ut quomque opus sit verbis vide. 737 Ego quid agas nihil intelligo: sed si quid est 738 Quod mea opera opus sit vobis, aut tu plus vides, 739 Manebo, ne quod vestrum remorer commodum.	quickly, that you may learn what I'm going to do next. (MYSIS lays the child at SIMO's door.) Oh Jupiter! 732b What's the matter? 732c The father of the intended bride is coming in the middle of it all. The plan which I had first purposed I now give up. 734 I don't understand what you are talking about. 734b I'll pretend too that I've come in this direction from the right. Do you take care to help out 736 the conversation by your words, whenever there's necessity. 737 I don't at all comprehend what you are about; but if there's any thing in which you have need of my assistance, as you understand the best, I'll stay, that I mayn't in any way impede your success. (DAVUS retires out of sight.)
4.4.740	740 Revertor postquam quae opus fuere ad nuptias 741 Gnatae paravi, ut iubeam arcessi. Sed quid hoc? 742 Puer hercle est. Mulier tune apposuisti hunc? 742b Ubi illic est? 743 Non mihi respondes? 743b Nusquam est: vae miserae mihi, 744 Reliquit me homo atque abiit. 744b Di vestram fidem, 745 Quid turbae est apud forum? quid illic hominum litigant? 746 Tum annona cara est: quid dicam aliud nescio. 747 Cur tu obsecro hic me solam? 747b Quae est haec fabula? 748 Eho Mysis, puer hic unde est? quisve huc attulit? 749 Satin sanus es qui me id rogites? 749b Quem igitur rogem? 750 Qui hic neminem alium videam. 750b Miror unde sit. 751 Dictura es quod rogo? 751b Au. 751c Concede ad dexteram. 752 Deliras: non tute ipse? 752b Verbum si mihi 753 Unum praeterquam quod te rogo faxis cave. 754 Male dicis? 754b Undest? Dic clare. 754c A nobis. 754d Attatae! 755 Mirum vero impudenter mulier si facit 756 Meretrix. 756b Ab Andria est haec quantum	740 After having provided the things necessary for my daughter's nuptials, I'm returning, that I may request her to be sent for. (Seeing the child.) But what's this? I'faith, it's a child. (Addressing MYSIS.) Woman, have you laid that here (pointing to the child.)? 742b Where is he? 743 Don't you answer me? 743b He isn't any where to be seen. Woe to wretched me! the fellow has left me and is off. 744b Ye Gods, by our trust in you! 745 what a crowd there is in the Forum! What a lot of people are squabbling there! (Aloud.) Then provisions are so dear. (Aside.) What to say besides, I don't know. 747 Pray, why did you leave me here alone? 747b Ha! what story is this? How now, Mysis, whence comes this child? Who has brought it here? 749 Are you quite right in your senses, to be asking me that? 749b Whom, then, ought I to ask, 750 as I don't see any one else here? 750b I wonder whence it has come. 751 Are you going to tell me what I ask? 751b Pshaw! 751c Step aside to the right. 752 You are out of your senses; didn't you your own self? 752b Take you care not to utter a single word beyond what I ask you. 754b Why don't you say aloud whence it comes? 754c From our house. 754d Heyday, indeed! 755 it really is a wonder if a woman, who is a courtesan, acts impudently. 756b So far as I can learn, this woman belongs to the Andrian. 757 Do we intelligo.	seem to you such very suitable persons for you to be playing tricks with us in this way? 758b I came just in time. 759 Make haste then, and take the child away from the door here: 760 (in a low voice.) stay there; take care you don’t stir from that spot. 761 May the Gods confound you! you do so terrify poor me. 762 Is it to you I speak or not? 762b What is it you want? 762c What—do you ask me again? Tell me, whose child have you been laying here? Let me know.

4.4.757	757 Adeon videmur vobis esse idonei 758 In quibus sic illudatis? 758b Veni in tempore. 759 Propera adeo puerum tollere hinc ab ianua: 760 Mane: cave quoquam ex istoc excessis loco. 761 Di te eradicent: ita me miseram territas. 762 Tibi ego dico annon? 762b Quid vis? 762c At etiam rogas? 763 Cedo cuium puerum hic apposuisti? dic mihi. 764 Tu nescis? 764b Mitte id quod scio: dic quod rogo. 765 Vestri. 765b Cuius nostri? 765c Pamphili. 765d Hem, quid? Pamphili? 766 Eho, annon est? 766b Recte ego semper fugi has nuptias. 767 O facinus animadvertendum. 767b Quid clamitas? 768 Quemne ego heri vidi ad vos afferri vesperi? 769 O hominem audacem. 769b Verum. Vidi Cantharam 770 Suffarcinatam. 770b Dis pol habeo gratiam 771 Quum in pariundo aliquot affuerunt liberae. 772 Ne illa illum haud novit cuius causa haec incipit. 773 Chremes si positum puerum ante aedes viderit 774 Suam gnatam non dabit? Tanto hercle magis dabit. 775 Non hercle faciet.	764 Don’t you know? 764b Have done with what I know; tell me what I ask. 765 It belongs to your people. 765b Which of our people? 765c To Pamphilus. 765d How? What—to Pamphilus? 766 How now—is it not so? 766b With good reason have I always been averse to this match, it’s clear. 767 O abominable piece of effrontery! 767b Why are you bawling out so? 768 What, the very one I saw being carried to your house yesterday evening? 769 O you impudent fellow! 769b It’s the truth. I saw Cantharа stuffed out beneath her clothes. 770b I’faith, I thank the Gods that several free women were present at the delivery. 772 Assuredly she doesn’t know him, on whose account she resorts to these schemes. Chremes, she fancies, if he sees the child laid before the door, will not give his daughter; i’faith, he’ll give her all the sooner. 775 I’faith, he’ll not do so. 775b Now therefore, that you may be quite aware, if you don’t take up the child, I’ll roll it forthwith into the middle of the road; and yourself in the same place I’ll roll over into the mud. 778 Upon my word, man, you are not sober. 778b One scheme brings on another. I now hear it whispered about that she is a citizen of Attica—780b Ha! 780c And that, constrained by the laws, he will have to take her as his wife. 781b Well now, pray, is she not a citizen? 782 I had almost fallen unawares into a comical misfortune. 783 Who’s that, speaking? (Pretending to look about.) O Chremes, you have come in good time. Do listen to this. 784b I have heard it all already. 785b Prithee, did you hear it? Here’s villainy for you!

		she (pointing at MYSIS.) ought to be carried off hence to the torture forthwith. (To MYSIS, pointing at CHREMES.) This is Chremes himself; don’t suppose that you are trifling with Davus only. 788 Wretched me! upon my faith I have told no untruth, my worthy old gentleman. 789 I know the whole affair. Is Simo within? 789b He is. 789c Don’t touch me, villain. (Moving away.) On my word, if I don’t tell Glycerium all this—
4.4.775b	775b Nunc adeo ut tu sis sciens, 776 Nisi puerum tollis iam ego hunc in mediam viam 777 Provolvam: teque ibidem pervolvam in luto. 778 Tu pol homo non es sobrius. 778b Fallacia 779 Alia aliam trudit; iam susurrari audio 780 Civem Atticam esse hanc. 780b Eho. 780c Coactus legibus 781 Eam uxorem ducet. 781b Au obsecro an non civis est? 782 Iocularium in malum insciens paene incidi. 783 Quis hic loquitur? o Chreme, per tempus advenis. 784 Ausculta. 784b Audivi iam omnia. 784c Ain tu? haec omnia! 785 Audivi, inquam, a principio. 785b Audistine obsecro? Hem 786 Scelera, hanc iam oportet in cruciatum hinc abripi. 787 Hic est ille: non te credas Davum ludere. 788 Me miseram: nihil pol falsi dixi mi senex. 789 Novi rem omnem: est Simo intus? 789b Est. 789c Ne me attigas 790 Sceleste. Si pol Glycerio non omnia haec— 791 Eho inepta nescis quid sit actum? 791b Quid sciam? 792 Hic socer est. Alio pacto haud poterat fieri 793 Ut sciret haec quae voluimus. 793b Praediceres.	791 How now, simpleton, don’t you know what has been done? 791b How should I know? 792 This is the bride’s father. It couldn’t any other way have been managed that he should know the things that we wanted him to know. 793b You should have told me that before. 794 Do you suppose that it makes little difference whether you do things according to impulse, 795 as nature prompts, or from premeditation?
4.4.794	794 Paullum interesse censes ex animo omnia, 795 Ut fert natura, facias an de industria?

4.5	796 In hac habitasse platea dictum est Chrysidem 797 Quae sese inhoneste optavit parere hic divitias 798 Potius quam in patria honeste pauper viveret. 799 Eius morte ea ad me lege redierunt bona. 800 Sed quos perconter video. Salvete. 800b Obsecro 801 Quem video? Estne hic Crito sobrinus Chrysidis? 802 Is est. 802b O Mysis, salve. 802c Salvus sis Crito. 803 Itan Chrysis? hem. 803b Nos quidem pol miseras perdidit. 804 Quid vos? quo pacto hic? satin recte? 804b Nosne? Sic 805 Ut quimus aiunt, quando ut volumus non licet. 806 Quid Glycerium? iam hic suos parentes repperit? 807 Utinam. 807b An nondum etiam? Haud auspicato huc me appuli: 808 Nam pol si id scissem nunquam huc tetulissem pedem: 809 Semper enim dicta est eius haec atque habita est soror: 810 Quae illius fuerunt possidet: nunc me hospitem 811 Lites sequi quam id mihi sit facile atque utile 812 Aliorum exempla commonent: simul arbitror 813 Iam aliquem esse amicum et defensorem ei; nam fere 814 Grandiuscula iam profecta est illinc. Clamitent 815 Me sycophantam, hereditates persequi, 816 Mendicum: tum ipsam despoliare non licet. 817 O optime hospes pol Crito antiquum obtines. 818 Duc me ad eam, quando huc veni, ut videam. 818b Maxime. 819 Sequar hos: nolo me in tempore hoc videat senex.	796 It was said that Chrysis used to live in this street, who preferred to gain wealth here dishonorably to living honestly as a poor woman in her own country: by her death that property has descended to me by law. 800 But I see some persons of whom to make inquiry. (Accosting them.) Good-morrow to you. 800b Prithee, whom do I see? Isn't this Crito, the kinsman of Chrysis? It is he. 802b O Mysis, greetings to you. 802c Welcome to you, Crito. 803 Is Chrysis then—? Alas! 803b Too truly. She has indeed left us poor creatures quite heart-broken. 804 How fare you here, and in what fashion? Pretty well? 804b What, we? Just 805 as we can, as they say; since we can't as we would. 806 How is Glycerium? Has she discovered her parents yet? 807 I wish she had. 807b What, not yet? With no favorable omen did I set out for this place; for, upon my faith, if I had known that, I never would have moved a foot hither. She was always said to be, and was looked upon as her sister; 810 what things were hers she is in possession of; now for me to begin a suit at law here, the precedents of others warn me, a stranger, how easy and profitable a task it would be for me. At the same time, I suppose that by this she has got some friend and protector; for she was pretty nearly a grown-up girl when she left there. They would cry out 815 that I am a sharper; that, a pauper, I'm hunting after an inheritance; besides, I shouldn't like to strip the girl herself. 817 O most worthy stranger! I'faith, Crito, you still adhere to your good old-fashioned ways. 818 Lead me to her, since I have come hither, that I may see her. 818b By all means. 819 I'll follow them; I don't wish the old man to see me at this moment.
5.1	820 Satis iam satis Simo spectata erga te amicitia est mea: 821 Satis pericli coepi adire: orandi iam finem face.	820 Enough already, enough, Simo, has my friendship toward you been proved. Sufficient hazard have I begun to encounter; make an end of

	822 Dum studeo obsequi tibi paene illusi vitam filiae. 823 Immo enim nunc quum maxime abs te postulo atque oro Chreme 824 Ut beneficium verbis initum dudum nunc re comprobes. 825 Vide quam iniquus sis prae studio. Dum id efficias quod cupis, 826 Neque modum benignitatis neque quid me ores cogitas: 827 Nam si cogites, remittas iam me onerare iniuriis. 828 Quibus? 828b Ah! rogitas? perpulisti me ut homini adolescentulo 829 In alio occupato amore, abhorrenti ab re uxoria, 830 Filiam darem in seditionem atque in incertas nuptias, 831 Eius labore atque eius dolore gnato ut medicarer tuo. 832 Impetrasti: incepi dum res tetulit: nunc non fert; feras. 833 Illam hinc civem esse aiunt: puer est natus: nos missos face. 834 Per ego te deos oro ut ne illis animum inducas credere 835 Quibus id maxime utile est illum esse quam deterrimum. 836 Nuptiarum gratia haec sunt ficta atque incepta omnia. 837 Ubi ea causa quamobrem haec faciunt erit adempta his desinent. 838 Erras: cum Davo egomet vidi iurgantem ancillam. 838b Scio. 838c At 839 Vero vultu; quum ibi me adesse neuter tum praesenserat. 840 Credo; et id facturas Davus dudum praedixit mihi: 841 Et nescio qui tibi sum oblitus hodie ac volui dicere.	your entreaties, then. While I've been endeavoring to oblige you, I've almost fooled away my daughter's prospects in life. 823 Nay but, now in especial, Chremes, I do beg and entreat of you, that the favor, commenced a short time since in words, you'll now complete by deeds. 825 See how unreasonable you are from your very earnestness; so long as you effect what you desire, you neither think of limits to compliance, nor what it is you request of me; for if you did think, you would now forbear to trouble me with unreasonable requests. 828 What unreasonable requests? 828b Do you ask? You importuned me to promise my daughter to a young man engaged in another attachment, averse to the marriage state, 830 to plunge her into discord and a marriage of uncertain duration; that through her sorrow and her anguish I might reclaim your son. You prevailed; while the case admitted of it I made preparations. Now it does not admit of it; you must put up with it; they say that she is a citizen of this place; a child has been born; do cease to trouble us. 834 By the Gods, I do conjure you not to bring your mind to believe 835 those whose especial interest it is that he should be as degraded as possible. On account of the marriage, have all these things been feigned and contrived. When the reason for which they do these things is removed from them, they will desist. 838 You are mistaken; I myself saw the servant-maid wrangling with Davus. 838b I am aware. 838c With an appearance of earnestness, when neither at the moment perceived that I was present there. 840 I believe it; and Davus a short time since forewarned me that this would be the case; and I don't know how I forgot to tell it you to-day, as I had intended.
5.2.842	842 Animo nunc iam otioso esse impero— 842b Hem Davum tibi. 843 Unde egreditur? 843b meo praesidio atque hospitis. 843c Quid illud mali est? 844 Ego commodiorem hominem, adventum, tempus non vidi.	842 Now then, I bid you set your minds at ease. 842b See you, there's Davus. 843 From what house is he coming out? 843b Through my means, and that of the stranger— 843c What mischief is this? 844 I never did see a more opportune person, encounter, or occasion. 844b

	844b Scelus, 845 Quem nam hic laudat? 845b Omnis res est iam in vado. 845c Cesso alloqui? 846 Herus est: quid agam? 846b O salve bone vir. 846c Ehem Simo! o noster Chreme! 847 Omnia apparata iam sunt intus. 847b Curasti probe. 848 Ubi voles arcesse. 848b Bene sane; id enimvero hinc nunc abest. 849 Etiam tu hoc respondes? quid istic tibi negoti est? 849b Mihine? 850 Ita. 850b Mihine? 850c Tibi ergo. 850d Modo introii. 850e Quasi ego, quam dudum, rogem. 851 Cum tuo gnato una. 851b Anne est intus Pamphilus? crucior miser. 852 Eho, non tu dixti esse inter eos inimicitias, carnufex? 853 Sunt. 853b Cur igitur hic est? 853c Quid illum census? cum illa litigat.	The rascal! 845 I wonder who it is he’s praising? 845b All the affair is now in a safe position. 845c Why do I delay to accost him? 846 It’s my master; what am I to do? 846b O, save you, good sir! 846c Hah! Simo! O, Chremes, my dear sir, all things are now quite ready in-doors. 847b You have taken such very good care. 848 Send for the bride when you like. 848b Very good: (ironically.) of course, that’s the only thing that’s now wanting here. But do you answer me this, what business had you there? 849b What, I? 850 Just so. 850b I? 850c Yes, you. 850d I went in just now. 850e As if I asked how long ago! 851 Together with your son. 851b What, is Phamphilus in there? (Aside.) To my confusion, I’m on the rack! (To DAVUS.) How now? Didn’t you say that there was enmity between them, you scoundrel? 853 There is. 853b Why is he there, then? 853c Why do you. suppose he is? (Ironically.) Quarreling with her, of course. 854 Nay but, Chremes, I’ll let you now hear from me a disgraceful piece of business. 855 An old man, I don’t know who he is, has just now come here; look you, he is a confident and shrewd person; when you look at his appearance, he seems to be a person of some consequence. There is a grave sternness in his features, and something commanding in his words. 858 What news are you bringing, I wonder?
5.2.854	854 Immo vero indignum Chreme iam facinus faxo ex me audias. 855 Nescio quis senex modo venit: ellum confidens, catus. 856 Quum faciem videas videtur esse quantivis preti. 857 Tristis severitas inest in vultu, atque in verbis fides. 858 Quidnam apportas? 858b Nihil equidem nisi quod illum audivi dicere. 859 Quid ait tandem? 859b Glycerium se scire civem esse Atticam. 859c Hem, 860 Dromo, Dromo. 860b Quid est? 860c Dromo. 860d Audi. 860e Verbum si addideris. Dromo.	858b Why nothing but what I heard him mention. 859 What does he say then? 859b That he knows Glycerium to be a citizen of Attica. 859c Ho there! 860 Dromo, Dromo! 860b What is it? 860c Dromo! 860d Hear me. 860e If you add a word—Dromo! 861 Hear me, pray. 861b What do you want? 861c Carry him off on your shoulders in-doors as fast as possible. 862 Whom? 862b Davus. 862c For what reason? 862d Because I choose. (To. DROMO.) Carry him off, I say. 862e What have I done? 862f Carry him off. 863 If you find that I have told a lie in any one matter, then kill me. 863b I’ll hear nothing. I’ll soon have you set in motion. 864b What? Although this is the truth. 864c In spite of it. 865 (To DROMO.) Take 861 Audi, obsecro. 861b Quid vis? 861c Sublimem hunc intro rape, quantum potes. 862 Quem? 862b Davum. 862c Quamobrem? 862d Quia libet: rape, inquam. 862e Quid feci? 862f Rape. 863 Si quicquam invenies me mentitum, occidito. 863b Nihil audio. 864 Ego iam te commotum reddam. 864b Tamen etsi hoc verum est? 864c Tamen. 865 Cura asservandum vinctum: atque audin? quadrupedem constringito. 866 Age nunc iam: ego pol hodie, si vivo, tibi	care he’s kept well secured; and, do you hear? Tie him up hands and feet together. Now then, be off; upon my faith this very day, if I live, I’ll teach you what hazard there is in deceiving a master, and him in deceiving a father. 868b Oh, don’t be so extremely vexed. 868c O Chremes, the dutifulness of a son! Do you not pity me? 870 That I should endure so much trouble for such a son! (Goes to the door of GLYCERIUM’s house.) Come, Pamphilus, come out, Pamphilus! have you any shame left?

5.2.867	867 Ostendam herum quid sit pericli fallere, 868 Et illi, patrem. 868b Ah, ne saevi tantopere. 868c O Chreme, 869 Pietatem gnati! nonne te miseret mei; 870 Tantum laborem capere ob talem filium? 871 Age Pamphile, exi Pamphile: ecquid te pudet?
5.3	872 Quis me vult? perii: pater est. 872b Quid ais, omnium—? 872c Ah, 873 Rem potius ipsam dic, ac mitte male loqui. 874 Quasi quicquam in hunc iam gravius dici possiet. 875 Ain tandem? civis Glycerium est? 875b Ita praedicant. 876 Ita praedicant! O ingentem confidentiam! 877 Num cogitat quid dicat? num facti piget? 878 Num eius color pudoris signum usquam indicat? 879 Adeo impotenti esse animo ut praeter civium 880 Morem atque legem et sui voluntatem patris 881 Tamen hanc habere studeat cum summo probro? 882 Me miserum! 882b Hem! modone id demum sensti Pamphile? 883 Olim istuc, olim, cum ita animum	872 Who is it that wants me? (Aside.) I’m undone! it’s my father. 872b What say you, of all men, the —? 872c Oh! rather speak about the matter itself, and forbear to use harsh language. 874 As if any thing too severe could now be possibly said against him. 875 Pray, do you say that Glycerium is a citizen— 875b So they say. 876 So they say! Unparalleled assurance! does he consider what he says? Is he sorry for what he has done? Does his countenance, pray, at all betray any marks of shame? That he should be of mind so weak, as, without regard 880 to the custom and the law of his fellow-citizens, and the wish of his own father, to be anxious, in spite of every thing, to have her, to his own utter disgrace! 882 Miserable that I am! 882b Ha! have you at last found that out only just now, Pamphilus? Long since did that expression, long since, when you made up your mind, induxti tuum 884 Quod cuperes aliquo pacto efficiendum tibi, 885 Eodem die istuc verbum vere in te accidit. 886 Sed quid ego? cur me excrucio? cur me macero 887 Cur meam senectutem huius sollicito amentia? an 888 Ut pro huius peccatis ego supplicium sufferam? 889 Immo habeat; valeat; vivat cum illa. 889b Mi pater. 890 Quid mi pater? quasi tu huius indigeas patris. 891 Domus, uxor, liberi inventi invito patre: 892 Adducti qui illam civem hinc dicant: viceris. 893 Pater licetne pauca? 893b Quid dices mihi? 894 Tamen Simo audi. 894b Ego audiam? quid ego audiam 895 Chreme? 895b At tandem dicat sine. 895c Age dicat; sino. 896 Ego me amare hanc fateor: si id peccare est, fateor id quoque. 897 Tibi pater me dedo: quidvis oneris impone; impera. 898 Vis me uxorem ducere? hanc amittere? ut potero, feram. 899 Hoc modo te obsecro, ut ne credas a me allegatum hunc senem. 900 Sine me expurgem atque illum huc coram adducam. 900b Adducas! 900c Sine, pater. 901 Aequum postulat: da veniam. 901b Sine te hoc exorem. 901c Sino. 902 Quidvis cupio dum ne ab hoc me falli comperiar Chreme. 903 Pro peccato magno paulum supplici satis est patri.	that what you desired must be effected by you at any price; 885 from that very day did that expression aptly befit you. But yet why do I torment myself? Why vex myself? Why worry my old age with this madness? Am I to suffer the punishment for his offenses? Nay then, let him have her, good-by to him, let him pass his life with her. 889b My father— 890 How, my father? As if you stood in any need of this father. Home, wife, and children, provided by you against the will of your father! People suborned, too, to say that she is a citizen of this place! You have gained your point. 893 Father, may I say a few words? 893b What can you say to me? 894 But, Simo, do hear him. 894b I, hear him? Why should I hear him, 895 Chremes? 895b Still, however, do allow him to speak. 895c Well then, let him speak: I allow him. 896 I own that I love her; if that is committing a fault, I own that also. To you, father, do I subject myself. Impose on me any injunction you please; command me. Do you wish me to take a wife? Do you wish me to give her up? As well as I can I will endure it. This only I request of you, not to think that this old gentleman has been suborned by me. 900 Allow me to clear myself, and to bring him here before you. 900b To bring him here? 900c Do allow me, father. 901 He asks what’s reasonable; do give him leave. 901b Allow me to obtain thus much of you. 901c I allow it. I desire any thing, so long as I find, Chremes, that I have not been deceived by him. 903 For a great offense, a slight punishment ought to satisfy a father.

5.4.904	904 Mitte orare: una harum quaevis causa me ut faciam monet; 905 Vel tu, vel quod verum est, vel quod ipsi cupio Glycerio. 906 Andrium ego Critonem video? certe is est. 906b Salvus sis, Chreme. 907 Quid tu Athenas insolens? 907b Evenit: sed hicine est Simo? 908 Hic. 908b Men quaeris? eho tu Glycerium hinc civem esse ais?	904 Forbear entreating. Of these, any one reason prompts me to do it, 905 either your own sake, or the fact that it is the truth, or that I wish well for Glycerium herself. 906 Do I see Crito of Andros? Surely it is he. 906b Greetings to you, Chremes. 907 How is it that, so contrary to your usage, you are at Athens? 907b So it has happened. But is this Simo? 908 It is he. 908a Simo, were you asking for me? 908b How now, do you say that

	909 Tu negas? 909b Itane huc paratus advenis? 909c Qua de re? 909d Rogas? 910 Tune impune haec facias? tune hic homines adolescentulos 911 Imperitos rerum, eductos libere, in fraudem illicis? 912 Sollicitando et pollicitando eorum animos lactas—? 912b Sanusne es? 913 Ac meretricios amores nuptiis conglutinas? 914 Perii! metuo ut substet hospes. 914b Si Simo hunc noris satis, 915 Non ita arbitrere: bonus est hic vir. 915b Hic vir sit bonus? 916 Itane attemperate venit hodie in ipsis nuptiis, 917 Ut veniret antehac nunquam? est vero huic credendum Chreme? 918 Ni metuam patrem, habeo pro illa re illum quod moneam probe. 919 Sycophanta. 919b Hem! 919c Sic Crito est hic: mitte. 919d Videat qui siet. 920 Si mihi pergit quae volt dicere, ea quae non volt audiet. 921 Ego istaec moveo, aut curo? non tu tuum malum aequo animo feres?	Glycerium is a citizen of this place? 909 Do you deny it? 909b Have you come here so well prepared? 909c For what purpose? 909d Do you ask? Are you to be acting this way with impunity? Are you to be luring young men into snares here, inexperienced in affairs, and liberally brought up, by tempting them, and to be playing upon their fancies by making promises? 912b Are you in your senses? 913 And are you to be patching up amours with Courtesans by marriage? 914 I’m undone! I fear that the stranger will not put up with this. 914b If, Simo, you knew this person well, 915 you would not think thus; he is a worthy man. 915b He, a worthy man! To come so opportunely to-day just at the very nuptials, and yet never to have come before? (Ironically.) Of course, we must believe him, Chremes. 918 If I didn’t dread my father, I have something, which, in this conjuncture, I could opportunely suggest to him 919 A sharper! 919b Hah! 919c It is his way, Crito; do excuse it. 919d Let him take heed how he behaves. 920 If he persists in saying to me what he likes, he’ll be hearing things that he don’t like. Am I meddling with these matters or interesting myself? Can you not endure your troubles with a patient mind? For as to what I say, whether it is true or false what I have heard, can soon be known. A certain man of Attica, a long time ago, his ship being wrecked, was cast ashore at Andros, and this woman together with him, who was then a little girl; he, in his destitution, by chance first made application 925 to the father of Chrysis— 925b He’s beginning his tale. 925c Let him alone. 926 Really, is he to be interrupting me in this way? 926b Do you proceed.
5.4.922	922 Nam ego quae dico vera an falsa audieris iam sciri potest. 923 Atticus quidam olim navi fracta apud Andrum eiectus est, 924 Et istaec una parva virgo: tum ille egens forte applicat 925 Primum ad Chrysidis patrem se. 925b Fabulam inceptat. 925c Sine. 926 Itane vero obturbat? 926b Perge.	926c He who received him was a relation of mine. There I heard from him that he was a native of Attica. He died there. 928b His name? 928c The name, in such a hurry! 928d Phania. 929 Hah! I shall die! 929b I’faith, I really think it was Phania; this I know for certain, 930 he said that he was a citizen of Rhamnus. 930b O Jupiter! 930c Many other persons in Andros have heard the same, Chremes. 931b

	926c Tum is mihi cognatus fuit 927 Qui eum recepit. Ibi ego audivi ex illo sese esse Atticum. 928 Is ibi mortuus est. 928b Eius nomen? 928c Nomen tam cito? 928d Phania. 929 Hem, perii. 929b Verum hercle opinor fuisse Phaniam: hoc certo scio 930 Rhamnusium se aiebat esse. 930b O Iupiter! 930c Eadem haec Chreme 931 Multi alii in Andro tum audivere. 931b Utinam id sit quod spero. Eho, dic mihi, 932 Quid eam tum? suamne esse aibat? 932b Non. 932c Cuiam igitur? 932d Fratris filiam. 933 Certe mea est. 933b Quid ais? 933c Quid tu ais? 933d Arrige aures Pamphile. 934 Qui credis?	I trust it may turn out as I hope. (To CRITO.) Come now, tell me, what did he then say about her? Did he say she was his own daughter? 932b No. 932c Whose then? 932d His brother's daughter. 933 She certainly is mine. 933b What do you say? 933c What is this that you say? 933d Prick up your ears, Pamphilus. 934 Why do you suppose so? 934b That Phania was my brother. 934c I knew him, and I am aware of it. 935 He, flying from the wars, and following me to Asia, set out from here. At the same time he was afraid to leave her here behind; since then, this is the first time I have heard what became of him. 937b I am scarcely myself, so much has my mind been agitated by fear, hope, joy, and surprise at this so great, so unexpected blessing. 939 Really, I am glad for many reasons that she has been discovered to be a citizen. 939b I believe it, father. 940 But there yet remains one difficulty with me, which keeps me in suspense. 940b You deserve to be —, with your scruples, you plague. You are seeking a knot in a bulrush. 941b What is that? 942 The names don't agree. 942b Troth, she had another when little. 942c What was it, Crito? Can you remember it?
5.4.934b	934b Phania ille frater meus fuit. 934c Noram et scio. 935 Is hinc bellum fugiens, meque in Asiam persequens, proficiscitur. 936 Tum illam relinquere hic est veritus; postilla nunc primum audio 937 Quid illo sit factum. 937b Vix sum apud me, ita animus commotus est metu, 938 Spe, gaudio, mirando hoc tanto tam repentino bono. 939 Nae istam multimodis tuam inveniri gaudeo. 939b Credo pater. 940 At mihi unus scrupulus etiam restat qui me male habet. 940b Dignus es 941 Cum tua religione odium: nodum in scirpo quaeris. 941b Quid istuc est? 942 Nomen non convenit. 942b Fuit hercle huic aliud parvae. 942c Quid Crito? 943 Numquid meministi? 943b Id quaero.	943b I'm trying to recollect it. 943c Am I to suffer his memory to stand in the way of my happiness, when I myself can provide my own remedy in this matter? I will not suffer it. (Aloud.) Hark you, Chremes, that which you are trying to recollect is Pasibula. 945b The very same. 945c That's it. 946 I've heard it from herself a thousand times. 946b I suppose, Chremes, that you believe that we all rejoice at this discovery. 947b So may the Gods bless me, I do believe it. 847c What remains to be done, father? 948 The event itself has quite brought me to reconcilement. 948b O kind father! With regard to her as a wife, since I have taken possession of her, Chremes will not offer any opposition. 949b The plea is a very good one, unless perchance your father says any thing to the contrary. 950b Of course, I agree. 950c Then be it so. 950d Her portion, Pamphilus, is ten talents. 951b I alm

	943c Egone huius memoriam patiar meae 944 Voluptati obstare, cum egomet possim in hac re medicari mihi? 945 Non patiar. Heus Chreme quod quaeris, Pasibula est. 945b Ipsa est. 945c Ea est. 946 Ex ipsa millies audivi. 946b Omnes nos gaudere hoc Chreme 947 Te credo credere. 947b Ita me Di ament, credo. 947c Quid restat, pater? 948 Iam dudum res reduxit me ipsa in gratiam. 948b O lepidum patrem!	satisfied. 951c I'll hasten to my daughter. Come now, (beckoning.) along with me, Crito; for I suppose that she will not know me. 952b Why don't you order her to be sent for hither, to our house? 953 Well thought of; I'll at once give charge of that to Davus. 953b He can't do it. 954 How so? 954b Because he has another matter that more nearly concerns himself, and of more importance. 954c What, pray? 954d He is bound. 955 Father, he is not rightly bound. 955b But I ordered to that effect. 955c Prithee, do order him to be set at liberty, 956 Well, be it so. 956b But immediately. 956c I'm going in. 956d O fortunate and happy day!
5.4.949	949 De uxore, ita ut possedi, nihil mutat Chremes. 949b Causa optima est, 950 Nisi quid pater ait aliud. 950b Nempe. 950c Id scilicet. 950d Dos Pamphile est 951 Decem talenta. 951b Accipio. 951c Propero ad filiam. Eho mecum Crito: 952 Nam illam me credo haud nosse. 952b Cur non illam huc transferri iubes? 953 Recte admones. Davo ego istuc dedam iam negoti. 953b Non potest. 954 Qui non potest? 954b Quia habet aliud magis ex sese et maius. 954c Quidnam? 954d Vinctus est. 955 Pater non recte vinctus est. 955b Haud ita iussi. 955c Iube solvi obsecro. 956 Age fiat. 956b At matura. 956c Eo intro. 956d O faustum et felicem hunc diem!
5.5	957 Proviso quid agat Pamphilus; atque eccum. 957b Aliquis forsan me putet 958 Non putare hoc verum: at mihi nunc sic esse hoc verum libet. 959 Ego Deorum vitam propterea sempiternam esse arbitror 960 Quod voluptates eorum propriae	957 I'm come to see what Pamphilus is about; and look, here he is. 957b Some one perhaps might imagine that I don't believe this to be true; but now it is clear to me that it really is true. I do think that the life of the Gods is everlasting, 960 for this reason, because their joys are their sunt; nam mihi immortalitas 961 Parta est, si nulla aegritudo huic gaudio intercesserit. 962 Sed quem ego mihi potissimum optem nunc cui haec narrem dari? 963 Quid illud gaudi est? 963b Davum video: nemo est quem mallem omnium; 964 Nam hunc scio mea solide solum gavisurum gaudia.	own. For immortality has been obtained by me, if no sorrow interrupts this delight. But whom in particular could I wish to be now thrown in my way, for me to relate these things to? 963 What means this rapture? 963b I see Davus. There is no one in the world whom I would choose in preference; for I am sure that he of all people will sincerely rejoice in my happiness.

5.6	965 Pamphilus ubinam hic est? 965b Dave. 965c Quis homo est? 965d Ego sum. 965e O Pamphile. 966 Nescis quid mihi obtigerit. 966b Certe; sed quid mihi obtigerit scio. 967 Et quidem ego. 967b More hominum evenit ut quod sim nactus mali 968 Prius rescisceres tu quam ego illud quod tibi evenit boni. 969 Mea Glycerium suos parentes repperit. 969b O factum bene! 969c Hem! 970 Pater amicus summus nobis. 970b Quis? 970c Chremes. 970d Narras probe. 971 Nec mora ulla est quin eam uxorem ducam. 971b Num ille somniat 972 Ea quae vigilans voluit? 972b Tum de puero Dave? 972c Ah desine. 973 Solus est quem diligunt Di. 973b Salvus sum si haec vera sunt. 974 Colloquar. 974b Quis homo est? O Charine in tempore ipso mihi advenis. 975 Bene factum. 975b Audistine? 975c Omnia: age me in tuis secundis respice. 976 Tuus est nunc Chremes: facturum quae voles scio esse omnia. 977 Memini: atque adeo longum est nos illum expectare dum exeat. 978 Sequere hac me intus ad Glycerium nunc. Tu Dave abi domum: 979 Propere arcesse hinc qui auferant eam. Quid stas? quid cessas? 979b Eo. 980 Ne expectetis dum exeant huc: intus despondebitur;	965 Where is Pamphilus, I wonder? 965b Here he is, Davus. 965c Who's that? 965d 'Tis I, 965e Pamphilus; 966 you don't know what has happened to me. 966b No really; but I know what has happened to myself. 967 And I too. 967b It has fallen out just like human affairs in general, that you should know the mishap I have met with, before I the good that has befallen you. 969 My Glycerium has discovered her parents. 969b O, well done! 969c Hah! 970 Her father is an intimate friend of ours. 970b Who? 970c Chremes. 970d You do tell good news. 971 And there's no hinderance to my marrying her at once. 971b Is he dreaming the same that he has been wishing for when awake? 972b Then about the child, Davus. 972c O, say no more; you are the only person whom the Gods favor. 973b I'm all right if these things are true. I'll accost them. 974b Who is this? Why, Charinus, you meet me at the very nick of time. 975 That's all right. 975b Have you heard —? 975c Every thing; come, in your good fortune do have some regard for me. Chremes is now at your command; I'm sure that he'll do every thing you wish. 977 I'll remember you; and because it is tedious for us to wait for him until he comes out, follow me this way; he is now in-doors at the house of Glycerium; do you, Davus, go home; send with all haste to remove her thence. Why are you standing there? Why are you delaying? 979b I'm going. (PAMPHILUS and CHARINUS go into the house of GLYCERIUM. DAVUS then comes forward and addresses the Audience.) Don't you wait until they come out from there; she will be betrothed within: if there is any thing else that remains, it will

	981 Intus transigetur si quid est quod restet. 981b Plaudite.	be transacted in-doors. 981b Grant us your applause.