Virgilio · Bucólicas

Texto en latín y traducción inglesa alineados por pasaje; cada sección de la traducción figura una sola vez, junto al primer pasaje que abarca.

Fuente: Perseus Digital Library (Tufts University), urn:cts:latinLit:phi0690.phi001. Texto crítico y traducción tomados sin cambios de los archivos TEI del repositorio.

Licencia CC BY-SA 4.0 (se comparte con la misma licencia). Edición de lectura generada por Vitruvius Digital Library (Diego Kurilo), 2026. Lectura en línea: https://diegoalonsok-png.github.io/vitruvius-digital-library/lector-clasico.html?obra=phi0690.phi001

Locus	Latín	Traducción inglesa
1.1	1 Tityre, tu patulae recubans sub tegmine fagi 2 silvestrem tenui Musam meditaris avena; 3 nos patriae fines et dulcia linquimus arva: 4 nos patriam fugimus; tu, Tityre, lentus in umbra 5 formosam resonare doces Amaryllida silvas. 6 O Meliboee, deus nobis haec otia fecit: 7 namque erit ille mihi semper deus; illius aram 8 saepe tener nostris ab ovilibus imbuet agnus. 9 Ille meas errare boves, ut cernis, et ipsum 10 ludere, quae vellem, calamo permisit agresti 11 Non equidem invideo; miror magis: undique totis 12 usque adeo turbatur agris. En, ipse capellas 13 protinus aeger ago; hanc etiam vix, Tityre, duco: 14 hic inter densas corylos modo namque gemellos, 15 spem gregis, ah, silice in nuda conixa reliquit. 16 Saepe malum hoc nobis, si mens non laeva fuisset, 17 de caelo tactas memini praedicere quercus:— 18 19 Sed tamen, iste deus qui sit, da, Tityre, nobis. 20 Urbem, quam dicunt Romam, Meliboee, putavi 21 stultus ego huic nostrae similem, quo saepe solemus 22 pastores ovium teneros depellere fetus: 23 sic canibus catulos similis, sic matribus haedos	1 You, Tityrus, 'neath a broad beech-canopy 2 reclining, on the slender oat rehearse 3 your silvan ditties: I from my sweet fields, 4 and home's familiar bounds, even now depart. 5 Exiled from home am I; while, Tityrus, you 6 sit careless in the shade, and, at your call, 7 “Fair Amaryllis” bid the woods resound. 8 O Meliboeus, 'twas a god vouchsafed 9 this ease to us, for him a god will I 10 deem ever, and from my folds a tender lamb 11 oft with its life-blood shall his altar stain. 12 His gift it is that, as your eyes may see, 13 my kine may roam at large, and I myself 14 play on my shepherd's pipe what songs I will. 15 I grudge you not the boon, but marvel more, 16 such wide confusion fills the country-side. 17 See, sick at heart I drive my she-goats on, 18 and this one, O my Tityrus, scarce can lead: 19 for 'mid the hazel-thicket here but now 20 she dropped her new-yeaned twins on the bare flint, 21 hope of the flock—an ill, I mind me well, 22 which many a time, but for my blinded sense, 23 the thunder-stricken oak foretold, oft too 24 from hollow trunk the raven's ominous cry. 25 But who this god of yours? Come, Tityrus, tell. 26 The city, Meliboeus, they call Rome, 27 I, simpleton, deemed like this town of ours, 28 whereto we shepherds oft are wont to drive 29 the younglings of the flock: so too I knew 30 whelps to resemble dogs, and kids their dams,

	24 noram, sic parvis componere magna solebam: 25 verum haec tantum alias inter caput extulit urbes, 26 quantum lenta solent inter viburna cupressi. 27 Et quae tanta fuit Romam tibi causa videndi? 28 Libertas; quae sera, tamen respexit inertem, 29 candidior postquam tondenti barba cadebat; 30 respexit tamen, et longo post tempore venit,
1.31	31 postquam nos Amaryllis habet, Galatea reliquit: 32 namque, fatebor enim, dum me Galatea tenebat, 33 nec spes libertatis erat, nec cura peculi: 34 quamvis multa meis exiret victima saeptis, 35 pinguis et ingratae premeretur caseus urbi, 36 non umquam gravis aere domum mihi dextra redibat. 37 Mirabar, quid maesta deos, Amarylli, vocares, 38 cui pendere sua patereris in arbore poma: 39 Tityrus hinc aberat. Ipsae te, Tityre, pinus, 40 ipsi te fontes, ipsa haec arbusta vocabant. 41 Quid facerem? Neque servitio me exire licebat, 42 nec tam praesentis alibi cognoscere divos. 43 hic illum vidi iuvenem, Meliboee, quot annis 44 bis senos cui nostra dies altaria fumant; 45 hic mihi responsum primus dedit ille petenti: 46 “pascite, ut ante, boves, pueri, submittite tauros.” 47 Fortunate senex, ergo tua rura manebunt, 48 et tibi magna satis, quamvis lapis omnia nudus 49 limosoque palus obducat pascua iunco! 50 Non insueta gravis temptabunt pabula fetas, 51 nec mala vicini pecoris contagia laedent. 52 Fortunate senex, hic, inter flumina nota	31 comparing small with great; but this as far 32 above all other cities rears her head 33 as cypress above pliant osier towers. 34 And what so potent cause took you to Rome? 35 Freedom, which, though belated, cast at length 36 her eyes upon the sluggard, when my beard 37 'gan whiter fall beneath the barber's blade— 38 cast eyes, I say, and, though long tarrying, came, 39 now when, from Galatea's yoke released, 40 I serve but Amaryllis: for I will own, 41 while Galatea reigned over me, I had 42 no hope of freedom, and no thought to save. 43 Though many a victim from my folds went forth, 44 or rich cheese pressed for the unthankful town, 45 never with laden hands returned I home. 46 I used to wonder, Amaryllis, why 47 you cried to heaven so sadly, and for whom 48 you left the apples hanging on the trees; 49 'twas Tityrus was away. Why, Tityrus, 50 the very pines, the very water-springs, 51 the very vineyards, cried aloud for you. 52 What could I do? how else from bonds be freed, 53 or otherwhere find gods so nigh to aid? 54 There, Meliboeus, I saw that youth to whom 55 yearly for twice six days my altars smoke. 56 There instant answer gave he to my suit, 57 “Feed, as before, your kine, boys, rear your bulls.” 58 So in old age, you happy man, your fields 59 will still be yours, and ample for your need! 60 Though, with bare stones o'erspread, the pastures all

	53 et fontis sacros, frigus captabis opacum! 54 hinc tibi, quae semper, vicino ab limite, saepes 55 Hyblaeis apibus florem depasta salicti 56 saepe levi somnum suadebit inire susurro; 57 hinc alta sub rupe canet frondator ad auras; 58 nec tamen interea raucae, tua cura, palumbes, 59 nec gemere aëria cessabit turtur ab ulmo. 60 Ante leves ergo pascentur in aequore cervi,
1.61	61 et freta destituent nudos in litore pisces, 62 ante pererratis amborum finibus exsul 63 aut Ararim Parthus bibet, aut Germania Tigrim, 64 quam nostro illius labatur pectore voltus. 65 At nos hinc alii sitientis ibimus Afros, 66 pars Scythiam et rapidum Cretae veniemus Oaxen, 67 et penitus toto divisos orbe Britannos. 68 En umquam patrios longo post tempore finis, 69 pauperis et tuguri congestum caespite culmen, 70 post aliquot mea regna videns mirabor aristas? 71 Impius haec tam culta novalia miles habebit, 72 barbarus has segetes? En, quo discordia civis 73 produxit miseros! His nos consevimus agros! 74 Insere nunc, Meliboee, piros, pone ordine vitis. 75 Ite meae, felix quondam pecus, ite capellae. 76 Non ego vos posthac, viridi proiectus in antro, 77 dumosa pendere procul de rupe videbo; 78 carmina nulla canam; non, me pascente, capellae, 79 florentem cytisum et salices carpetis amaras. 80 Hic tamen hanc mecum poteras requiescere noctem 81 fronde super viridi: sunt nobis mitia poma,	61 be choked with rushy mire, your ewes with young 62 by no strange fodder will be tried, nor hurt 63 through taint contagious of a neighbouring flock. 64 Happy old man, who 'mid familiar streams 65 and hallowed springs, will court the cooling shade! 66 Here, as of old, your neighbour's bordering hedge, 67 that feasts with willow-flower the Hybla bees, 68 shall oft with gentle murmur lull to sleep, 69 while the leaf-dresser beneath some tall rock 70 uplifts his song, nor cease their cooings hoarse 71 the wood-pigeons that are your heart's delight, 72 nor doves their moaning in the elm-tree top. 73 Sooner shall light stags, therefore, feed in air, 74 the seas their fish leave naked on the strand, 75 germans and Parthians shift their natural bounds, 76 and these the Arar, those the Tigris drink, 77 than from my heart his face and memory fade. 78 But we far hence, to burning Libya some, 79 some to the Scythian steppes, or thy swift flood, 80 cretan Oaxes, now must wend our way, 81 or Britain, from the whole world sundered far. 82 Ah! shall I ever in aftertime behold 83 my native bounds—see many a harvest hence 84 with ravished eyes the lowly turf-roofed cot 85 where I was king? These fallows, trimmed so fair, 86 some brutal soldier will possess these fields 87 an alien master. Ah! to what a pass 88 has civil discord brought our hapless folk! 89 For such as these, then, were our furrows sown! 90 Now, Meliboeus, graft your pears, now set

	82 castaneae molles, et pressi copia lactis; 83 et iam summa procul villarum culmina fumant, 84 maioresque cadunt altis de montibus umbrae.
2.1	1 Formosum pastor Corydon ardebat Alexim, 2 delicias domini, nec quid speraret habebat; 3 tantum inter densas, umbrosa cacumina, fagos 4 adsidue veniebat. Ibi haec incondita solus 5 montibus et silvis studio iactabat inani: 6 O crudelis Alexi, nihil mea carmina curas? 7 Nil nostri miserere? Mori me denique coges. 8 nunc etiam pecudes umbras et frigora captant; 9 nunc viridis etiam occultant spineta lacertos, 10 Thestylis et rapido fessis messoribus aestu 11 alia serpyllumque herbas contundit olentis. 12 at mecum raucis, tua dum vestigia lustro, 13 sole sub ardenti resonant arbusta cicadis. 14 Nonne fuit satius tristis Amaryllidis iras 15 atque superba pati fastidia, nonne Menalcan, 16 quam vis ille niger, quamvis tu candidus esses ? 17 o formose puer, nimium ne crede colori! 18 alba ligustra cadunt, vaccinia nigra leguntur. 19 Despectus tibi sum, nec qui sim quaeris, Alexi, 20 quam dives pecoris, nivei quam lactis abundans. 21 mille meae Siculis errant in montibus agnae; 22 lac mihi non aestate novum, non frigore defit; 23 canto quae solitus, si quando armenta vocabat, 24 Amphion Dircaeus in Actaeo Aracimtho. 25 Nec sum adeo informis: nuper me in litore vidi, 26 cum placidum ventis staret mare; non ego Daphnim	1 the shepherd Corydon with love was fired 2 for fair Alexis, his own master's joy: 3 no room for hope had he, yet, none the less, 4 the thick-leaved shadowy-soaring beech-tree grove 5 still would he haunt, and there alone, as thus, 6 to woods and hills pour forth his artless strains. 7 “Cruel Alexis, heed you naught my songs? 8 Have you no pity? you'll drive me to my death. 9 Now even the cattle court the cooling shade 10 and the green lizard hides him in the thorn: 11 now for tired mowers, with the fierce heat spent, 12 pounds Thestilis her mess of savoury herbs, 13 wild thyme and garlic. I, with none beside, 14 save hoarse cicalas shrilling through the brake, 15 still track your footprints 'neath the broiling sun. 16 Better have borne the petulant proud disdain 17 of Amaryllis, or Menalcas wooed, 18 albeit he was so dark, and you so fair! 19 Trust not too much to colour, beauteous boy; 20 white privets fall, dark hyacinths are culled. 21 You scorn me, Alexis, who or what I am 22 care not to ask—how rich in flocks, or how 23 in snow-white milk abounding: yet for me 24 roam on Sicilian hills a thousand lambs; 25 summer or winter, still my milk-pails brim. 26 I sing as erst Amphion of Circe sang, 27 what time he went to call his cattle home 28 on Attic Aracynthus. Nor am I 29 so ill to look on: lately on the beach 30 I saw myself, when winds had stilled the sea, 27 iudice te metuam, si numquam fallit imago. 28 O tantum libeat mecum tibi sordida rura 29 atque humilis habitare casas, et figere cervos, 30 haedorumque gregem viridi compellere hibisco!

2.31	31 Mecum una in silvis imitabere Pana canendo. 32 Pan primus calamos cera coniungere pluris 33 instituit; Pan curat ovis oviumque magistros. 34 Nec te paeniteat calamo trivisse labellum: 35 haec eadem ut sciret, quid non faciebat Amyntas? 36 est mihi disparibus septem compacta cicutis 37 fistula, Damoetas dono mihi quam dedit olim, 38 et dixit moriens: “Te nunc habet ista secundum.” 39 dixit Damoetas, invidit stultus Amyntas. 40 Praeterea duo, nec tuta mihi valle reperti, 41 capreoli, sparsis etiam nunc pellibus albo, 42 bina die siccant ovis ubera; quos tibi servo: 43 iam pridem a me illos abducere Thestylis orat; 44 et faciet, quoniam sordent tibi munera nostra. 45 Huc ades, O formose puer: tibi lilia plenis 46 ecce ferunt Nymphae calathis; tibi candida Nais, 47 pallentis violas et summa papavera carpens, 48 narcissum et florem iungit bene olentis anethi; 49 tum casia atque aliis intexens suavibus herbis, 50 mollia luteola pingit vaccinia calta. 51 Ipse ego cana legam tenera lanugine mala, 52 castaneasque nuces, mea quas Amaryllis amabat; 53 addam cerea pruna: honos erit huic quoque pomo; 54 et vos, O lauri, carpam, et te, proxima myrte, 55 sic positae quoniam suavis miscetis odores. 56 Rusticus es, Corydon: nec munera	31 and, if that mirror lie not, would not fear 32 daphnis to challenge, though yourself were judge. 33 Ah! were you but content with me to dwell. 34 Some lowly cot in the rough fields our home, 35 shoot down the stags, or with green osier-wand 36 round up the straggling flock! There you with me 37 in silvan strains will learn to rival Pan. 38 Pan first with wax taught reed with reed to join; 39 for sheep alike and shepherd Pan hath care. 40 Nor with the reed's edge fear you to make rough 41 your dainty lip; such arts as these to learn 42 what did Amyntas do?—what did he not? 43 A pipe have I, of hemlock-stalks compact 44 in lessening lengths, Damoetas' dying-gift: 45 ‘Mine once,’ quoth he, ‘now yours, as heir to own.’ 46 Foolish Amyntas heard and envied me. 47 Ay, and two fawns, I risked my neck to find 48 in a steep glen, with coats white-dappled still, 49 from a sheep's udders suckled twice a day— 50 these still I keep for you; which Thestilis 51 implores me oft to let her lead away; 52 and she shall have them, since my gifts you spurn. 53 Come hither, beauteous boy; for you the Nymphs 54 bring baskets, see, with lilies brimmed; for you, 55 plucking pale violets and poppy-heads, 56 now the fair Naiad, of narcissus flower 57 and fragrant fennel, doth one posy twine— 58 with cassia then, and other scented herbs, 59 blends them, and sets the tender hyacinth off 60 with yellow marigold. I too will pick curat Alexis, 57 nec, si muneribus certes, concedat Iollas. 58 Heu, heu, quid volui misero mihi! Floribus austrum 59 perditus et liquidis inmisi fontibus apros. 60 Quem fugis, ah, demens? Habitarunt di quoque silvas,

2.61	61 Dardaniusque Paris. Pallas, quas condidit arces, 62 ipsa colat; nobis placeant ante omnia silvae. 63 Torva leaena lupum sequitur; lupus ipse capellam; 64 florentem cytisum sequitur lasciva capella; 65 te Corydon, o Alexi: trahit sua quemque voluptas. 66 Aspice, aratra iugo referunt suspensa iuvenci, 67 et sol crescentis decedens duplicat umbras: 68 me tamen urit amor; quis enim modus adsit amori? 69 Ah, Corydon, Corydon, quae te dementia cepit! 70 Semiputata tibi frondosa vitis in ulmo est; 71 quin tu aliquid saltem potius, quorum indiget usus, 72 viminibus mollique paras detexere iunco? 73 Invenies alium, si te hic fastidit, Alexim.	61 quinces all silvered-o'er with hoary down, 62 chestnuts, which Amaryllis wont to love, 63 and waxen plums withal: this fruit no less 64 shall have its meed of honour; and I will pluck 65 you too, ye laurels, and you, ye myrtles, near, 66 for so your sweets ye mingle. Corydon, 67 you are a boor, nor heeds a whit your gifts 68 alexis; no, nor would Iollas yield, 69 should gifts decide the day. Alack! alack! 70 What misery have I brought upon my head!— 71 loosed on the flowers Siroces to my bane, 72 and the wild boar upon my crystal springs! 73 Whom do you fly, infatuate? gods ere now, 74 and Dardan Paris, have made the woods their home. 75 Let Pallas keep the towers her hand hath built, 76 us before all things let the woods delight. 77 The grim-eyed lioness pursues the wolf, 78 the wolf the she-goat, the she-goat herself 79 in wanton sport the flowering cytisus, 80 and Corydon Alexis, each led on 81 by their own longing. See, the ox comes home 82 with plough up-tilted, and the shadows grow 83 to twice their length with the departing sun, 84 yet me love burns, for who can limit love? 85 Ah! Corydon, Corydon, what hath crazed your wit? 86 Your vine half-pruned hangs on the leafy elm; 87 why haste you not to weave what need requires 88 of pliant rush or osier? Scorned by this, 89 elsewhere some new Alexis you will find.”
3.1	1 Dic mihi, Damoeta, cuium pecus, an Meliboei? 2 Non, verum Aegonis; nuper mihi tradidit Aegon. 3 Infelix o semper, ovis, pecus, ipse Neaeram 4 dum fovet, ac ne me sibi praeferat illa veretur, 5 hic alienus ovis custos bis mulget in hora, 6 et sucus pecori et lac subducitur agnis.	1 Who owns the flock, Damoetas? Meliboeus? 2 Nay, they are Aegon's sheep, of late by him 3 committed to my care. 4 O every way 5 unhappy sheep, unhappy flock! while he 6 still courts Neaera, fearing lest her choice 7 should fall on me, this hireling shepherd here 8 wrings hourly twice their udders, from the flock 9 filching the life-juice, from the lambs their milk. 10 Hold! not so ready with your jeers at men! 11 We know who once, and in what shrine

	7 Parcius ista viris tamen obicienda memento: 8 novimus et qui te, transversa tuentibus hircis, 9 et quo—sed faciles Nymphae risere—sacello. 10 Tum, credo, cum me arbustum videre Miconis 11 atque mala vitis incidere falce novellas. 12 Aut hic ad veteres fagos cum Daphnidis arcum 13 fregisti et calamos quae tu, perverse Menalca, 14 et cum vidisti puero donata, dolebas, 15 et si non aliqua nocuisses, mortuus esses. 16 Quid domini faciant, audent cum talia fures! 17 non ego te vidi Damonis, pessime, caprum 18 excipere insidiis, multum latrante Lycisca? 19 et cum clamarem: “Quo nunc se proripit ille? 20 Tityre, coge pecus,” tu post carecta latebas. 21 An mihi cantando victus non redderet ille 22 quem mea carminibus meruisset fistula caprum? 23 Si nescis, meus ille caper fuit; et mihi Damon 24 ipse fatebatur, sed reddere posse negabat. 25 Cantando tu illum, aut umquam tibi fistula cera 26 iuncta fuit? Non tu in triviis, indocte, solebas 27 stridenti miserum stipula disperdere carmen? 28 Vis ergo inter nos quid possit uterque vicissim 29 experiamur? Ego hanc vitulam—ne forte recuses, 30 bis venit ad mulctram, binos alit ubere fetus—	with you— 12 the he-goats looked aside —the light nymphs laughed— 13 Ay, then, I warrant, when they saw me slash 14 micon's young vines and trees with spiteful hook. 15 Or here by these old beeches, when you broke 16 the bow and arrows of Damon; for you chafed 17 when first you saw them given to the boy, 18 cross-grained Menalcas, ay, and had you not 19 done him some mischief, would have chafed to death. 20 With thieves so daring, what can masters do? 21 Did I not see you, rogue, in ambush lie 22 for Damon's goat, while loud Lycisca barked? 23 And when I cried, “Where is he off to now? 24 Gather your flock together, Tityrus,” 25 you hid behind the sedges. 26 Well, was he 27 whom I had conquered still to keep the goat. 28 Which in the piping-match my pipe had won! 29 You may not know it, but the goat was mine. 30 You out-pipe him? when had you ever pipe
3.31	31 depono: tu dic, mecum quo pignore certes. 32 De grege non ausim quicquam deponere tecum. 33 Est mihi namque domi pater, est iniusta noverca; 34 bisque die numerant ambo pecus, alter et haedos. 35 Verum, id quod multo tute ipse fatebere maius,	31 wax-welded? in the cross-ways used you not 32 on grating straw some miserable tune 33 to mangle? 34 Well, then, shall we try our skill 35 each against each in turn? Lest you be loth, 36 I pledge this heifer; every day she comes 37 twice to the milking-pail, and feeds withal 38 two young ones at her udder: say you now 39 what you will stake upon the match with me. 40

	36 insanire libet quoniam tibi, pocula ponam 37 fagina, caelatum divini opus Alcimedontis; 38 lenta quibus torno facili superaddita vitis 39 diffusos hedera vestit pallente corymbos: 40 in medio duo signa, Conon, et—quis fuit alter, 41 descripsit radio totum qui gentibus orbem, 42 tempora quae messor, quae curvus arator haberet? 43 Necdum illis labra admovi, sed condita servo. 44 Et nobis idem Alcimedon duo pocula fecit, 45 et molli circum est ansas amplexus acantho, 46 Orpheaque in medio posuit silvasque sequentis. 47 Necdum illis labra admovi, sed condita servo: 48 si ad vitulam spectas, nihil est quod pocula laudes. 49 Nunquam hodie effugies; veniam, quocumque vocari 50 audiat haec tantum—vel qui venit ecce Palaemon 51 efficiam posthac ne quemquam voce lacessas. 52 Quin age, si quid habes, in me mora non erit ulla, 53 nec quemquam fugio: tantum, vicine Palaemon, 54 sensibus haec imis, res est non parva, reponas. 55 Dicite, quandoquidem in molli consedimus herba: 56 et nunc omnis ager, nunc omnis parturit arbos, 57 nunc frondent silvae, nunc formosissimus annus. 58 Incipe, Darmoeta; tu deinde sequere Menalca: 59 alternis dicetis; amant alterna Camenae. 60 Ab Iove principium, Musae; Iovis omnia plena:	Naught from the flock I'll venture, for at home 41 I have a father and a step-dame harsh, 42 and twice a day both reckon up the flock, 43 and one withal the kids. But I will stake, 44 seeing you are so mad, what you yourself 45 will own more priceless far—two beechen cups 46 by the divine art of Alcimedon 47 wrought and embossed, whereon a limber vine, 48 wreathed round them by the graver's facile tool, 49 twines over clustering ivy-berries pale. 50 Two figures, one Conon, in the midst he set, 51 and one—how call you him, who with his wand 52 marked out for all men the whole round of heaven, 53 that they who reap, or stoop behind the plough, 54 might know their several seasons? Nor as yet 55 have I set lip to them, but lay them by. 56 For me too wrought the same Alcimedon 57 a pair of cups, and round the handles wreathed 58 pliant acanthus, Orpheus in the midst, 59 the forests following in his wake; nor yet 60 have I set lip to them, but lay them by.
3.61	61 ille colit terras, illi mea carmina curae. 62 Et me Phoebus amat; Phoebo sua semper apud me 63 munera sunt, lauri et suave rubens hyacinthus. 64 Malo me Galatea petit, lasciva puella,	61 Matched with a heifer, who would prate of cups? 62 You shall not balk me now; where'er you bid, 63 I shall be with you; only let us have 64 for auditor —or see, to serve our turn, 65 yonder Palaemon comes! In singing-bouts 66 i'll see you play the challenger no more. 67 Out then with what you have; I shall

	65 et fugit ad salices, et se cupit ante videri. 66 At mihi sese offert ultro, meus ignis, Amyntas, 67 notior ut iam sit canibus non Delia nostris. 68 Parta meae Veneri sunt munera: namque notavi 69 ipse locum, aëriae quo congessere palumbes. 70 Quod potui, puero silvestri ex arbore lecta 71 aurea mala decem misi; cras altera mittam. 72 O quotiens et quae nobis Galatea locuta est! 73 partem aliquam, venti, divom referatis ad auris! 74 Quid prodest, quod me ipse animo non spernis, Amynta. 75 si, dum tu sectaris apros, ego retia servo? 76 Phyllida mitte mihi: meus est natalis, Iolla; 77 cum faciam vitula pro frugibus, ipse venito. 78 Phyllida amo ante alias; nam me discedere flevit, 79 et longum “formose, vale, vale,” inquit, “Iolla.” 80 Triste lupus stabulis, maturis frugibus imbres. 81 arboribus venti, nobis Amaryllidis irae. 82 Dulce satis umor, depulsis arbutus haedis, 83 lenta salix feto pecori, mihi solus Amyntas. 84 Pollio amat nostram, quamvis est rustica, Musam: 85 Pierides vitulam lectori pascite vestro. 86 Pollio et ipse facit nova carmina: pascite taurum, 87 iam cornu petat et pedibus qui spargat arenam. 88 Qui te, Pollio, amat, veniat quo te quoque gaudet: 89 mella fluant illi, ferat et rubus asper amomum. 90 Qui Bavium non odit, amet tua carmina, Maevi,	not shrink, 68 nor budge for any man: only do you, 69 neighbour Palaemon, with your whole heart's skill— 70 for it is no slight matter—play your part. 71 Say on then, since on the greensward we sit, 72 and now is burgeoning both field and tree; 73 now is the forest green, and now the year 74 at fairest. Do you first, Damoetas, sing, 75 then you, Menalcas, in alternate strain: 76 alternate strains are to the Muses dear. 77 “From Jove the Muse began; Jove filleth all, 78 makes the earth fruitful, for my songs hath care.” 79 “Me Phoebus loves; for Phoebus his own gifts, 80 bays and sweet-blushing hyacinths, I keep.” 81 “Gay Galatea throws an apple at me, 82 then hies to the willows, hoping to be seen.” 83 “My dear Amyntas comes unasked to me; 84 not Delia to my dogs is better known.” 85 “Gifts for my love I've found; mine eyes have marked 86 where the wood-pigeons build their airy nests.” 87 “Ten golden apples have I sent my boy, 88 all that I could, to-morrow as many more.” 89 “What words to me, and uttered O how oft, 90 hath Galatea spoke! waft some of them,
3.91	91 atque idem iungat vulpes et mulgeat hircos. 92 Qui legitis flores et humi nascentia fraga, 93 frigidus, O pueri, fugite hinc, latet anguis in herba.	91 ye winds, I pray you, for the gods to hear.” 92 “It profiteth me naught, Amyntas mine, 93 that in your very heart you spurn me not, 94 if, while you hunt the boar, I guard the nets.” 95 “Prithee, Iollas, for my birthday guest

	94 Parcite, oves, nimium procedere; non bene ripae 95 creditur; ipse aries etiam nunc vellera siccat. 96 Tityre, pascentes a flumine reice capellas: 97 ipse ubi tempus erit, omnis in fonte lavabo. 98 Cogite ovis, pueri; si lac praeceperit aestus, 99 ut nuper, frustra pressabimus ubera palmis. 100 Heu, heu, quam pingui macer est mihi taurus in ervo! 101 Idem amor exitium est pecori pecorisque magistro. 102 His certe neque amor causa est; vix ossibus haerent. 103 nescio quis teneros oculus mihi fascinat agnos. 104 Dic, quibus in terris—et eris mihi magnus Apollo— 105 tris pateat caeli spatium non amplius ulnas. 106 Dic, quibus in terris inscripti nomina regum 107 nascantur flores, et Phyllida solus habeto. 108 Non nostrum inter vos tantas componere lites. 109 Et vitula tu dignus, et hic, et quisquis amores 110 aut metuet dulces, aut experietur amaros. 111 Claudite iam rivos, pueri, sat prata biberunt.	96 send me your Phyllis; when for the young crops 97 I slay my heifer, you yourself shall come.” 98 “I am all hers; she wept to see me go, 99 and, lingering on the word, ‘farewell’ she said, 100 ‘My beautiful Iollas, fare you well.’” 101 “Fell as the wolf is to the folded flock, 102 rain to ripe corn, Sirocco to the trees, 103 the wrath of Amaryllis is to me.” 104 “As moisture to the corn, to ewes with young 105 lithe willow, as arbute to the yeanling kids, 106 so sweet Amyntas, and none else, to me.” 107 “My Muse, although she be but country-bred, 108 is loved by Pollio: O Pierian Maids, 109 pray you, a heifer for your reader feed!” 110 “Pollio himself too doth new verses make: 111 feed ye a bull now ripe to butt with horn, 112 and scatter with his hooves the flying sand.” 113 “Who loves thee, Pollio, may he thither come 114 where thee he joys beholding; ay, for him 115 let honey flow, the thorn-bush spices bear.” 116 “Who hates not Bavius, let him also love 117 thy songs, O Maevius, ay, and therewithal 118 yoke foxes to his car, and he-goats milk.” 119 “You, picking flowers and strawberries that grow 120 so near the ground, fly hence, boys, get you gone!
4.1	1 Sicelides Musae, paulo maiora canamus! 2 Non omnis arbusta iuvant humilesque myricae; 3 si canimus silvas, silvae sint consule dignae. 4 Ultima Cumaei venit iam carminis aetas; 5 magnus ab integro saeclorum nascitur ordo: 6 iam redit et Virgo, redeunt Saturnia regna; 7 iam nova progenies caelo demittitur alto. 8 Tu modo nascenti puero, quo ferrea primum 9 desinet ac toto surget gens aurea mundo, 10 casta fave Lucina: tuus iam regnat Apollo. 11 Teque adeo decus hoc aevi te consule inibit,	1 muses of Sicily, essay we now 2 a somewhat loftier task! Not all men love 3 coppice or lowly tamarisk: sing we woods, 4 woods worthy of a Consul let them be. 5 Now the last age by Cumae's Sibyl sung 6 has come and gone, and the majestic roll 7 of circling centuries begins anew: 8 justice returns, returns old Saturn's reign, 9 with a new breed of men sent down from heaven. 10 Only do thou, at the boy's birth in whom 11 the iron shall cease, the golden race arise, 12 befriend him, chaste Lucina; 'tis thine own 13 apollo reigns. And in thy consulate, 14 this glorious age, O Pollio, shall begin, 15 and the months enter on their mighty march. 16 Under thy guidance, whatso tracks remain 17 of our old wickedness, once done away, 18 shall free the earth from never-ceasing fear. 19 He shall receive the

	12 Pollio, et incipient magni procedere menses. 13 te duce, si qua manent sceleris vestigia nostri, 14 inrita perpetua solvent formidine terras. 15 ille deum vitam accipiet, divisque videbit 16 permixtos heroas, et ipse videbitur illis, 17 pacatumque reget patriis virtutibus orbem. 18 At tibi prima, puer, nullo munuscula cultu 19 errantis hederas passim cum baccare tellus 20 mixtaque ridenti colocasia fundet acantho. 21 Ipsae lacte domum referent distenta capellae 22 ubera, nec magnos metuent armenta leones; 23 ipsa tibi blandos fundent cunabula flores, 24 occidet et serpens, et fallax herba veneni 25 occidet, Assyrium volgo nascetur amomum. 26 at simul heroum laudes et facta parentis 27 iam legere et quae sit poteris cognoscere virtus, 28 molli paulatim flavescet campus arista, 29 incultisque rubens pendebit sentibus uva, 30 et durae quercus sudabunt roscida mella	life of gods, and see 20 heroes with gods commingling, and himself 21 be seen of them, and with his father's worth 22 reign o'er a world at peace. For thee, O boy, 23 first shall the earth, untilled, pour freely forth 24 her childish gifts, the gadding ivy-spray 25 with foxglove and Egyptian bean-flower mixed, 26 and laughing-eyed acanthus. Of themselves, 27 untended, will the she-goats then bring home 28 their udders swollen with milk, while flocks afield 29 shall of the monstrous lion have no fear. 30 Thy very cradle shall pour forth for thee
4.31	31 Pauca tamen suberunt priscae vestigia fraudis, 32 quae temptare Thetim ratibus, quae cingere muris 33 oppida, quae iubeant telluri infindere sulcos: 34 alter erit tum Tiphys, et altera quae vehat Argo 35 delectos Heroas; erunt etiam altera bella, 36 atque iterum ad Troiam magnus mittetur Achilles. 37 Hinc, ubi iam firmata virum te fecerit aetas, 38 cedet et ipse mari vector, nec nautica pinus 39 mutabit merces: omnis feret omnia tellus: 40 non rastros patietur humus, non vinea falcem;	31 caressing flowers. The serpent too shall die, 32 die shall the treacherous poison-plant, and far 33 and wide Assyrian spices spring. But soon 34 as thou hast skill to read of heroes' fame, 35 and of thy father's deeds, and inly learn 36 what virtue is, the plain by slow degrees 37 with waving corn-crops shall to golden grow, 38 from the wild briar shall hang the blushing grape, 39 and stubborn oaks sweat honey-dew. Nathless 40 yet shall there lurk within of ancient wrong 41 some traces, bidding tempt the deep with ships, 42 gird towns with walls, with furrows cleave the earth. 43 Therewith a second Tiphys shall there be, 44 her hero-freight a second Argo bear; 45 new wars too shall arise, and once again 46 some great Achilles to some Troy be

	41 robustus quoque iam tauris iuga solvet arator; 42 nec varios discet mentiri lana colores: 43 ipse sed in pratis aries iam suave rubenti 44 murice, iam croceo mutabit vellera luto; 45 sponte sua sandyx pascentis vestiet agnos. 46 Talia saecla, suis dixerunt, currite, fusis 47 concordes stabili fatorum numine Parcae. 48 Adgredere o magnos—aderit iam tempus—honores, 49 cara deum suboles, magnum Iovis incrementum! 50 Aspice convexo nutantem pondere mundum, 51 terrasque tractusque maris caelumque profundum! 52 Aspice, venturo laetentur ut omnia saeclo! 53 O mihi tam longae maneat pars ultima vitae, 54 spiritus et quantum sat erit tua dicere facta! 55 Non me carminibus vincet nec Thracius Orpheus, 56 nec Linus, huic mater quamvis atque huic pater adsit, 57 Orphei Calliopea, Lino formosus Apollo, 58 Pan etiam, Arcadia mecum si iudice certet, 59 Pan etiam Arcadia dicat se iudice victum. 60 Incipe, parve puer, risu cognoscere matrem,	sent. 47 Then, when the mellowing years have made thee man, 48 no more shall mariner sail, nor pine-tree bark 49 ply traffic on the sea, but every land 50 shall all things bear alike: the glebe no more 51 shall feel the harrow's grip, nor vine the hook; 52 the sturdy ploughman shall loose yoke from steer, 53 nor wool with varying colours learn to lie; 54 but in the meadows shall the ram himself, 55 now with soft flush of purple, now with tint 56 of yellow saffron, teach his fleece to shine. 57 While clothed in natural scarlet graze the lambs. 58 “Such still, such ages weave ye, as ye run,” 59 sang to their spindles the consenting Fates 60 by Destiny's unalterable decree.
4.61	61 matri longa decem tulerunt fastidia menses. 62 Incipe, parve puer, cui non risere parentes, 63 nec deus hunc mensa, dea nec dignata cubili est.	61 Assume thy greatness, for the time draws nigh, 62 dear child of gods, great progeny of Jove! 63 See how it totters—the world's orbed might, 64 earth, and wide ocean, and the vault profound, 65 all, see, enraptured of the coming time! 66 Ah! might such length of days to me be given, 67 and breath suffice me to rehearse thy deeds, 68 nor Thracian Orpheus should out-sing me then, 69 nor Linus, though his mother this, and that 70 his sire should aid—Orpheus Calliope, 71 and Linus fair Apollo. Nay, though Pan, 72 with Arcady for judge, my claim contest, 73 with Arcady for judge great Pan himself 74 should own him foiled, and from the field retire. 75 Begin to greet thy mother with a smile, 76 o baby-boy! ten months of weariness 77 for thee she bore: O baby-boy, begin! 78 For him, on whom his parents have not smiled, 79 gods deem not worthy of their board or bed.

5.1	1 Cur non, Mopse, boni quoniam convenimus ambo, 2 tu calamos inflare levis, ego dicere versus, 3 hic corylis mixtas inter consedimus ulmos? 4 Tu maior; tibi me est aequum parere, Menalca, 5 sive sub incertas zephyris motantibus umbras, 6 sive antro potius succedimus: aspice, ut antrum 7 silvestris raris sparsit labrusca racemis. 8 Montibus in nostris solus tibi certat Amyntas. 9 Quid, si idem certet Phoebum superare canendo? 10 Incipe, Mopse, prior, si quos aut Phyllidis ignes, 11 aut Alconis habes laudes, aut iurgia Codri: 12 incipe, pascentis servabit Tityrus haedos. 13 Immo haec, in viridi nuper quae cortice fagi 14 carmina descripsi et modulans alterna notavi, 15 experiar, tu deinde iubeto ut certet Amyntas. 16 Lenta salix quantum pallenti cedit olivae, 17 puniceis humilis quantum saliunca rosetis, 18 iudicio nostro tantum tibi cedit Amyntas. 19 sed tu desine plura, puer; successimus antro. 20 Extinctum nymphae crudeli funere Daphnim 21 flebant; vos coryli testes et flumina nymphis; 22 cum complexa sui corpus miserabile nati, 23 atque deos atque astra vocat crudelia mater. 24 Non ulli pastos illis egere diebus 25 frigida, Daphni, boves ad flumina; nulla neque amnem 26 libavit quadrupes, nec graminis attigit herbam. 27 Daphni, tuum Poenos etiam ingemuisse leones	1 Why, Mopsus, being both together met, 2 you skilled to breathe upon the slender reeds, 3 I to sing ditties, do we not sit down 4 here where the elm-trees and the hazels blend? 5 You are the elder, 'tis for me to bide 6 your choice, Menalcas, whether now we seek 7 yon shade that quivers to the changeful breeze, 8 or the cave's shelter. Look you how the cave 9 is with the wild vine's clusters over-laced! 10 None but Amyntas on these hills of ours 11 can vie with you. 12 What if he also strive 13 to out-sing Phoebus? 14 Do you first begin, 15 good Mopsus, whether minded to sing aught 16 of Phyllis and her loves, or Alcon's praise, 17 or to fling taunts at Codrus. Come, begin, 18 while Tityrus watches o'er the grazing kids. 19 Nay, then, I will essay what late I carved 20 on a green beech-tree's rind, playing by turns, 21 and marking down the notes; then afterward 22 bid you Amyntas match them if he can. 23 As limber willow to pale olive yields, 24 as lowly Celtic nard to rose-buds bright, 25 so, to my mind, Amyntas yields to you. 26 But hold awhile, for to the cave we come. 27 “For Daphnis cruelly slain wept all the Nymphs— 28 ye hazels, bear them witness, and ye streams— 29 when she, his mother, clasping in her arms 30 the hapless body of the son she bare,

	28 interitum montesque feri silvaeque loquuntur. 29 Daphnis et Armenias curru subiungere tigres 30 instituit; Daphnis thiasos inducere Bacchi,
5.31	31 et foliis lentas intexere mollibus hastas. 32 Vitis ut arboribus decori est, ut vitibus uvae, 33 ut gregibus tauri, segetes ut pinguibus arvis, 34 tu decus omne tuis. Postquam te fata tulerunt, 35 ipsa Pales agros atque ipse reliquit Apollo. 36 Grandia saepe quibus mandavimus hordea sulcis, 37 infelix lolium et steriles nascuntur avenae; 38 pro molli viola, pro purpureo narcisso, 39 carduus et spinis surgit paliurus acutis. 40 Spargite humum foliis, inducite fontibus umbras, 41 pastores, mandat fieri sibi talia Daphnis; 42 et tumulum facite, et tumulo superaddite carmen: 43 DAPHNIS EGO IN SILVIS HINC VSQUE AD SIDERA NOTVS 44 FORMONSI PECORIS CVSTOS FORMONSIOR IPSE. 45 Tale tuum carmen nobis, divine poeta, 46 quale sopor fessis in gramine, quale per aestum 47 dulcis aquae saliente sitim restinguere rivo: 48 nec calamis solum aequiparas, sed voce magistrum. 49 50 Nos tamen haec quocumque modo tibi nostra vicissim 51 dicemus, Daphnimque tuum tollemus ad astra; 52 Daphnin ad astra feremus: amavit nos quoque Daphnis. 53 An quicquam nobis tali sit munere maius 54 Et puer ipse fuit cantari dignus, et ista 55 iam pridem Stimichon laudavit carmina nobis. 56 Candidus insuetum miratur limen Olympi, 57 sub pedibusque videt nubes et	31 to gods and stars unpitying, poured her plaint. 32 Then, Daphnis, to the cooling streams were none 33 that drove the pastured oxen, then no beast 34 drank of the river, or would the grass-blade touch. 35 Nay, the wild rocks and woods then voiced the roar 36 of Afric lions mourning for thy death. 37 Daphnis, 'twas thou bad'st yoke to Bacchus' car 38 armenian tigresses, lead on the pomp 39 of revellers, and with tender foliage wreathe 40 the bending spear-wands. As to trees the vine 41 is crown of glory, as to vines the grape, 42 bulls to the herd, to fruitful fields the corn, 43 so the one glory of thine own art thou. 44 When the Fates took thee hence, then Pales' self, 45 and even Apollo, left the country lone. 46 Where the plump barley-grain so oft we sowed, 47 there but wild oats and barren darnel spring; 48 for tender violet and narcissus bright 49 thistle and prickly thorn uprear their heads. 50 Now, O ye shepherds, strew the ground with leaves, 51 and o'er the fountains draw a shady veil— 52 so Daphnis to his memory bids be done— 53 and rear a tomb, and write thereon this verse: 54 ‘I, Daphnis in the woods, from hence in fame 55 am to the stars exalted, guardian once 56 of a fair flock, myself more fair than they.’” 57 So is thy song to me, poet divine, 58 as slumber on the grass to weary limbs, 59 or to slake thirst from some sweet-bubbling rill 60 in summer's heat. Nor on the reeds alone, sidera Daphnis. 58 ergo alacris silvas et cetera rura voluptas 59 Panaque pastoresque tenet, Dryadasque puellas; 60 nec lupus insidias pecori, nec retia cervis

5.61	61 ulla dolum meditantur: amat bonus otia Daphnis. 62 ipsi laetitia voces ad sidera iactant 63 intonsi montes; ipsae iam carmina rupes, 64 ipsa sonant arbusta: “Deus, deus ille, Menalca.” 65 Sis bonus O felixque tuis! En quattuor aras: 66 ecce duas tibi, Daphni, duas altaria Phoebo. 67 pocula bina novo spumantia lacte quotannis, 68 craterasque duo statuam tibi pinguis olivi, 69 et multo in primis hilarans convivia Baccho,— 70 ante focum, si frigus erit, si messis, in umbra,— 71 vina novum fundam calathis Ariusia nectar. 72 cantabunt mihi Damoetas et Lyctius Aegon; 73 saltantis satyros imitabitur Alphesiboeus. 74 Haec tibi semper erunt, et cum solemnia vota 75 reddemus Nymphis, et cum lustrabimus agros. 76 Dum iuga montis aper, fluvios dum piscis amabit, 77 dumque thymo pascentur apes, dum rore cicadae, 78 semper honos nomenque tuum laudesque manebunt; 79 ut Baccho Cererique, tibi sic vota quotannis 80 agricolae facient: damnabis tu quoque votis. 81 Quae tibi, quae tali reddam pro carmine dona? 82 Nam neque me tantum venientis sibilus austri, 83 nec percussa iuvant fluctu tam litora, nec quae 84 saxosas inter decurrunt flumina valles. 85 Hac te nos fragili donabimus ante cicuta: 86 haec nos, “Formosum Corydon ardebat Alexim,”	61 but with thy voice art thou, thrice happy boy, 62 ranked with thy master, second but to him. 63 Yet will I, too, in turn, as best I may, 64 sing thee a song, and to the stars uplift 65 thy Daphnis—Daphnis to the stars extol, 66 for me too Daphnis loved. 67 Than such a boon 68 what dearer could I deem? the boy himself 69 was worthy to be sung, and many a time 70 hath Stimichon to me your singing praised. 71 “In dazzling sheen with unaccustomed eyes 72 daphnis stands rapt before Olympus' gate, 73 and sees beneath his feet the clouds and stars. 74 Wherefore the woods and fields, Pan, shepherd-folk, 75 and Dryad-maidens, thrill with eager joy; 76 nor wolf with treacherous wile assails the flock, 77 nor nets the stag: kind Daphnis loveth peace. 78 The unshorn mountains to the stars up-toss 79 voices of gladness; ay, the very rocks, 80 the very thickets, shout and sing, ‘A god, 81 a god is he, Menalcas’ Be thou kind, 82 propitious to thine own. Lo! altars four, 83 twain to thee, Daphnis, and to Phoebus twain 84 for sacrifice, we build; and I for thee 85 two beakers yearly of fresh milk afoam, 86 and of rich olive-oil two bowls, will set; 87 and of the wine-god's bounty above all, 88 if cold, before the hearth, or in the shade 89 at harvest-time, to glad the festal hour, 90 from flasks of Ariusian grape will pour

	87 haec eadem docuit, “Cuium pecus, an Meliboei?” 88 At tu sume pedum, quod, me cum saepe rogaret, 89 non tulit Antigenes—et erat tum dignus amari— 90 formosum paribus nodis atque aere, Menalca.
6.1	1 Prima Syracosio dignata est ludere versu, 2 nostra nec erubuit silvas habitare Thalia. 3 Cum canerem reges et proelia, Cynthius aurem 4 vellit, et admonuit: “Pastorem, Tityre, pinguis 5 pascere oportet ovis, deductum dicere carmen.” 6 Nunc ego—namque super tibi erunt, qui dicere laudes, 7 Vare, tuas cupiant, et tristia condere bella— 8 agrestem tenui meditabor arundine Musam. 9 Non iniussa cano: si quis tamen haec quoque, si quis 10 captus amore leget, te nostrae, Vare, myricae, 11 te nemus omne canet; nec Phoebo gratior ulla est, 12 quam sibi quae Vari praescripsit pagina nomen. 13 Pergite, Pierides! Chromis et Mnasyllos in antro 14 Silenum pueri somno videre iacentem, 15 inflatum hesterno venas, ut semper, Iaccho: 16 serta procul tantum capiti delapsa iacebant, 17 et gravis attrita pendebat cantharus ansa. 18 Adgressi—nam saepe senex spe carminis ambo 19 luserat—iniciunt ipsis ex vincula sertis: 20 addit se sociam, timidisque supervenit Aegle,— 21 Aegle, Naiadum pulcherrima,—iamque videnti 22 sanguineis frontem moris et tempora pingit. 23 Ille dolum ridens, “Quo vincula nectitis?” inquit; 24 “solvite me, pueri; satis est potuisse videri: 25 carmina, quae voltis, cognoscite; carmina vobis,	1 first my Thalia stooped in sportive mood 2 to Syracusan strains, nor blushed within 3 the woods to house her. When I sought to tell 4 of battles and of kings, the Cynthian god 5 plucked at mine ear and warned me: “Tityrus, 6 beseems a shepherd-wight to feed fat sheep, 7 but sing a slender song.” Now, Varus, I— 8 for lack there will not who would laud thy deeds, 9 and treat of dolorous wars—will rather tune 10 to the slim oaten reed my silvan lay. 11 I sing but as vouchsafed me; yet even this 12 if, if but one with ravished eyes should read, 13 of thee, O Varus, shall our tamarisks 14 and all the woodland ring; nor can there be 15 a page more dear to Phoebus, than the page 16 where, foremost writ, the name of Varus stands. 17 Speed ye, Pierian Maids! Within a cave 18 young Chromis and Mnasyllos chanced to see 19 silenus sleeping, flushed, as was his wont, 20 with wine of yesterday. Not far aloof, 21 slipped from his head, the garlands lay, and there 22 by its worn handle hung a ponderous cup. 23 Approaching—for the old man many a time 24 had balked them both of a long hoped-for song— 25 garlands to fetters turned, they bind him fast. 26 Then Aegle, fairest of the Naiad-band, 27 aegle came up to the half-frightened boys, 28 came, and, as now with open eyes he lay, 29 with juice of blood-red mulberries smeared him o'er, 30 both brow and temples. Laughing at their guile, 26 huic aliud mercedis erit.” Simul incipit ipse. 27 Tum vero in numerum Faunosque ferasque videres 28 ludere, tum rigidas motare cacumina quercus; 29 nec tantum Phoebo gaudet Parnasia rupes, 30 nec tantum Rhodope miratur et Ismarus Orphea.

6.31	31 Namque canebat, uti magnum per inane coacta 32 semina terrarumque animaeque marisque fuissent, 33 et liquidi simul ignis; ut his exordia primis 34 omnia et ipse tener mundi concreverit orbis; 35 tum durare solum et discludere Nerea ponto 36 coeperit, et rerum paulatim sumere formas; 37 iamque novum terrae stupeant lucescere solem, 38 altius atque cadant submotis nubibus imbres; 39 incipiant silvae cum primum surgere, cumque 40 rara per ignaros errent animalia montis. 41 Hinc lapides Pyrrhae iactos, Saturnia regna, 42 Caucasiasque refert volucres, furtumque Promethei: 43 his adiungit, Hylan nautae quo fonte relictum 44 clamassent, ut litus “Hyla, Hyla!” omne sonaret. 45 et fortunatam, si numquam armenta fuissent, 46 Pasiphaen nivei solatur amore iuvenci. 47 ah, virgo infelix, quae te dementia cepit! 48 Proetides inplerunt falsis mugitibus agros: 49 at non tam turpis pecudum tamen ulla secuta est 50 concubitus, quamvis collo timuisset aratrum, 51 et saepe in levi quaesisset cornua fronte. 52 ah, virgo infelix, tu nunc in montibus erras: 53 ille, latus niveum molli fultus hyacintho, 54 ilice sub nigra pallentis ruminat herbas,	31 and crying, “Why tie the fetters? loose me, boys; 32 enough for you to think you had the power; 33 now list the songs you wish for—songs for you, 34 another meed for her”—forthwith began. 35 Then might you see the wild things of the wood, 36 with Fauns in sportive frolic beat the time, 37 and stubborn oaks their branchy summits bow. 38 Not Phoebus doth the rude Parnassian crag 39 so ravish, nor Orpheus so entrance the heights 40 of Rhodope or Ismarus: for he sang 41 how through the mighty void the seeds were driven 42 of earth, air, ocean, and of liquid fire, 43 how all that is from these beginnings grew, 44 and the young world itself took solid shape, 45 then 'gan its crust to harden, and in the deep 46 shut Nereus off, and mould the forms of things 47 little by little; and how the earth amazed 48 beheld the new sun shining, and the showers 49 fall, as the clouds soared higher, what time the woods 50 'gan first to rise, and living things to roam 51 scattered among the hills that knew them not. 52 Then sang he of the stones by Pyrrha cast, 53 of Saturn's reign, and of Prometheus' theft, 54 and the Caucasian birds, and told withal 55 nigh to what fountain by his comrades left 56 the mariners cried on Hylas till the shore 57 then re-echoed “Hylas, Hylas!” soothed 58 pasiphae with the love of her white bull— 59 happy if cattle-kind had never been!— 60 o ill-starred maid, what frenzy caught thy soul

	55 aut aliquam in magno sequitur grege. “Claudite, nymphae, 56 Dictaeae nymphae, nemorum iam claudite saltus, 57 si qua forte ferant oculis sese obvia nostris 58 errabunda bovis vestigia; forsitan illum, 59 aut herba captum viridi, aut armenta secutum, 60 perducant aliquae stabula ad Gortynia vaccae.”
6.61	61 Tum canit Hesperidum miratam mala puellam; 62 tum Phaethontiades musco circumdat amaro 63 corticis, atque solo proceras erigit alnos. 64 Tum canit, errantem Permessi ad flumina Gallum 65 Aonas in montis ut duxerit una sororum, 66 utque viro Phoebi chorus adsurrexerit omnis; 67 ut Linus haec illi, divino carmine pastor, 68 floribus atque apio crinis ornatus amaro, 69 dixerit: “Hos tibi dant calamos, en accipe, Musae, 70 Ascraeo quos ante seni, quibus ille solebat 71 cantando rigidas deducere montibus ornos: 72 his tibi Grynei nemoris dicatur origo, 73 ne quis sit lucus, quo se plus iactet Apollo.” 74 Quid loquar aut Scyllam Nisi, quam fama secuta est 75 candida succinctam latrantibus inguina monstris 76 Dulichias vexasse rates, et gurgite in alto, 77 ah, timidos nautas canibus lacerasse marinis, 78 aut ut mutatos Terei narraverit artus; 79 quas illi Philomela dapes, quae dona pararit, 80 quo cursu deserta petiverit, et quibus ante 81 infelix sua tecta supervolitaverit alis? 82 Omnia, quae Phoebo quondam meditante, beatus 83 audiit Eurotas, iussitque ediscere laurus,	61 the daughters too of Proetus filled the fields 62 with their feigned lowings, yet no one of them 63 of such unhallowed union e'er was fain 64 as with a beast to mate, though many a time 65 on her smooth forehead she had sought for horns, 66 and for her neck had feared the galling plough. 67 O ill-starred maid! thou roamest now the hills, 68 while on soft hyacinths he, his snowy side 69 reposing, under some dark ilex now 70 chews the pale herbage, or some heifer tracks 71 amid the crowding herd. Now close, ye Nymphs, 72 ye Nymphs of Dicte, close the forest-glades, 73 if haply there may chance upon mine eyes 74 the white bull's wandering foot-prints: him belike 75 following the herd, or by green pasture lured, 76 some kine may guide to the Gortynian stalls. 77 Then sings he of the maid so wonder-struck 78 with the apples of the Hesperids, and then 79 with moss-bound, bitter bark rings round the forms 80 of Phaethon's fair sisters, from the ground 81 up-towering into poplars. Next he sings 82 of Gallus wandering by Permessus' stream, 83 and by a sister of the Muses led 84 to the Aonian mountains, and how all 85 the choir of Phoebus rose to greet him; how 86 the shepherd Linus, singer of songs divine, 87 brow-bound with flowers and bitter parsley, spake: 88 “These reeds the Muses give thee, take them thou, 89 erst to the aged bard of Ascra given, 90 wherewith in singing he was wont to draw

	84 ille canit: pulsae referunt ad sidera valles; 85 cogere donec ovis stabulis numerumque referri 86 iussit, et invito processit Vesper Olympo.
7.1	1 Forte sub arguta consederat ilice Daphnis, 2 compulerantque greges Corydon et Thyrsis in unum, 3 Trhyrsis ovis, Corydon distentas lacte capellas, 4 ambo florentes aetatibus, Arcades ambo, 5 et cantare pares, et respondere parati. 6 Huc mihi, dum teneras defendo a frigore myrtos, 7 vir gregis ipse caper deerraverat; atque ego Daphnim 8 aspicio. Ille ubi me contra videt: “Ocius” inquit 9 “huc ades, O Meliboee, caper tibi salvus et haedi; 10 et, si quid cessare potes, requiesce sub umbra. 11 huc ipsi potum venient per prata iuvenci, 12 hic viridis tenera praetexit arundine ripas 13 Mincius, eque sacra resonant examina quercu.” 14 Quid facerem? Neque ego Alcippen, nec Phyllida habebam, 15 depulsos a lacte domi quae clauderet agnos, 16 et certamen erat, Corydon cum Thyrside, magnum. 17 posthabui tamen illorum mea seria ludo: 18 alternis igitur contendere versibus ambo 19 coepere; alternos Musae meminisse volebant. 20 hos Corydon, illos referebat in ordine Thyrsis. 21 Nymphae, noster amor, Libethrides, aut mihi carmen, 22 quale meo Codro, concedite: proxima Phoebi 23 versibus ille facit; aut, si non possumus omnes, 24 hic arguta sacra pendebit fistula pinu. 25 Pastores, hedera crescentem ornate poetam, 26 Arcades, invidia rumpantur ut ilia Codro;	1 daphnis beneath a rustling ilex-tree 2 had sat him down; Thyrsis and Corydon 3 had gathered in the flock, Thyrsis the sheep, 4 and Corydon the she-goats swollen with milk— 5 both in the flower of age, Arcadians both, 6 ready to sing, and in like strain reply. 7 Hither had strayed, while from the frost I fend 8 my tender myrtles, the he-goat himself, 9 lord of the flock; when Daphnis I espy! 10 Soon as he saw me, “Hither haste,” he cried, 11 “O Meliboeus! goat and kids are safe; 12 and, if you have an idle hour to spare, 13 rest here beneath the shade. Hither the steers 14 will through the meadows, of their own free will, 15 untended come to drink. Here Mincius hath 16 with tender rushes rimmed his verdant banks, 17 and from yon sacred oak with busy hum 18 the bees are swarming.” What was I to do? 19 No Phyllis or Alcippe left at home 20 had I, to shelter my new-weaned lambs, 21 and no slight matter was a singing-bout 22 'twixt Corydon and Thyrsis. Howsoe'er, 23 I let my business wait upon their sport. 24 So they began to sing, voice answering voice 25 in strains alternate—for alternate strains 26 the Muses then were minded to recall— 27 first Corydon, then Thyrsis in reply. 28 “Libethrian Nymphs, who are my heart's delight, 29 grant me, as doth my Codrus, so to sing— 30 next to Apollo he—or if to this

	27 aut si ultra placitum laudarit, baccare frontem 28 cingite, ne vati noceat mala lingua futuro. 29 Saetosi caput hoc apri tibi, Delia, parvus 30 et ramosa Micon vivacis cornua cervi.
7.31	31 Si proprium hoc fuerit, levi de marmore tota 32 puniceo stabis suras evincta coturno. 33 Sinum lactis et haec te liba, Priape, quotannis 34 exspectare sat est: custos es pauperis horti. 35 Nunc te marmoreum pro tempore fecimus; at tu, 36 si fetura gregem suppleverit, aureus esto. 37 Nerine Galatea, thymo mihi dulcior Hyblae, 38 candidior cycnis, hedera formosior alba, 39 cum primum pasti repetent praesepia tauri, 40 si qua tui Corydonis habet te cura, venito. 41 Immo ego Sardoniis videar tibi amarior herbis, 42 horridior rusco, proiecta vilior alga, 43 si mihi non haec lux toto iam longior anno est. 44 Ite domum pasti, si quis pudor, ite iuvenci. 45 Muscosi fontes et somno mollior herba, 46 et quae vos rara viridis tegit arbutus umbra, 47 solstitium pecori defendite; iam venit aestas 48 torrida, iam lento turgent in palmite gemmae. 49 Hic focus et taedae pingues, hic plurimus ignis 50 semper, et adsidua postes fuligine nigri; 51 hic tantum Boreae curamus frigora, quantum 52 aut numerum lupus, aut torrentia flumina ripas. 53 Stant et iuniperi, et castaneae hirsutae; 54 strata iacent passim sua quaque sub arbore poma; 55 omnia nunc rident: at si formosus Alexis 56 montibus his abeat, videas et	31 we may not all attain, my tuneful pipe 32 here on this sacred pine shall silent hang.” 33 “Arcadian shepherds, wreathe with ivy-spray 34 your budding poet, so that Codrus burst 35 with envy: if he praise beyond my due, 36 then bind my brow with foxglove, lest his tongue 37 with evil omen blight the coming bard.” 38 “This bristling boar's head, Delian Maid, to thee, 39 with branching antlers of a sprightly stag, 40 young Micon offers: if his luck but hold, 41 full-length in polished marble, ankle-bound 42 with purple buskin, shall thy statue stand.” 43 “A bowl of milk, Priapus, and these cakes, 44 yearly, it is enough for thee to claim; 45 thou art the guardian of a poor man's plot. 46 Wrought for a while in marble, if the flock 47 at lambing time be filled,stand there in gold.” 48 “Daughter of Nereus, Galatea mine, 49 sweeter than Hybla-thyme, more white than swans, 50 fairer than ivy pale, soon as the steers 51 shall from their pasture to the stalls repair, 52 if aught for Corydon thou carest, come.” 53 “Now may I seem more bitter to your taste 54 than herb Sardinian, rougher than the broom, 55 more worthless than strewn sea-weed, if to-day 56 hath not a year out-lasted! Fie for shame! 57 Go home, my cattle, from your grazing go!” 58 “Ye mossy springs, and grass more soft than sleep, 59 and arbute green with thin shade sheltering you, 60 ward off the solstice from my flock, for now flumina sicca. 57 Aret ager; vitio moriens sitit aeris herba; 58 Liber pampineas invidit collibus umbras: 59 Phyllidis adventu nostrae nemus omne virebit, 60 Iuppiter et laeto descendet plurimus imbri.

7.61	61 Populus Alcidae gratissima, vitis Iaccho, 62 formosae myrtus Veneri, sua laurea Phoebo; 63 Phyllis amat corylos: illas dum Phyllis amabit, 64 nec myrtus vincet corylos, nec laurea Phoebi. 65 Fraxinus in silvis pulcherrima, pinus in hortis, 66 populus in fluviis, abies in montibus altis: 67 saepius at si me, Lycida formose, revisas, 68 fraxinus in silvis cedat tibi, pinus in hortis. 69 Haec memini, et victum frustra contendere Thyrsim: 70 ex illo Corydon Corydon est tempore nobis.	61 comes on the burning summer, now the buds 62 upon the limber vine-shoot 'gin to swell.” 63 “Here is a hearth, and resinous logs, here fire 64 unstinted, and doors black with ceaseless smoke. 65 Here heed we Boreas' icy breath as much 66 as the wolf heeds the number of the flock, 67 or furious rivers their restraining banks.” 68 “The junipers and prickly chestnuts stand, 69 and 'neath each tree lie strewn their several fruits, 70 now the whole world is smiling, but if fair 71 alexis from these hill-slopes should away, 72 even the rivers you would ; see run dry.” 73 “The field is parched, the grass-blades thirst to death 74 in the faint air; Liber hath grudged the hills 75 his vine's o'er-shadowing: should my Phyllis come, 76 green will be all the grove, and Jupiter 77 descend in floods of fertilizing rain.” 78 “The poplar doth Alcides hold most dear, 79 the vine Iacchus, Phoebus his own bays, 80 and Venus fair the myrtle: therewithal 81 phyllis doth hazels love, and while she loves, 82 myrtle nor bay the hazel shall out-vie.” 83 “Ash in the forest is most beautiful, 84 pine in the garden, poplar by the stream, 85 fir on the mountain-height; but if more oft 86 thou'ldst come to me, fair Lycidas, to thee 87 both forest-ash, and garden-pine should bow.” 88 These I remember, and how Thyrsis strove 89 for victory in vain. From that time forth 90 is Corydon still Corydon with us.
8.1	1 Pastorem Musam Damonis et Alphesiboei— 2 immemor herbarum quos est mirata iuvenca 3 certantis, quorum stupefactae carmine lynces, 4 et mutata suos requierunt flumina cursus— 5 Illonis Musam dicemus et Alphesiboei. 6 Tu mihi seu magni superas iam saxa Timavi,	1 of Damon and Alphesiboeus now, 2 those shepherd-singers at whose rival strains 3 the heifer wondering forgot to graze, 4 the lynx stood awe-struck, and the flowing streams, 5 unwonted loiterers, stayed their course to hear— 6 how Damon and Alphesiboeus sang 7 their pastoral ditties, will I tell the tale. 8 Thou, whether broad Timavus' rocky banks 9 thou now art passing, or dost skirt the shore 10 of the Illyrian main,— will ever dawn 11 that day when I thy

	7 sive oram Illyrici legis aequoris, en erit umquam 8 ille dies, mihi cum liceat tua dicere facta? 9 en erit ut liceat totum mihi ferre per orbem 10 sola Sophocleo tua carmina digna coturno? 11 A te principium, tibi desinam: accipe iussis 12 carmina coepta tuis, atque hanc sine tempora circum 13 inter victrices hederam tibi serpere laurus. 14 Frigida vix caelo noctis decesserat umbra, 15 cum ros in tenera pecori gratissimus herba; 16 incumbens tereti Damon sic coepit olivae. 17 Nascere, praeque diem veniens age, Lucifer, almum, 18 coniugis indigno Nisae deceptus amore 19 dum queror, et divos, quamquam nil testibus illis 20 profeci, extrema moriens tamen adloquor hora. 21 Incipe Maenalios mecum, mea tibia, versus. 22 Maenalus argutumque nemus pinosque loquentis 23 semper habet; semper pastorum ille audit amores, 24 Panaque, qui primus calamos non passus inertis. 25 Incipe Maenalios mecum, mea tibia, versus. 26 Mopso Nisa datur: quid non speremus amantes? 27 Iungentur iam grypes equis, aevoque sequenti 28 cum canibus timidi venient ad pocula dammae. 29 Mopse, novas incide faces: tibi ducitur uxor; 30 sparge, marite, nuces: tibi deserit Hesperus Oetam.	deeds may celebrate, 12 ever that day when through the whole wide world 13 I may renown thy verse—that verse alone 14 of Sophoclean buskin worthy found? 15 With thee began, to thee shall end, the strain. 16 Take thou these songs that owe their birth to thee, 17 and deign around thy temples to let creep 18 this ivy-chaplet 'twixt the conquering bays. 19 Scarce had night's chilly shade forsook the sky 20 what time to nibbling sheep the dewy grass 21 tastes sweetest, when, on his smooth shepherd-staff 22 of olive leaning, Damon thus began. 23 “Rise, Lucifer, and, heralding the light, 24 bring in the genial day, while I make moan 25 fooled by vain passion for a faithless bride, 26 for Nysa, and with this my dying breath 27 call on the gods, though little it bestead— 28 the gods who heard her vows and heeded not. 29 ‘Begin, my flute, with me Maenalian lays.’ 30 Ever hath Maenalus his murmuring groves
8.31	31 Incipe Maenalios mecum, mea tibia, versus. 32 O digno coniuncta viro, dum despicis omnes, 33 dumque tibi est odio mea fistula, dumque capellae, 34 hirsutumque supercilium promissaque barba, 35 nec curare deum credis mortalia quemquam!	31 and whispering pines, and ever hears the songs 32 of love-lorn shepherds, and of Pan, who first 33 brooked not the tuneful reed should idle lie. 34 ‘Begin, my flute, with me Maenalian lays.’ 35 Nysa to Mopsus given! what may not then 36 we lovers look for? soon shall we see mate 37 griffins with mares, and in the coming age 38 shy deer and hounds together

	36 Incipe Maenalios mecum, mea tibia, versus. 37 Saepibus in nostris parvam te roscida mala— 38 dux ego vester eram—vidi cum matre legentem. 39 Alter ab undecimo tum me iam acceperat annus; 40 iam fragilis poteram ab terra contingere ramos. 41 Ut vidi, ut perii! Ut me malus abstulit error! 42 Incipe Maenalios mecum, mea tibia, versus. 43 Nunc scio, quid sit Amor: duris in cotibus illum 44 aut Tmaros, aut Rhodope, aut extremm Garamantes, 45 nec generis nostri puerum nec sanguinis edunt. 46 Incipe Maenalios mecum, mea tibia, versus. 47 saevus Amor docuit natorum sanguine matrem 48 commaculare manus; crudelis tu quoque, mater: 49 crudelis mater magis, an puer improbus ille? 50 improbus ille puer; crudelis tu quoque, mater. 51 Incipe Maenalios mecum, mea tibia, versus. 52 nunc et ovis ultro fugiat lupus; aurea durae 53 mala ferant quercus; narcisso floreat alnus; 54 pinguia corticibus sudent electra myricae; 55 certent et cycnis ululae; sit Tityrus Orpheus, 56 Orpheus in silvis, inter delphinas Arion. 57 Incipe Maenalios mecum, mea tibia, versus. 58 Omnia vel medium fiant mare: vivite, silvae! 59 praeceps aerii specula de montis in undas 60 deferar; extremum hoc munus morientis habeto.	come to drink. 39 ‘Begin, my flute, with me Maenalian lays.’ 40 Now, Mopsus, cut new torches, for they bring 41 your bride along; now, bridegroom, scatter nuts: 42 forsaking Oeta mounts the evening star! 43 ‘Begin, my flute, with me Maenalian lays.’ 44 O worthy of thy mate, while all men else 45 thou scornest, and with loathing dost behold 46 my shepherd's pipe, my goats, my shaggy brow, 47 and untrimmed beard, nor deem'st that any god 48 for mortal doings hath regard or care. 49 ‘Begin, my flute, with me Maenalian lays.’ 50 Once with your mother, in our orchard-garth, 51 a little maid I saw you—I your guide— 52 plucking the dewy apples. My twelfth year 53 I scarce had entered, and could barely reach 54 the brittle boughs. I looked, and I was lost; 55 a sudden frenzy swept my wits away. 56 ‘Begin, my flute, with me Maenalian lays.’ 57 Now know I what Love is: 'mid savage rocks 58 tmaros or Rhodope brought forth the boy, 59 or Garamantes in earth's utmost bounds— 60 no kin of ours, nor of our blood begot.
8.61	61 desine Maenalios, iam desine, tibia, versus. 62 Haec Damon: vos, quae responderit Alphesiboeus, 63 dicite, Pierides; non omnia possumus omnes. 64 Effer aquam, et molli cinge haec altaria vitta,	61 ‘Begin, my flute, with me Maenalian lays.’ 62 Fierce Love it was once steeled a mother's heart 63 with her own offspring's blood her hands to imbrue: 64 mother, thou too wert cruel; say wert thou 65 more cruel, mother, or more ruthless he? 66 Ruthless the boy, thou, mother, cruel too. 67 ‘Begin, my

	65 verbenasque adole pinguis et mascula tura, 66 coniugis ut magicis sanos avertere sacris 67 experiar sensus nihil hic nisi carmina desunt. 68 Ducite ab urbe domum, mea carmina, ducite Daphnim. 69 Carmina vel caelo possunt deducere Lunam; 70 carminibus Circe socios mutavit Ulixi; 71 frigidus in pratia cantando rumpitur anguis. 72 Ducite ab urbe domum, mea carmina, ducite Daphnim. 73 terna tibi haec primum triplici diversa colore 74 licia circumdo, terque haec altaria circum 75 effigiem duco: numero deus impare gaudet. 76 Ducite ab urbe domum, mea carmina, ducite Daphnim. 77 Necte tribus nodis ternos, Amarylli, colores, 78 necte, Amarylli, modo, et “Veneris” dic “vincula necto.” 79 Ducite ab urbe domum, mea carmina, ducite Daphnim. 80 Limus ut hic durescit et haec ut cera liquescit 81 uno eodemque igni, sic nostro Daphnis amore. 82 Sparge molam, et fragilis incende bitumine laurus. 83 Daphnis me malus urit, ego hanc in Daphnide laurum. 84 Ducite ab urbe domum, mea carmina, ducite Daphnim. 85 Talis amor Daphnim, qualis cum fessa iuvencum 86 per nemora atque altos quaerendo bucula lucos 87 propter aquae rivum viridi procumbit in ulva, 88 perdita, nec serae meminit decedere nocti, 89 talis amor teneat, nec sit mihi cura mederi. 90 Ducite ab urbe domum, mea carmina, ducite Daphnim.	flute, with me Maenalian lays.’ 68 Now let the wolf turn tail and fly the sheep, 69 tough oaks bear golden apples, alder-trees 70 bloom with narcissus-flower, the tamarisk 71 sweat with rich amber, and the screech-owl vie 72 in singing with the swan: let Tityrus 73 be Orpheus, Orpheus in the forest-glade, 74 arion 'mid his dolphins on the deep. 75 ‘Begin, my flute, with me Maenalian lays.’ 76 Yea, be the whole earth to mid-ocean turned! 77 Farewell, ye woodlands I from the tall peak 78 of yon aerial rock will headlong plunge 79 into the billows: this my latest gift, 80 from dying lips bequeathed thee, see thou keep. 81 Cease now, my flute, now cease Maenalian lays.’” 82 thus Damon: but do ye, Pierian Maids— 83 we cannot all do all things—tell me how 84 alphesiboeus to his strain replied. 85 “Bring water, and with soft wool-fillet bind 86 these altars round about, and burn thereon 87 rich vervain and male frankincense, that I 88 may strive with magic spells to turn astray 89 my lover's saner senses, whereunto 90 there lacketh nothing save the power of song.
8.91	91 Has olim exuvias mihi perfidus ille reliquit, 92 pignora cara sui, quae nunc ego limine in ipso, 93 terra, tibi mando; debent haec pignora Daphnim.	91 ‘Draw from the town, my songs, draw Daphnis home.’ 92 Songs can the very moon draw down from heaven 93 circe with singing changed from human form 94 the comrades of Ulysses, and by song 95 is the cold meadow-snake,

	94 Ducite ab urbe domum, mea carmina, ducite Daphnim. 95 Has herbas atque haec Ponto mihi lecta venena 96 ipse dedit Moeris; nascuntur plurima Ponto. 97 His ego saepe lupum fieri et se condere silvis 98 Moerim, saepe animas imis excire sepulcris, 99 atque satas alio vidi traducere messis. 100 Ducite ab urbe domum, mea carmina, ducite Daphnim. 101 Fer cineres, Amarylli, foras, rivoque fluenti 102 transque caput iace, nec respexeris: his ego Daphnim 103 adgrediar, nihil ille deos, nil carmina curat. 104 Ducite ab urbe domum, mea carmina, ducite Daphnim. 105 Aspice, corripuit tremulis altaria flammis 106 sponte sua, dum ferre moror, cinis ipse: bonum sit! 107 Nescio quid certe est, et Hylas in limine latrat. 108 Credimus, an, qui amant, ipsi sibi somnia fingunt? 109 Parcite, ab urbe venit, iam carmina, parcite, Daphnis.	asunder burst. 96 ‘Draw from the town, my songs, draw Daphnis home.’ 97 These triple threads of threefold colour first 98 I twine about thee, and three times withal 99 around these altars do thine image bear: 100 uneven numbers are the god's delight. 101 ‘Draw from the town, my songs, draw Daphnis home.’ 102 Now, Amaryllis, ply in triple knots 103 the threefold colours; ply them fast, and say 104 this is the chain of Venus that I ply. 105 ‘Draw from the town, my songs, draw Daphnis home.’ 106 As by the kindling of the self-same fire 107 harder this clay, this wax the softer grows, 108 so by my love may Daphnis; sprinkle meal, 109 and with bitumen burn the brittle bays. 110 Me Daphnis with his cruelty doth burn, 111 I to melt cruel Daphnis burn this bay. 112 ‘Draw from the town, my songs, draw Daphnis home.’ 113 As when some heifer, seeking for her steer 114 through woodland and deep grove, sinks wearied out 115 on the green sedge beside a stream, love-lorn, 116 nor marks the gathering night that calls her home— 117 as pines that heifer, with such love as hers 118 may Daphnis pine, and I not care to heal. 119 ‘Draw from the town, my songs, draw Daphnis home.’ 120 These relics once, dear pledges of himself,
9.1	1 te, Moeri, pedes? an, quo via ducit, in urbem? 2 O Lycida, vivi pervenimus, advena nostri 3 (quod numquam veriti sumus) ut possessor agelli 4 diceret: “Haec mea sunt; veteres migrate coloni!” 5 nunc victi, tristes, quoniam Fors omnia versat, 6 hos illi—quod nec vertat bene—mittimus haedos. 7 Certe equidem audieram, qua se subducere colles 8 incipiunt, mollique iugum demittere clivo, 9 usque ad aquam et veteres (iam fracta cacumina) fagos 10 omnia carminibus vestrum servasse Menalcan. 11 Audieras, et fama fuit; sed carmina tantum 12 nostra valent, Lycida, tela inter Martia, quantum 13 Chaonias dicunt aquila veniente	1 Say whither, Moeris?—Make you for the town, 2 or on what errand bent? 3 O Lycidas, 4 we have lived to see, what never yet we feared, 5 an interloper own our little farm, 6 and say, “Be off, you former husbandmen! 7 These fields are mine.” Now, cowed and out of heart, 8 since Fortune turns the whole world upside down, 9 we are taking him —ill luck go with the same!— 10 these kids you see. 11 But surely I had heard 12 that where the hills first draw from off the plain, 13 and the high ridge with gentle slope descends, 14 down to the brook-side and the broken crests 15 of yonder veteran beeches, all the land 16 was by the songs of your Menalcas saved. 17 Heard it you had, and so the rumour ran, 18 but 'mid the clash of arms, my Lycidas, 19 our songs avail no more than, as 'tis said, 20 doves of Dodona when an eagle comes. 21 Nay, had I not, from hollow ilex-bole 22 warned by a raven on the left, cut short 23 the rising feud, nor I, your Moeris columbas. 14 quod nisi me quacumque novas incidere lites 15 ante Sinistra cava monuisset ab ilice cornix, 16 nec tuus hic Moeris, nec viveret ipse Menalcas. 17 Heu, cadit in quemquam tantum scelus? Heu, tua nobis 18 paene simul tecum solatia rapta, Menalca? 19 quis caneret nymphas; quis humum florentibus herbis 20 spargeret, aut viridi fontes induceret umbra? 21 vel quae sublegi tacitus tibi carmina nuper, 22 cum te ad delicias ferres, Amaryllida, nostras? 23 Tityre, dum redeo—brevis est via—pasce capellas, 24 et potum pastas age, Tityre, et inter agendum 25 occursare capro, cornu ferit ille, caveto. 26 Immo haec, quae Varo necdum perfecta canebat: 27 “Vare, tuum nomen, superet modo Mantua nobis— 28 Mantua, vae miserae nimium vicina Cremonae— 29 cantantes sublime ferent ad sidera cycni.” 30 Sic tua Cyrneas fugiant examina taxos;	here, 24 no, nor Menalcas, were alive to-day. 25 Alack! could any of so foul a crime 26 be guilty? Ah! how nearly, thyself, 27 reft was the solace that we had in thee, 28 Menalcas! Who then of the Nymphs had sung, 29 or who with flowering herbs bestrewn the ground, 30 and o'er the fountains drawn a leafy veil?—

9.31	31 sic cytiso pastae distendant ubera vaccae! 32 Incipe, si quid habes: et me fecere poetam 33 Pierides; sunt et mihi carmina; me quoque dicunt 34 vatem pastores, sed non ego credulus illis. 35 Nam neque adhuc Vario videor, nec dicere Cinna 36 digna, sed argutos inter strepere anser olores. 37 Id quidem ago et tacitus, Lycida, mecum ipse voluto, 38 si valeam meminisse; neque est ignobile carmen: 39 `huc ades, O Galatea; quis est nam ludus in undis 40 hic ver purpureum; varios hic flumina circum 41 fundit humus flores; hic candida populus antro 42 imminet, et lentae texunt umbracula	31 who sung the stave I filched from you that day 32 to Amaryllis wending, our hearts' joy?— 33 “While I am gone, 'tis but a little way, 34 feed, Tityrus, my goats, and, having fed, 35 drive to the drinking-pool, and, as you drive, 36 beware the he-goat; with his horn he butts.“ 37 Ay, or to Varus that half-finished lay, 38 “Varus, thy name, so still our Mantua live— 39 Mantua to poor Cremona all too near— 40 shall singing swans bear upward to the stars.” 41 So may your swarms Cyrnean yew-trees shun, 42 your kine with cytisus their udders swell, 43 begin, if aught you have. The Muses made 44 me too a singer; I too have sung; the swains 45 call me a poet, but I believe them not: 46 for naught of mine, or worthy Varius yet 47 or Cinna deem I, but account myself 48 a cackling goose among melodious swans. 49 'Twas in my thought to do so, Lycidas; 50 even vites. 43 huc ades: insani feriant sine litora fluctus. 44 Quid, quae te pura solum sub nocte canentem 45 audieram? Numeros memini, si verba tenerem. 46 “Daphni, quid antiquos signorum suspicis ortus? 47 Ecce Dionaei processit Caesaris astrum, 48 astrum, quo segetes gauderent frugibus, et quo 49 duceret apricis in collibus uva colorem. 50 insere, Daphni, piros: carpent tua poma nepotes.” 51 Omnia fert aetas, animum quoque: saepe ego longos 52 cantando puerum memini me condere soles: 53 nunc oblita mihi tot carmina; vox quoque Moerim 54 iam fugit ipsa; lupi Moerim videre priores. 55 Sed tamen ista satis referet tibi saepe Menalcas. 56 Causando nostros in longum ducis amores: 57 et nunc omne tibi stratum silet aequor, et omnes, 58 aspice, ventosi ceciderunt murmuris aurae. 59 hinc adeo media est nobis via; namque sepulcrum 60 incipit adparere Bianoris: hic ubi densas	now was I revolving silently 51 if this I could recall—no paltry song: 52 “Come, Galatea, what pleasure is 't to play 53 amid the waves? Here glows the Spring, here earth 54 beside the streams pours forth a thousand flowers; 55 here the white poplar bends above the cave, 56 and the lithe vine weaves shadowy covert: come, 57 leave the mad waves to beat upon the shore.” 58 What of the strain I heard you singing once 59 on a clear night alone? the notes I still 60 remember, could I but recall the words.

9.61	61 agricolae stringunt frondes, hic, Moeri, canamus; 62 hic haedos depone: tamen veniemus in urbem. 63 aut si, nox pluviam ne colligat ante, veremur, 64 cantantes licet usque (minus via laedit) eamus; 65 cantantes ut eamus, ego hoc te fasce levabo. 66 Desine plura, puer, et quod nunc instat agamus: 67 carmina tum melius, cum venerit ipse, canemus.	61 “Why, Daphnis, upward gazing, do you mark 62 the ancient risings of the Signs? for look 63 where Dionean Caesar's star comes forth 64 in heaven, to gladden all the fields with corn, 65 and to the grape upon the sunny slopes 66 her colour bring! Now, the pears; 67 so shall your children's children pluck their fruit.” 68 Time carries all things, even our wits, away. 69 Oft, as a boy, I sang the sun to rest, 70 but all those songs are from my memory fled, 71 and even his voice is failing Moeris now; 72 the wolves eyed Moeris first: but at your wish 73 Menalcas will repeat them oft enow. 74 Your pleas but linger out my heart's desire: 75 now all the deep is into silence hushed, 76 and all the murmuring breezes sunk to sleep. 77 We are half-way thither, for Bianor's tomb 78 begins to show: here, Moeris, where the hinds 79 are lopping the thick leafage, let us sing. 80 Set down the kids, yet shall we reach the town; 81 or, if we fear the night may gather rain 82 ere we arrive, then singing let us go, 83 our way to lighten; and, that we may thus 84 go singing, I will case you of this load. 85 Cease, boy, and get we to the work in hand: 86 we shall sing better when himself is come.

10.1	1 Extremum hunc, Arethusa, mihi concede laborem: 2 pauca meo Gallo, sed quae legat ipsa Lycoris, 3 carmina sunt dicenda. neget quis carmina Gallo? 4 sic tibi, cum fluctus subterlabere Sicanos, 5 Doris amara suam non intermisceat undam. 6 incipe; sollicitos Galli dicamus amores, 7 dum tenera attondent simae virgulta capellae. 8 non canimus surdis; respondent omnia silvae. 9 Quae nemora, aut qui vos saltus habuere, puellae 10 Naides, indigno cum Gallus amore peribat? 11 nam neque Parnasi vobis iuga, nam neque Pindi 12 ulla moram fecere, neque Aoniae Aganippe. 13 Illum etiam lauri, etiam flevere myricae. 14 Pinifer illum etiam sola sub rupe iacentem 15 Maenalus, et gelidi fleverunt saxa Lycaei. 16 Stant et oves circum;—nostri nec poenitet illas, 17 nec te poeniteat pecoris, divine poeta;— 18 et formosus ovis ad flumina pavit Adonis; 19 venit et upilio; tardi venere subulci; 20 uvidus hiberna venit de glande Menalcas. 21 Omnes “Unde amor iste” rogant “tibi?” Venit Apollo: 22 “Galle, quid insanis?” inquit; “tua cura Lycoris 23 perque nives alium perque horrida castra secuta est.” 24 Venit et agresti capitis Silvanus honore, 25 florentis ferulas et grandia lilia	1 This now, the very latest of my toils, 2 vouchsafe me, Arethusa! needs must I 3 sing a brief song to Gallus—brief, but yet 4 such as Lycoris' self may fitly read. 5 Who would not sing for Gallus? So, when thou 6 beneath Sicanian billows glidest on, 7 may Doris blend no bitter wave with thine, 8 begin! The love of Gallus be our theme, 9 and the shrewd pangs he suffered, while, hard by, 10 the flat-nosed she-goats browse the tender brush. 11 We sing not to deaf ears; no word of ours 12 but the woods echo it. What groves or lawns 13 held you, ye Dryad-maidens, when for love— 14 love all unworthy of a loss so dear— 15 Gallus lay dying? for neither did the slopes 16 of Pindus or Parnassus stay you then, 17 no, nor Aonian Aganippe. Him 18 even the laurels and the tamarisks wept; 19 for him, outstretched beneath a lonely rock, 20 wept pine-clad Maenalus, and the flinty crags 21 of cold Lycaeus. The sheep too stood around— 22 of us they feel no shame, poet divine; 23 nor of the flock be thou ashamed: even fair 24 Adonis by the rivers fed his sheep— 25 came shepherd too, and swine-herd footing slow, 26 and, from the winter-acorns dripping-wet 27 Menalcas. All with one accord exclaim: 28 “From whence this love of thine?” Apollo came; 29 “Gallus, art mad?” he cried, “thy bosom's care 30 another love is following.” Therewithal quassans. 26 Pan deus Arcadiae venit, quem vidimus ipsi 27 sanguineis ebuli bacis minioque rubentem. 28 “Ecquis erit modus?” inquit; “Amor non talia curat; 29 nec lacrimis crudelis Amor, nec gramina rivis, 30 nec cytiso saturantur apes, nec fronde capellae.”

10.31	31 Tristis at ille: “Tamen cantabitis, Arcades,” inquit 32 “montibus haec vestris: soli cantare periti 33 Arcades. O mihi tum quam molliter ossa quiescant, 34 vestra meos olim si fistula dicat amores! 35 Atque utinam ex vobis unus, vestrique fuissem 36 aut custos gregis, aut maturae vinitor uvae! 37 Certe, sive mihi Phillis, sive esset Amyntas, 38 seu quicumque furor—quid tum, si fuscus Amyntas; 39 et nigrae violae sunt et vaccinia nigra— 40 mecum inter salices lenta sub vite iaceret; 41 serta mihi Phyllis legeret, cantaret Amyntas. 42 Hic gelidi fontes, hic mollia prata, Lycori, 43 hic nemus; hic ipso tecum consumerer aevo. 44 Nunc insanus amor duri me Martis in armis 45 tela inter media atque adversos detinet hostes: 46 tu procul a patria (nec sit mihi credere tantum!) 47 Alpinas, ah dura, nives et frigora Rheni 48 me sine sola vides: ah, te ne frigora laedant! 49 ah, tibi ne teneras glacies secet aspera plantas! 50 Ibo, et, Chalcidico quae sunt mihi condita versu 51 carmina, pastoris Siculi modulabor avena. 52 certum est in silvis, inter spelaea ferarum 53 malle pati, tenerisque meos incidere amores 54 arboribus; crescent illae, crescetis,	31 Silvanus came, with rural honours crowned; 32 the flowering fennels and tall lilies shook 33 before him. Yea, and our own eyes beheld 34 pan, god of Arcady, with blood-red juice 35 of the elder-berry, and with vermilion, dyed. 36 “Wilt ever make an end?” quoth he, “behold 37 love recks not aught of it: his heart no more 38 with tears is sated than with streams the grass, 39 bees with the cytisus, or goats with leaves.” 40 “Yet will ye sing, Arcadians, of my woes 41 upon your mountains,” sadly he replied— 42 “Arcadians, that alone have skill to sing. 43 O then how softly would my ashes rest, 44 if of my love, one day, your flutes should tell! 45 And would that I, of your own fellowship, 46 or dresser of the ripening grape had been, 47 or guardian of the flock! for surely then, 48 let Phyllis, or Amyntas, or who else, 49 bewitch me—what if swart Amyntas be? 50 Dark is the violet, dark the hyacinth— 51 among the willows, 'neath the limber vine, 52 reclining would my love have lain with me, 53 Phyllis plucked garlands, or Amyntas sung. 54 Here are cool springs, soft mead and grove, Lycoris; 55 here might our lives with time have worn away. 56 But me mad love of the stern war-god holds 57 armed amid weapons and opposing foes. 58 Whilst thou—Ah! might I but believe it not!— 59 alone without me, and from home afar, 60 look'st upon Alpine snows and frozen Rhine.

	amores. 55 Interea mixtis lustrabo Maenala nymphis, 56 aut acris venabor apros: non me ulla vetabunt 57 frigora Parthenios canibus circumdare saltus. 58 iam mihi per rupes videor lucosque sonantis 59 ire; libet Partho torquere Cydonia cornu 60 spicula:—tamquam haec sit nostri medicina furoris, 10.61	61 ut deus ille malis hominum mitescere discat! 62 Iam neque hamadryades rursus nec carmina nobis 63 ipsa placent; ipsae rursus concedite silvae. 64 non illum nostri possunt mutare labores, 65 nec si frigoribus mediis Hebrumque bibamus, 66 Sithoniasque nives hiemis subeamus aquosae, 67 nec si, cum moriens alta liber aret in ulmo, 68 Aethiopum versemus ovis sub sidere Cancri. 69 omnia vincit Amor; et nos cedamus Amori.” 70 Haec sat erit, divae, vestrum cecinisse poetam, 71 dum sedet et gracili fiscellam texit hibisco, 72 Pierides; vos haec facietis maxima Gallo— 73 Gallo, cuius amor tantum mihi crescit in horas, 74 quantum vere novo viridis se subicit alnus. 75 Surgamus; solet esse gravis cantantibus umbra; 76 iuniperi gravis umbra; nocent et frugibus umbrae. 77 Ite domum saturae, venit Hesperus, ite capellae.	61 Ah! may the frost not hurt thee, may the sharp 62 and jagged ice not wound thy tender feet! 63 I will depart, re-tune the songs I framed 64 in verse Chalcidian to the oaten reed 65 of the Sicilian swain. Resolved am I 66 in the woods, rather, with wild beasts to couch, 67 and bear my doom, and character my love 68 upon the tender tree-trunks: they will grow, 69 and you, my love, grow with them. And meanwhile 70 I with the Nymphs will haunt Mount Maenalus, 71 or hunt the keen wild boar. No frost so cold 72 but I will hem with hounds thy forest-glades, 73 parthenius. Even now, methinks, I range 74 o'er rocks, through echoing groves, and joy to launch 75 Cydonian arrows from a Parthian bow.— 76 as if my madness could find healing thus, 77 or that god soften at a mortal's grief! 78 Now neither Hamadryads, no, nor songs 79 delight me more: ye woods, away with you! 80 No pangs of ours can change him; not though we 81 in the mid-frost should drink of Hebrus' stream, 82 and in wet winters face Sithonian snows, 83 or, when the bark of the tall elm-tree bole 84 of drought is dying, should, under Cancer's Sign, 85 in Aethiopian deserts drive our flocks. 86 Love conquers all things; yield we too to love!” 87 These songs, Pierian Maids, shall it suffice 88 your poet to have sung, the while he sat, 89 and of slim mallow wove a basket fine: 90 to Gallus ye will magnify their worth,