Virgilio · Geórgicas

Texto en latín y traducción inglesa alineados por pasaje; cada sección de la traducción figura una sola vez, junto al primer pasaje que abarca.

Fuente: Perseus Digital Library (Tufts University), urn:cts:latinLit:phi0690.phi002. Texto crítico y traducción tomados sin cambios de los archivos TEI del repositorio.

Licencia CC BY-SA 4.0 (se comparte con la misma licencia). Edición de lectura generada por Vitruvius Digital Library (Diego Kurilo), 2026. Lectura en línea: https://diegoalonsok-png.github.io/vitruvius-digital-library/lector-clasico.html?obra=phi0690.phi002

Locus	Latín	Traducción inglesa
1.1	1 Quid faciat laetas segetes, quo sidere terram 2 vertere, Maecenas, ulmisque adiungere vitis 3 conveniat, quae cura boum, qui cultus habendo 4 sit pecori, apibus quanta experientia parcis, 5 hinc canere incipiam. Vos, o clarissima mundi 6 lumina, labentem caelo quae ducitis annum, 7 Liber et alma Ceres, vestro si munere tellus 8 Chaoniam pingui glandem mutavit arista, 9 poculaque inventis Acheloia miscuit uvis; 10 et vos, agrestum praesentia numina, Fauni, 11 ferte simul Faunique pedem Dryadesque puellae: 12 Munera vestra cano. Tuque o, cui prima frementem 13 fudit equum magno tellus percussa tridenti, 14 Neptune; et cultor nemorum, cui pinguia Ceae 15 ter centum nivei tondent dumeta iuvenci; 16 ipse nemus linquens patrium saltusque Lycaei, 17 Pan, ovium custos, tua si tibi Maenala curae, 18 adsis, o Tegeaee, favens, oleaeque Minerva 19 inventrix, uncique puer monstrator aratri, 20 et teneram ab radice ferens, Silvane, cupressum, 21 dique deaeque omnes, studium quibus arva tueri, 22 quique novas alitis non ullo semine fruges, 23 quique satis largum caelo demittitis	1 What makes the cornfield smile; beneath what star 2 Maecenas, it is meet to turn the sod 3 Or marry elm with vine; how tend the steer; 4 What pains for cattle-keeping, or what proof 5 Of patient trial serves for thrifty bees;— 6 Such are my themes. O universal lights 7 Most glorious! ye that lead the gliding year 8 Along the sky, Liber and Ceres mild, 9 If by your bounty holpen earth once changed 10 Chaonian acorn for the plump wheat-ear, 11 And mingled with the grape, your new-found gift, 12 The draughts of Achelous; and ye Fauns 13 To rustics ever kind, come foot it, Fauns 14 And Dryad-maids together; your gifts I sing. 15 And thou, for whose delight the war-horse first 16 Sprang from earth's womb at thy great trident's stroke, 17 Neptune; and haunter of the groves, for whom 18 Three hundred snow-white heifers browse the brakes, 19 The fertile brakes of Ceos; and clothed in power, 20 Thy native forest and Lycean lawns, 21 Pan, shepherd-god, forsaking, as the love 22 Of thine own Maenalus constrains thee, hear 23 And help, O lord of Tegea! And thou, too, 24 Minerva, from whose hand the olive sprung; 25 And boy-discoverer of the curved plough; 26 And, bearing a young cypress root-uptorn, 27 Silvanus, and Gods all and Goddesses, 28 Who make the fields your care, both ye who nurse 29 The tender unsown increase, and from heaven 30 Shed on man's sowing the riches of your rain:

	imbrem; 24 tuque adeo, quem mox quae sint habitura deorum 25 concilia, incertum est, urbisne invisere, Caesar, 26 terrarumque velis curam et te maximus orbis 27 auctorem frugum tempestatumque potentem 28 accipiat, cingens materna tempora myrto, 29 an deus inmensi venias maris ac tua nautae 30 numina sola colant, tibi serviat ultima Thule
1.31	31 teque sibi generum Tethys emat omnibus undis, 32 anne novum tardis sidus te mensibus addas, 33 qua locus Erigonen inter Chelasque sequentis 34 panditur—ipse tibi iam bracchia contrahit ardens 35 Scorpius et caeli iusta plus parte reliquit— 36 quidquid eris,—nam te nec sperant Tartara regem 37 nec tibi regnandi veniat tam dira cupido, 38 quamvis Elysios miretur Graecia campos 39 nec repetita sequi curet Proserpina matrem— 40 da facilem cursum atque audacibus adnue coeptis 41 ignarosque viae mecum miseratus agrestis 42 ingredere et votis iam nunc adsuesce vocari. 43 Vere novo, gelidus canis cum montibus humor 44 liquitur et Zephyro putris se glaeba resolvit, 45 depresso incipiat iam tum mihi taurus aratro 46 ingemere et sulco attritus splendescere vomer. 47 Illa seges demum votis respondet avari 48 agricolae, bis quae solem, bis frigora sensit; 49 illius inmensae ruperunt horrea messes. 50 At prius ignotum ferro quam scindimus aequor, 51 ventos et varium caeli praediscere morem 52 cura sit ac patrios cultusque	31 And thou, even thou, of whom we know not yet 32 What mansion of the skies shall hold thee soon, 33 Whether to watch o'er cities be thy will, 34 Great Caesar, and to take the earth in charge, 35 That so the mighty world may welcome thee 36 Lord of her increase, master of her times, 37 Binding thy mother's myrtle round thy brow, 38 Or as the boundless ocean's God thou come, 39 Sole dread of seamen, till far Thule bow 40 Before thee, and Tethys win thee to her son 41 With all her waves for dower; or as a star 42 Lend thy fresh beams our lagging months to cheer, 43 Where 'twixt the Maid and those pursuing Claws 44 A space is opening; see! red Scorpio's self 45 His arms draws in, yea, and hath left thee more 46 Than thy full meed of heaven: be what thou wilt— 47 For neither Tartarus hopes to call thee king, 48 Nor may so dire a lust of sovereignty 49 E'er light upon thee, howso Greece admire 50 Elysium's fields, and Proserpine not heed 51 Her mother's voice entreating to return— 52 Vouchsafe a prosperous voyage, and smile on this 53 My bold endeavour, and pitying, even as I, 54 These poor way-wildered swains, at once begin, 55 Grow timely used unto the voice of prayer. 56 In early spring-tide, when the icy drip 57 Melts from the mountains hoar, and Zephyr's breath 58 Unbinds the crumbling clod, even then 'tis time; 59 Press deep your plough behind the groaning ox, 60 And teach the furrow-burnished share to shine. 61 That land the craving farmer's prayer fulfils, 62 Which twice the sunshine, twice the frost has felt; 63 Ay, that's the land whose boundless harvest-crops 64 Burst, see! the barns.

	habitusque locorum 53 et quid quaeque ferat regio et quid quaeque recuset. 54 Hic segetes, illic veniunt felicius uvae, 55 arborei fetus alibi, atque iniussa virescunt 56 gramina. Nonne vides, croceos ut Tmolus odores, 57 India mittit ebur, molles sua tura Sabaei, 58 at Chalybes nudi ferrum, virosaque Pontus 59 castorea, Eliadum palmas Epiros equarum. 60 Continuo has leges aeternaque foedera certis	But ere our metal cleave 65 An unknown surface, heed we to forelearn 66 The winds and varying temper of the sky, 67 The lineal tilth and habits of the spot, 68 What every region yields, and what denies. 69 Here blithelier springs the corn, and here the grape, 70 There earth is green with tender growth of trees 71 And grass unbidden. See how from Tmolus comes 72 The saffron's fragrance, ivory from Ind, 73 From Saba's weakling sons their frankincense, 74 Iron from the naked Chalybs, castor rank 75 From Pontus, from Epirus the prize-palms 76 O' the mares of Elis. Such the eternal bond 77 And such the laws by Nature's hand imposed 78 On clime and clime, e'er since the primal dawn 79 When old Deucalion on the unpeopled earth 80 Cast stones, whence men, a flinty race, were reared. 81 Up then! if fat the soil, let sturdy bulls 82 Upturn it from the year's first opening months, 83 And let the clods lie bare till baked to dust 84 By the ripe suns of summer; but if the earth 85 Less fruitful just ere Arcturus rise 86 With shallower trench uptilt it —'twill suffice; 87 There, lest weeds choke the crop's luxuriance, here, 88 Lest the scant moisture fail the barren sand.
1.61	61 inposuit natura locis, quo tempore primum 62 Deucalion vacuum lapides iactavit in orbem, 63 unde homines nati, durum genus. Ergo age, terrae 64 pingue solum primis extemplo a mensibus anni 65 fortes invertant tauri glaebasque iacentis 66 pulverulenta coquat maturis solibus aestas; 67 at si non fuerit tellus fecunda, sub ipsum 68 Arcturum tenui sat erit suspendere sulco: 69 illic, officiant laetis ne frugibus herbae, 70 hic, sterilem exiguus ne deserat humor harenam. 71 Alternis idem tonsas cessare novalis 72 et segnem patiere situ durescere campum; 73 aut ibi flava seres mutato sidere farra, 74 unde prius laetum siliqua quassante	89 Then thou shalt suffer in alternate years 90 The new-reaped fields to rest, and on the plain 91 A crust of sloth to harden; or, when stars 92 Are changed in heaven, there sow the golden grain 93 Where erst, luxuriant with its quivering pod, 94 Pulse, or the slender vetch-crop, thou hast cleared, 95 And lupin sour, whose brittle stalks arise, 96 A hurtling forest. For the plain is parched 97 By flax-crop, parched by oats, by poppies parched 98 In Lethe-slumber drenched. Nathless by change 99 The travailing earth is lightened, but stint not 100 With refuse rich to soak the thirsty soil, 101 And shower foul ashes o'er the exhausted fields. 102 Thus by rotation like repose is gained, 103 Nor earth meanwhile uneared and thankless left. 104 Oft, too, 'twill boot to fire the naked fields, 105 And the light stubble burn with crackling flames; 106 Whether that earth therefrom some hidden strength 107 And fattening food derives, or that the fire 108 Bakes every blemish out, and sweats away 109 Each

	legumen 75 aut tenuis fetus viciae tristisque lupini 76 sustuleris fragilis calamos silvamque sonantem. 77 Urit enim lini campum seges, urit avenae, 78 urunt Lethaeo perfusa papavera somno: 79 sed tamen alternis facilis labor, arida tantum 80 ne saturare fimo pingui pudeat sola neve 81 effetos cinerem inmundum iactare per agros. 82 Sic quoque mutatis requiescunt fetibus arva; 83 nec nulla interea est inaratae gratia terrae. 84 Saepe etiam sterilis incendere profuit agros 85 atque levem stipulam crepitantibus urere flammis: 86 sive inde occultas viris et pabula terrae 87 pinguia concipiunt, sive illis omne per ignem 88 excoquitur vitium atque exsudat inutilis humor, 89 seu pluris calor ille vias et caeca relaxat 90 spiramenta, novas veniat qua sucus in herbas,	useless humour, or that the heat unlocks 110 New passages and secret pores, whereby 111 Their life-juice to the tender blades may win; 112 Or that it hardens more and helps to bind 113 The gaping veins, lest penetrating showers, 114 Or fierce sun's ravening might, or searching blast 115 Of the keen north should sear them. Well, I wot, 116 He serves the fields who with his harrow breaks 117 The sluggish clods, and hurdles osier-twined 118 Hales o'er them; from the far Olympian height
1.91	91 seu durat magis et venas adstringit hiantis, 92 ne tenues pluviae rapidive potentia solis 93 acrior aut Boreae penetrabile frigus adurat. 94 Multum adeo, rastris glaebas qui frangit inertis 95 vimineasque trahit cratis, iuvat arva, neque illum 96 flava Ceres alto nequiquam spectat Olympo; 97 et qui, proscisso quae suscitat aequore terga, 98 rursus in obliquum verso perrumpit aratro, 99 exercetque frequens tellurem atque imperat arvis. 100 Humida solstitia atque hiemes orate serenas, 101 agricolae; hiberno laetissima pulvere farra, 102 laetus ager: nullo tantum se Mysia cultu 103 iactat et ipsa suas mirantur	119 Him golden Ceres not in vain regards; 120 And he, who having ploughed the fallow plain 121 And heaved its furrowy ridges, turns once more 122 Cross-wise his shattering share, with stroke on stroke 123 The earth assails, and makes the field his thrall. 124 Pray for wet summers and for winters fine, 125 Ye husbandmen; in winter's dust the crops 126 Exceedingly rejoice, the field hath joy; 127 No tilth makes Mysia lift her head so high, 128 Nor Gargarus his own harvests so admire. 129 Why tell of him, who, having launched his seed, 130 Sets on for close encounter, and rakes smooth 131 The dry dust hillocks, then on the tender corn 132 Lets in the flood, whose waters follow fain; 133 And when the parched field quivers, and all the blades 134 Are dying, from the brow of its hill-bed, 135 See! see! he lures the runnel; down it falls, 136 Waking hoarse murmurs o'er the polished stones, 137 And with its bubblings slakes the thirsty

	Gargara messis. 104 Quid dicam, iacto qui semine comminus arva 105 insequitur cumulosque ruit male pinguis harenae 106 deinde satis fluvium inducit rivosque sequentis 107 et, cum exustus ager morientibus aestuat herbis, 108 ecce supercilio clivosi tramitis undam 109 elicit. illa cadens raucum per levia murmur 110 saxa ciet, scatebrisque arentia temperat arva. 111 Quid qui, ne gravidis procumbat culmus aristis, 112 luxuriem segetum tenera depascit in herba, 113 cum primum sulcos aequant sata. quique paludis 114 collectum humorem bibula deducit harena. 115 Praesertim incertis si mensibus amnis abundans 116 exit et obducto late tenet omnia limo, 117 unde cavae tepido sudant humore lacunae. 118 Nec tamen, haec cum sint hominumque boumque labores 119 versando terram experti, nihil inprobus anser 120 Strymoniaeque grues et amaris intiba fibris	fields? 138 Or why of him, who lest the heavy ears 139 O'erweigh the stalk, while yet in tender blade 140 Feeds down the crop's luxuriance, when its growth 141 First tops the furrows? Why of him who drains 142 The marsh-land's gathered ooze through soaking sand, 143 Chiefly what time in treacherous moons a stream 144 Goes out in spate, and with its coat of slime 145 Holds all the country, whence the hollow dykes 146 Sweat steaming vapour?
1.121	121 officiunt aut umbra nocet. Pater ipse colendi 122 haud facilem esse viam voluit, primusque per artem 123 movit agros curis acuens mortalia corda 124 nec torpere gravi passus sua regna veterno. 125 Ante Iovem nulli subigebant arva coloni; 126 ne signare quidem aut partiri limite campum 127 fas erat: in medium quaerebant ipsaque tellus 128 omnia liberius nullo poscente ferebat. 129 Ille malum virus serpentibus addidit atris 130 praedarique lupos iussit pontumque moveri, 131 mellaque decussit foliis ignemque removit 132 et passim rivis currentia vina	147 But no whit the more 148 For all expedients tried and travail borne 149 By man and beast in turning oft the soil, 150 Do greedy goose and Strymon-haunting cranes 151 And succory's bitter fibres cease to harm, 152 Or shade not injure. The great Sire himself 153 No easy road to husbandry assigned, 154 And first was he by human skill to rouse 155 The slumbering glebe, whetting the minds of men 156 With care on care, nor suffering realm of his 157 In drowsy sloth to stagnate. Before Jove 158 Fields knew no taming hand of husbandmen; 159 To mark the plain or mete with boundary-line— 160 Even this was impious; for the common stock 161 They gathered, and the earth of her own will 162 All things more freely, no man bidding, bore. 163 He to black serpents gave their venom-bane, 164 And bade the wolf go prowl, and ocean toss; 165

	repressit, 133 ut varias usus meditando extunderet artis 134 paulatim et sulcis frumenti quaereret herbam. 135 136 Tunc alnos primum fluvii sensere cavatas; 137 navita tum stellis numeros et nomina fecit, 138 Pleiadas, Hyadas, claramque Lycaonis Arcton; 139 tum laqueis captare feras et fallere visco 140 inventum et magnos canibus circumdare saltus; 141 atque alius latum funda iam verberat amnem 142 alta petens, pelagoque alius trahit humida lina; 143 tum ferri rigor atque argutae lamina serrae,— 144 nam primi cuneis scindebant fissile lignum 145 tum variae venere artes. Labor omnia vicit 146 inprobus et duris urgens in rebus egestas. 147 Prima Ceres ferro mortalis vertere terram 148 instituit, cum iam glandes atque arbuta sacrae 149 deficerent silvae et victum Dodona negaret. 150 Mox et frumentis labor additus, ut mala culmos	Shooed from the leaves their honey, put fire away, 166 And curbed the random rivers running wine, 167 That use by gradual dint of thought on thought 168 Might forge the various arts, with furrow's help 169 The corn-blade win, and strike out hidden fire 170 From the flint's heart. Then first the streams were ware 171 Of hollowed alder-hulls: the sailor then 172 Their names and numbers gave to star and star, 173 Pleiads and Hyads, and Lycaon's child 174 Bright Arctos; how with nooses then was found 175 To catch wild beasts, and cozen them with lime, 176 And hem with hounds the mighty forest-glades.
1.151	151 esset robigo segnisque horreret in arvis 152 carduus; intereunt segetes, subit aspera silva, 153 lappaeque tribolique, interque nitentia culta 154 infelix lolium et steriles dominantur avenae. 155 Quod nisi et adsiduis herbam insectabere rastris, 156 et sonitu terrebis aves, et ruris opaci 157 falce premes umbras votisque vocaveris imbrem, 158 heu magnum alterius frustra spectabis acervum, 159 concussaque famem in silvis solabere quercu. 160 Dicendum et, quae sint duris agrestibus arma, 161 quis sine nec potuere seri nec surgere messes:	177 Soon one with hand-net scourges the broad stream, 178 Probing its depths, one drags his dripping toils 179 Along the main; then iron's unbending might, 180 And shrieking saw-blade,— for the men of old 181 With wedges wont to cleave the splintering log;— 182 Then divers arts arose; toil conquered all, 183 Remorseless toil, and poverty's shrewd push 184 In times of hardship. Ceres was the first 185 Set mortals on with tools to turn the sod, 186 When now the awful groves 'gan fail to bear 187 Acorns and arbutes, and her wonted food 188 Dodona gave no more. Soon, too, the corn 189 Gat sorrow's increase, that an evil blight 190 Ate up the stalks, and thistle reared his spines 191 An idler in the fields; the crops die down; 192 Upsprings instead a shaggy growth of burrs 193 And caltrops; and amid the corn-fields trim 194 Unfruitful

	162 vomis et inflexi primum grave robur aratri 163 tardaque Eleusinae matris volventia plaustra 164 tribulaque traheaeque et iniquo pondere rastri; 165 virgea praeterea Celei vilisque supellex, 166 arbuteae crates et mystica vannus Iacchi. 167 Omnia quae multo ante memor provisa repones, 168 si te digna manet divini gloria ruris. 169 Continuo in silvis magna vi flexa domatur 170 in burim et curvi formam accipit ulmus aratri. 171 Huic a stirpe pedes temo protentus in octo, 172 binae aures, duplici aptantur dentalia dorso 173 caeditur et tilia ante iugo levis altaque fagus, 174 stivaque, quae currus a tergo torqueat imos, 175 et suspensa focis explorat robora fumus. 176 Possum multa tibi veterum praecepta referre, 177 ni refugis tenuisque piget cognoscere curas. 178 Area cum primis ingenti aequanda cylindro 179 et vertenda manu et creta solidanda tenaci, 180 ne subeant herbae neu pulvere victa fatiscat,	darnel and wild oats have sway. 195 Wherefore, unless thou shalt with ceaseless rake 196 The weeds pursue, with shouting scare the birds, 197 Prune with thy hook the dark field's matted shade, 198 Pray down the showers, all vainly thou shalt eye, 199 Alack! thy neighbour's heaped-up harvest-mow, 200 And in the greenwood from a shaken oak 201 Seek solace for thine hunger.
1.181	181 tum variae inludant pestes: saepe exiguus mus 182 sub terris posuitque domos atque horrea fecit, 183 aut oculis capti fodere cubilia talpae, 184 inventusque cavis bufo et quae plurima terrae 185 monstra ferunt, populatque ingentem farris acervum 186 curculio atque inopi metuens formica senectae. 187 Contemplator item, cum se nux plurima silvis 188 induet in florem et ramos curvabit olentis. 189 Si superant fetus, pariter frumenta sequentur 190 magnaque cum magno veniet tritura calore;	202 Now to tell 203 The sturdy rustics' weapons, what they are, 204 Without which, neither can be sown nor reared 205 The fruits of harvest; first the bent plough's share 206 And heavy timber, and slow-lumbering wains 207 Of the Eleusinian mother, threshing-sleighs 208 And drags, and harrows with their crushing weight; 209 Then the cheap wicker-ware of Celeus old, 210 Hurdles of arbute, and thy mystic fan, 211 Iacchus; which, full tale, long ere the time 212 Thou must with heed lay by, if thee await 213 Not all unearned the country's crown divine. 214 While yet within the woods, the elm is tamed 215 And bowed with mighty force to form the stock, 216 And take the plough's curved shape, then nigh the root 217 A pole eight feet projecting, earth-boards

	191 at si luxuria foliorum exuberat umbra, 192 nequiquam pinguis palea teret area culmos. 193 Semina vidi equidem multos medicare serentis 194 et nitro prius et nigra perfundere amurca, 195 grandior ut fetus siliquis fallacibus esset, 196 et, quamvis igni exiguo, properata maderent. 197 Vidi lecta diu et multo spectata labore 198 degenerare tamen, ni vis humana quot annis 199 maxima quaeque manu legeret. Sic omnia fatis 200 in peius ruere ac retro sublapsa referri, 201 non aliter, quam qui adverso vix flumine lembum 202 remigiis subigit, si bracchia forte remisit, 203 atque illum in praeceps prono rapit alveus amni. 204 Praeterea tam sunt Arcturi sidera nobis 205 Haedorumque dies servandi et lucidus Anguis, 206 quam quibus in patriam ventosa per aequora vectis 207 pontus et ostriferi fauces temptantur Abydi. 208 Libra die somnique pares ubi fecerit horas 209 et medium luci atque umbris iam dividit orbem, 210 exercete, viri, tauros, serite hordea campis	twain, 218 And share-beam with its double back they fix. 219 For yoke is early hewn a linden light, 220 And a tall beech for handle, from behind 221 To turn the car at lowest: then o'er the hearth 222 The wood they hang till the smoke knows it well.
1.211	211 usque sub extremum brumae intractabilis imbrem; 212 nec non et lini segetem et Cereale papaver 213 tempus humo tegere et iamdudum incumbere aratris, 214 dum sicca tellure licet, dum nubila pendent. 215 Vere fabis satio; tum te quoque, Medica, putres 216 accipiunt sulci et milio venit annua cura, 217 candidus auratis aperit cum cornibus annum 218 Taurus et averso cedens Canis occidit astro. 219 At si triticeam in messem robustaque farra	223 Many the precepts of the men of old 224 I can recount thee, so thou start not back, 225 And such slight cares to learn not weary thee. 226 And this among the first: thy threshing-floor 227 With ponderous roller must be levelled smooth, 228 And wrought by hand, and fixed with binding chalk, 229 Lest weeds arise, or dust a passage win 230 Splitting the surface, then a thousand plagues 231 Make sport of it: oft builds the tiny mouse 232 Her home, and plants her granary, underground, 233 Or burrow for their bed the purblind moles, 234 Or toad is found in hollows, and all the swarm 235 Of earth's unsightly creatures; or a huge 236 Corn-heap the weevil plunders, and the

	220 exercebis humum solisque instabis aristis, 221 ante tibi Eoae Atlantides abscondantur 222 Gnosiaque ardentis decedat stella Coronae, 223 debita quam sulcis committas semina quamque 224 invitae properes anni spem credere terrae. 225 Multi ante occasum Maiae coepere; sed illos 226 exspectata seges vanis elusit avenis. 227 Si vero viciamque seres vilemque phaselum 228 nec Pelusiacae curam aspernabere lentis, 229 haud obscura cadens mittet tibi signa Bootes: 230 incipe et ad medias sementem extende pruinas. 231 Idcirco certis dimensum partibus orbem 232 per duodena regit mundi Sol aureus astra. 233 Quinque tenent caelum zonae; quarum una corusco 234 semper sole rubens et torrida semper ab igni; 235 quam circum extremae dextra laevaque trahuntur 236 caeruleae, glacie concretae atque imbribus atris; 237 has inter mediamque duae mortalibus aegris 238 munere concessae divom, et via secta per ambas, 239 obliquus qua se signorum verteret ordo. 240 Mundus, ut ad Scythiam Rhipaeasque arduus arces	ant, 237 Fearful of coming age and penury. 238 Mark too, what time the walnut in the woods 239 With ample bloom shall clothe her, and bow down 240 Her odorous branches, if the fruit prevail, 241 Like store of grain will follow, and there shall come 242 A mighty winnowing-time with mighty heat; 243 But if the shade with wealth of leaves abound, 244 Vainly your threshing-floor will bruise the stalks 245 Rich but in chaff. Many myself have seen 246 Steep, as they sow, their pulse-seeds, drenching them 247 With nitre and black oil-lees, that the fruit 248 Might swell within the treacherous pods, and they 249 Make speed to boil at howso small a fire. 250 Yet, culled with caution, proved with patient toil, 251 These have I seen degenerate, did not man 252 Put forth his hand with power, and year by year 253 Choose out the largest. So, by fate impelled, 254 Speed all things to the worse, and backward borne 255 Glide from us; even as who with struggling oars 256 Up stream scarce pulls a shallop, if he chance 257 His arms to slacken, lo! with headlong force 258 The current sweeps him down the hurrying tide.
1.241	241 consurgit, premitur Libyae devexus in austros. 242 Hic vertex nobis semper sublimis; at illum 243 sub pedibus Styx atra videt Manesque profundi. 244 Maximus hic flexu sinuoso elabitur Anguis 245 circum perque duas in morem fluminis Arctos, 246 Arctos Oceani metuentis aequore tingui. 247 Illic, ut perhibent, aut intempesta silet nox, 248 semper et obtenta densentur nocte tenebrae,	259 Us too behoves Arcturus' sign observe, 260 And the Kids' seasons and the shining Snake, 261 No less than those who o'er the windy main 262 Borne homeward tempt the Pontic, and the jaws 263 Of oyster-rife Abydos. When the Scales 264 Now poising fair the hours of sleep and day 265 Give half the world to sunshine, half to shade, 266 Then urge your bulls, my masters; sow the plain 267 Even to the verge of tameless winter's showers 268 With barley: then, too, time it is to hide 269 Your flax in earth, and poppy, Ceres' joy, 270 Aye, more than time to bend above the plough, 271 While earth, yet

	249 aut redit a nobis Aurora diemque reducit; 250 nosque ubi primus equis Oriens adflavit anhelis, 251 illic, sera rubens accendit lumina Vesper. 252 Hinc tempestates dubio praediscere caelo 253 possumus, hinc messisque diem tempusque serendi, 254 et quando infidum remis inpellere marmor 255 conveniat, quando armatas deducere classis, 256 aut tempestivam silvis evertere pinum. 257 Nec frustra signorum obitus speculamur et ortus, 258 temporibusque parem diversis quattuor annum. 259 Frigidus agricolam si quando continet imber, 260 multa, forent quae mox caelo properanda sereno, 261 maturare datur: durum procudit arator 262 vomeris obtunsi dentem, cavat arbore lintres, 263 aut pecori signum aut numeros inpressit acervis. 264 Exacuunt alii vallos furcasque bicornis 265 atque Amerina parant lentae retinacula viti. 266 Nunc facilis rubea texatur fiscina virga, 267 nunc torrete igni fruges, nunc frangite saxo. 268 Quippe etiam festis quaedam exercere diebus 269 fas et iura sinunt; rivos deducere nulla 270 religio vetuit, segeti praetendere saepem,	dry, forbids not, and the clouds 272 Are buoyant. With the spring comes bean-sowing; 273 Thee, too, Lucerne, the crumbling furrows then 274 Receive, and millet's annual care returns, 275 What time the white bull with his gilded horns 276 Opens the year, before whose threatening front, 277 Routed the dog-star sinks. But if it be 278 For wheaten harvest and the hardy spelt, 279 Thou tax the soil, to corn-ears wholly given, 280 Let Atlas' daughters hide them in the dawn, 281 The Cretan star, a crown of fire, depart, 282 Or e'er the furrow's claim of seed thou quit, 283 Or haste thee to entrust the whole year's hope 284 To earth that would not. Many have begun 285 Ere Maia's star be setting; these, I trow, 286 Their looked-for harvest fools with empty ears. 287 But if the vetch and common kidney-bean 288 Thou'rt fain to sow, nor scorn to make thy care 289 Pelusiac lentil, no uncertain sign 290 Bootes' fall will send thee; then begin, 291 Pursue thy sowing till half the frosts be done.
1.271	271 insidias avibus moliri, incendere vepres, 272 balantumque gregem fluvio mersare salubri. 273 Saepe oleo tardi costas agitator aselli 274 vilibus aut onerat pomis, lapidemque revertens 275 incusum aut atrae massam picis urbe reportat. 276 Ipsa dies alios alio dedit ordine Luna 277 felicis operum. Quintam fuge: pallidus Orcus	292 Therefore it is the golden sun, his course 293 Into fixed parts dividing, rules his way 294 Through the twelve constellations of the world. 295 Five zones the heavens contain; whereof is one 296 Aye red with flashing sunlight, fervent aye 297 From fire; on either side to left and right 298 Are traced the utmost twain, stiff with blue ice, 299 And black with scowling storm-clouds, and betwixt 300 These and the midmost, other twain there lie, 301 By the Gods' grace to heart-sick mortals given, 302 And a path cleft between

	278 Eumenidesque satae; tum partu Terra nefando 279 Coeumque Iapetumque creat saevumque Typhoea 280 et coniuratos caelum rescindere fratres. 281 Ter sunt conati inponere Pelio Ossam 282 scilicet, atque Ossae frondosum involvere Olympum; 283 ter pater exstructos disiecit fulmine montis. 284 Septima post decimam felix et ponere vitem 285 et prensos domitare boves et licia telae 286 addere: nona fugae melior, contraria furtis. 287 Multa adeo gelida melius se nocte dedere, 288 aut cum sole novo terras inrorat Eous. 289 Nocte leves melius stipulae, nocte arida prata 290 tondentur, noctes lentus non deficit humor. 291 Et quidam seros hiberni ad luminis ignis 292 pervigilat ferroque faces inspicat acuto; 293 interea longum cantu solata laborem 294 arguto coniunx percurrit pectine telas, 295 aut dulcis musti Volcano decoquit humorem 296 et foliis undam trepidi despumat aeni. 297 At rubicunda Ceres medio succiditur aestu 298 et medio tostas aestu terit area fruges. 299 Nudus ara, sere nudus; hiems ignava colono. 300 Frigoribus parto agricolae plerumque fruuntur	them, where might wheel 303 On sloping plane the system of the Signs. 304 And as toward Scythia and Rhipaean heights 305 The world mounts upward, likewise sinks it down 306 Toward Libya and the south, this pole of ours 307 Still towering high, that other, 'neath their feet, 308 By dark Styx frowned on, and the abysmal shades. 309 Here glides the huge Snake forth with sinuous coils 310 'Twixt the two Bears and round them river-wise— 311 The Bears that fear 'neath Ocean's brim to dip. 312 There either, say they, reigns the eternal hush 313 Of night that knows no seasons, her black pall 314 Thick-mantling fold on fold; or thitherward 315 From us returning Dawn brings back the day; 316 And when the first breath of his panting steeds 317 On us the Orient flings, that hour with them 318 Red Vesper 'gins to trim his 'lated fires. 319 Hence under doubtful skies forebode we can 320 The coming tempests, hence both harvest-day 321 And seed-time, when to smite the treacherous main 322 With driving oars, when launch the fair-rigged fleet, 323 Or in ripe hour to fell the forest-pine.
1.301	301 mutuaque inter se laeti convivia curant. 302 Invitat genialis hiems curasque resolvit, 303 ceu pressae cum iam portum tetigere carinae, 304 puppibus et laeti nautae inposuere coronas. 305 Sed tamen et quernas glandes tum stringere tempus 306 et lauri bacas oleamque cruentaque myrta,	324 Hence, too, not idly do we watch the stars— 325 Their rising and their setting-and the year, 326 Four varying seasons to one law conformed. 327 If chilly showers e'er shut the farmer's door, 328 Much that had soon with sunshine cried for haste, 329 He may forestall; the ploughman batters keen 330 His blunted share's hard tooth, scoops from a tree 331 His troughs, or on the cattle stamps a brand, 332 Or numbers on the corn-heaps; some make

	307 tum gruibus pedicas et retia ponere cervis 308 auritosque sequi lepores, tum figere dammas, 309 stuppea torquentem Balearis verbera fundae, 310 cum nix alta iacet, glaciem cum flumina trudunt. 311 Quid tempestates autumni et sidera dicam, 312 atque, ubi iam breviorque dies et mollior aestas, 313 quae vigilanda viris. vel cum ruit imbriferum ver, 314 spicea iam campis cum messis inhorruit et cum 315 frumenta in viridi stipula lactentia turgent. 316 Saepe ego, cum flavis messorem induceret arvis 317 agricola et fragili iam stringeret hordea culmo, 318 omnia ventorum concurrere proelia vidi, 319 quae gravidam late segetem ab radicibus imis 320 sublimem expulsam eruerent; ita turbine nigro 321 ferret hiems culmumque levem stipulasque volantis. 322 Saepe etiam inmensum caelo venit agmen aquarum 323 et foedam glomerant tempestatem imbribus atris 324 collectae ex alto nubes; ruit arduus aether 325 et pluvia ingenti sata laeta boumque labores 326 diluit; inplentur fossae et cava flumina crescunt 327 cum sonitu fervetque fretis spirantibus aequor. 328 Ipse pater media nimborum in nocte corusca 329 fulmina molitur dextra; quo maxuma motu 330 terra tremit; fugere ferae et mortalia corda	sharp 333 The stakes and two-pronged forks, and willow-bands 334 Amerian for the bending vine prepare. 335 Now let the pliant basket plaited be 336 Of bramble-twigs; now set your corn to parch 337 Before the fire; now bruise it with the stone. 338 Nay even on holy days some tasks to ply 339 Is right and lawful: this no ban forbids, 340 To turn the runnel's course, fence corn-fields in, 341 Make springes for the birds, burn up the briars, 342 And plunge in wholesome stream the bleating flock. 343 Oft too with oil or apples plenty-cheap 344 The creeping ass's ribs his driver packs, 345 And home from town returning brings instead 346 A dented mill-stone or black lump of pitch.
1.331	331 per gentis humilis stravit pavor; ille flagranti 332 aut Athon aut Rhodopen aut alta Ceraunia telo 333 deicit; ingeminant austri et densissimus imber; 334 nunc nemora ingenti vento, nunc litora plangunt. 335 Hoc metuens caeli menses et sidera serva,	347 The moon herself in various rank assigns 348 The days for labour lucky: fly the fifth; 349 Then sprang pale Orcus and the Eumenides; 350 Earth then in awful labour brought to light 351 Coeus, Iapetus, and Typhoeus fell, 352 And those sworn brethren banded to break down 353 The gates of heaven; thrice, sooth to say, they strove 354 Ossa on Pelion's top to heave and heap,

	336 frigida Saturni sese quo stella receptet, 337 quos ignis caelo Cyllenius erret in orbis. 338 In primis venerare deos atque annua magnae 339 sacra refer Cereri laetis operatus in herbis 340 extremae sub casum hiemis, iam vere sereno. 341 Tum pingues agni et tum mollissima vina, 342 tum somni dulces densaeque in montibus umbrae. 343 Cuncta tibi Cererem pubes agrestis adoret; 344 cui tu lacte favos et miti dilue Baccho, 345 terque novas circum felix eat hostia fruges, 346 omnis quam chorus et socii comitentur ovantes, 347 et Cererem clamore vocent in tecta; neque ante 348 falcem maturis quisquam supponat aristis, 349 quam Cereri torta redimitus tempora quercu 350 det motus incompositos et carmina dicat. 351 Atque haec ut certis possemus discere signis, 352 aestusque pluviasque et agentis frigora ventos, 353 ipse Pater statuit, quid menstrua Luna moneret, 354 quo signo caderent austri, quid saepe videntes 355 agricolae propius stabulis armenta tenerent. 356 Continuo ventis surgentibus aut freta ponti 357 incipiunt agitata tumescere et aridus altis 358 montibus audiri fragor aut resonantia longe 359 litora misceri et nemorum increbrescere murmur. 360 Iam sibi tum a curvis male temperat unda carinis,	355 Aye, and on Ossa to up-roll amain 356 Leafy Olympus; thrice with thunderbolt 357 Their mountain-stair the Sire asunder smote. 358 Seventh after tenth is lucky both to set 359 The vine in earth, and take and tame the steer, 360 And fix the leashes to the warp; the ninth 361 To runagates is kinder, cross to thieves.
1.361	361 cum medio celeres revolant ex aequore mergi 362 clamoremque ferunt ad litora, cumque marinae 363 in sicco ludunt fulicae notasque paludes 364 deserit atque altam supra volat ardea nubem.	362 Many the tasks that lightlier lend themselves 363 In chilly night, or when the sun is young, 364 And Dawn bedews the world. By night 'tis best 365 To reap light stubble, and parched fields by night; 366 For nights the suppling moisture never fails. 367 And one will sit the long late watches out 368 By

	365 Saepe etiam stellas vento inpendente videbis 366 praecipitis caelo labi noctisque per umbram 367 flammarum longos a tergo albescere tractus; 368 saepe levem paleam et frondes volitare caducas 369 aut summa nantis in aqua colludere plumas. 370 At Boreae de parte trucis cum fulminat et cum 371 Eurique Zephyrique tonat domus: omnia plenis 372 rura natant fossis atque omnis navita ponto 373 humida vela legit. Numquam inprudentibus imber 374 obfuit: aut illum surgentem vallibus imis 375 aëriae fugere grues, aut bucula caelum 376 suspiciens patulis captavit naribus auras, 377 aut arguta lacus circumvolitavit hirundo 378 et veterem in limo ranae cecinere querelam. 379 Saepius et tectis penetralibus extulit ova 380 angustum formica terens iter et bibit ingens 381 arcus et e pastu decedens agmine magno 382 corvorum increpuit densis exercitus alis. 383 Iam variae pelagi volucres et quae Asia circum 384 dulcibus in stagnis rimantur prata Caystri, 385 certatim largos umeris infundere rores: 386 nunc caput obiectare fretis, nunc currere in undas 387 et studio incassum videas gestire lavandi. 388 Tum cornix plena pluviam vocat inproba voce 389 et sola in sicca secum spatiatur harena. 390 Ne nocturna quidem carpentes pensa puellae	winter fire-light, shaping with keen blade 369 The torches to a point; his wife the while, 370 Her tedious labour soothing with a song, 371 Speeds the shrill comb along the warp, or else 372 With Vulcan's aid boils the sweet must-juice down, 373 And skims with leaves the quivering cauldron's wave. 374 But ruddy Ceres in mid heat is mown, 375 And in mid heat the parched ears are bruised 376 Upon the floor; to plough strip, strip to sow; 377 Winter's the lazy time for husbandmen. 378 In the cold season farmers wont to taste 379 The increase of their toil, and yield themselves 380 To mutual interchange of festal cheer. 381 Boon winter bids them, and unbinds their cares, 382 As laden keels, when now the port they touch, 383 And happy sailors crown the sterns with flowers. 384 Nathless then also time it is to strip 385 Acorns from oaks, and berries from the bay, 386 Olives, and bleeding myrtles, then to set 387 Snares for the crane, and meshes for the stag, 388 And hunt the long-eared hares, then pierce the doe 389 With whirl of hempen-thonged Balearic sling, 390 While snow lies deep, and streams are drifting ice.
1.391	391 nescivere hiemem, testa cum ardente viderent 392 scintillare oleum et putris concrescere fungos. 393 Nec minus ex imbri soles et aperta serena	391 What need to tell of autumn's storms and stars, 392 And wherefore men must watch, when now the day 393 Grows shorter, and more soft the summer's heat? 394 When Spring the rain-bringer comes rushing down, 395

	394 prospicere et certis poteris cognoscere signis: 395 nam neque tum stellis acies obtunsa videtur, 396 nec fratris radiis obnoxia surgere Luna, 397 tenuia nec lanae per caelum vellera ferri; 398 non tepidum ad solem pinnas in litore pandunt 399 dilectae Thetidi alcyones, non ore solutos 400 inmundi meminere sues iactare maniplos. 401 At nebulae magis ima petunt campoque recumbunt, 402 solis et occasum servans de culmine summo 403 nequiquam seros exercet noctua cantus. 404 Adparet liquido sublimis in aëre Nisus 405 et pro purpureo poenas dat Scylla capillo: 406 quacumque illa levem fugiens secat aethera pinnis, 407 ecce inimicus, atrox, magno stridore per auras 408 insequitur Nisus; qua se fert Nisus ad auras, 409 illa levem fugiens raptim secat aethera pinnis 410 Tum liquidas corvi presso ter gutture voces 411 aut quater ingeminant, et saepe cubilibus altis 412 nescio qua praeter solitum dulcedine laeti 413 inter se in foliis strepitant; iuvat imbribus actis 414 progeniem parvam dulcisque revisere nidos; 415 haud equidem credo, quia sit divinitus illis 416 ingenium aut rerum fato prudentia maior; 417 verum ubi tempestas et caeli mobilis humor 418 mutavere vias et Iuppiter uvidus austris 419 denset, erant quae rara modo, et, quae densa, relaxat, 420 vertuntur species animorum et pectora motus	Or when the beards of harvest on the plain 396 Bristle already, and the milky corn 397 On its green stalk is swelling? Many a time, 398 When now the farmer to his yellow fields 399 The reaping-hind came bringing, even in act 400 To lop the brittle barley stems, have I 401 Seen all the windy legions clash in war 402 Together, as to rend up far and wide 403 The heavy corn-crop from its lowest roots, 404 And toss it skyward: so might winter's flaw, 405 Dark-eddying, whirl light stalks and flying straws. 406 Oft too comes looming vast along the sky 407 A march of waters; mustering from above, 408 The clouds roll up the tempest, heaped and grim 409 With angry showers: down falls the height of heaven, 410 And with a great rain floods the smiling crops, 411 The oxen's labour: now the dikes fill fast, 412 And the void river-beds swell thunderously, 413 And all the panting firths of Ocean boil. 414 The Sire himself in midnight of the clouds 415 Wields with red hand the levin; through all her bulk 416 Earth at the hurly quakes; the beasts are fled, 417 And mortal hearts of every kindred sunk 418 In cowering terror; he with flaming brand 419 Athos, or Rhodope, or Ceraunian crags 420 Precipitates: then doubly raves the South
1.421	421 nunc alios, alios, dum nubila ventus agebat, 422 concipiunt: hinc ille avium concentus in agris	421 With shower on blinding shower, and woods and coasts 422 Wail fitfully beneath the mighty blast. 423 This fearing, mark the months and Signs of

	423 et laetae pecudes et ovantes gutture corvi. 424 Si vero solem ad rapidum lunasque sequentis 425 ordine respicies, numquam te crastina fallet 426 hora neque insidiis noctis capiere serenae. 427 Luna, revertentis cum primum colligit ignis, 428 si nigrum obscuro conprenderit aera cornu, 429 maxumus agricolis pelagoque parabitur imber; 430 at si virgineum suffuderit ore ruborem, 431 ventus erit; vento semper rubet aurea Phoebe. 432 Sin ortu quarto, namque is certissimus auctor, 433 pura neque obtunsis per caelum cornibus ibit, 434 totus et ille dies et qui nascentur ab illo 435 exactum ad mensem pluvia ventisque carebunt, 436 votaque servati solvent in litore nautae 437 Glauco et Panopeae et Inoo Melicertae. 438 Sol quoque et exoriens et cum se condet in undas 439 signa dabit; solem certissima signa sequuntur, 440 et quae mane refert et quae surgentibus astris. 441 Ille ubi nascentem maculis variaverit ortum 442 conditus in nubem medioque refugerit orbe, 443 suspecti tibi sint imbres; namque urget ab alto 444 arboribusque satisque Notus pecorique sinister. 445 Aut ubi sub lucem densa inter nubila sese 446 diversi rumpent radii aut ubi pallida surget 447 Tithoni croceum linquens Aurora cubile, 448 heu male tum mitis defendet pampinus uvas: 449 tam multa in tectis crepitans salit horrida grando. 450 Hoc etiam, emenso cum iam decedit Olympo,	heaven, 424 Whither retires him Saturn's icy star, 425 And through what heavenly cycles wandereth 426 The glowing orb Cyllenian. Before all 427 Worship the Gods, and to great Ceres pay 428 Her yearly dues upon the happy sward 429 With sacrifice, anigh the utmost end 430 Of winter, and when Spring begins to smile. 431 Then lambs are fat, and wines are mellowest then; 432 Then sleep is sweet, and dark the shadows fall 433 Upon the mountains. Let your rustic youth 434 To Ceres do obeisance, one and all; 435 And for her pleasure thou mix honeycombs 436 With milk and the ripe wine-god; thrice for luck 437 Around the young corn let the victim go, 438 And all the choir, a joyful company, 439 Attend it, and with shouts bid Ceres come 440 To be their house-mate; and let no man dare 441 Put sickle to the ripened ears until, 442 With woven oak his temples chapleted, 443 He foot the rugged dance and chant the lay. 444 Aye, and that these things we might win to know 445 By certain tokens, heats, and showers, and winds 446 That bring the frost, the Sire of all himself 447 Ordained what warnings in her monthly round 448 The moon should give, what bodes the south wind's fall, 449 What oft-repeated sights the herdsman seeing 450 Should keep his cattle closer to their stalls. 451 No sooner are the winds at point to rise, 452 Than either Ocean's firths begin to toss 453 And swell, and a dry crackling sound is heard 454 Upon the heights, or one loud ferment booms 455 The beach afar, and through the forest goes 456 A murmur multitudinous. By this 457 Scarce can the billow spare the curved keels, 458 When swift the sea-gulls from the middle main 459 Come winging, and their shrieks are shoreward borne, 460 When ocean-loving cormorants on dry land 461 Besport them, and the hern, her marshy haunts 462 Forsaking, mounts above the soaring cloud. 463 Oft, too, when wind is toward, the stars thou'lt see 464 From heaven shoot headlong, and through murky night 465 Long trails of fire white-glistening in their wake, 466 Or light chaff flit in air with fallen leaves, 467 Or feathers on the wave-top float and play. 468 But when from regions of the furious North 469 It lightens, and when thunder fills the halls 470 Of Eurus and of Zephyr, all the fields 471 With brimming dikes are flooded, and at sea 472 No mariner but furls his dripping sails. 473 Never at unawares did shower annoy:

1.451	451 profuerit meminisse magis; nam saepe videmus 452 ipsius in voltu varios errare colores: 453 caeruleus pluviam denuntiat, igneus Euros; 454 sin maculae incipient rutilo inmiscerier igni, 455 omnia tum pariter vento nimbisque videbis 456 fervere. Non illa quisquam me nocte per altum 457 ire, neque a terra moneat convellere funem. 458 At si, cum referetque diem condetque relatum, 459 lucidus orbis erit, frustra terrebere nimbis 460 et claro silvas cernes Aquilone moveri. 461 Denique quid vesper serus vehat, unde serenas 462 ventus agat nubes, quid cogitet humidus Auster, 463 sol tibi signa dabit. Solem quis dicere falsum 464 audeat. Ille etiam caecos instare tumultus 465 saepe monet fraudemque et operta tumescere bella. 466 Ille etiam exstincto miseratus Caesare Romam, 467 cum caput obscura nitidum ferrugine texit 468 inpiaque aeternam timuerunt saecula noctem. 469 Tempore quamquam illo tellus quoque et aequora ponti 470 obscenaeque canes inportunaeque volucres 471 signa dabant. Quotiens Cyclopum effervere in agros 472 vidimus undantem ruptis fornacibus Aetnam 473 flammarumque globos liquefactaque volvere saxa! 474 Armorum sonitum toto Germania caelo 475 audiit, insolitis tremuerunt motibus Alpes. 476 Vox quoque per lucos volgo exaudita silentis 477 ingens et simulacra modis	474 Or, as it rises, the high-soaring cranes 475 Flee to the vales before it, with face 476 Upturned to heaven, the heifer snuffs the gale 477 Through gaping nostrils, or about the meres 478 Shrill-twittering flits the swallow, and the frogs 479 Crouch in the mud and chant their dirge of old. 480 Oft, too, the ant from out her inmost cells, 481 Fretting the narrow path, her eggs conveys; 482 Or the huge bow sucks moisture; or a host 483 Of rooks from food returning in long line 484 Clamour with jostling wings. Now mayst thou see 485 The various ocean-fowl and those that pry 486 Round Asian meads within thy fresher-pools, 487 Cayster, as in eager rivalry, 488 About their shoulders dash the plenteous spray, 489 Now duck their head beneath the wave, now run 490 Into the billows, for sheer idle joy 491 Of their mad bathing-revel. Then the crow 492 With full voice, good-for-naught, inviting rain, 493 Stalks on the dry sand mateless and alone. 494 Nor e'en the maids, that card their nightly task, 495 Know not the storm-sign, when in blazing crock 496 They see the lamp-oil sputtering with a growth 497 Of mouldy snuff-clots.

	pallentia miris 478 visa sub obscurum noctis, pecudesque locutae, 479 infandum! sistunt amnes terraeque dehiscunt 480 et maestum inlacrimat templis ebur aeraque sudant.
1.481	481 Proluit insano contorquens vertice silvas 482 fluviorum rex Eridanus camposque per omnis 483 cum stabulis armenta tulit. Nec tempore eodem 484 tristibus aut extis fibrae adparere minaces 485 aut puteis manare cruor cessavit et altae 486 per noctem resonare lupis ululantibus urbes. 487 Non alias caelo ceciderunt plura sereno 488 fulgura nec diri totiens arsere cometae. 489 ergo inter sese paribus concurrere telis 490 Romanas acies iterum videre Philippi; 491 nec fuit indignum superis, bis sanguine nostro 492 Emathiam et latos Haemi pinguescere campos. 493 Scilicet et tempus veniet, cum finibus illis 494 agricola incurvo terram molitus aratro 495 exesa inveniet scabra robigine pila 496 aut gravibus rastris galeas pulsabit inanis 497 grandiaque effossis mirabitur ossa sepulchris. 498 Di patrii, Indigetes, et Romule Vestaque mater, 499 quae Tuscum Tiberim et Romana Palatia servas, 500 hunc saltem everso iuvenem succurrere saeclo 501 ne prohibete! Satis iam pridem sanguine nostro 502 Laomedonteae luimus periuria Troiae; 503 iam pridem nobis caeli te regia, Caesar, 504 invidet atque hominum queritur curare triumphos; 505 quippe ubi fas versum atque nefas: tot bella per orbem, 506 tam multae scelerum facies; non ullus aratro	498 So too, after rain, 499 Sunshine and open skies thou mayst forecast, 500 And learn by tokens sure, for then nor dimmed 501 Appear the stars' keen edges, nor the moon 502 As borrowing of her brother's beams to rise, 503 Nor fleecy films to float along the sky. 504 Not to the sun's warmth then upon the shore 505 Do halcyons dear to Thetis ope their wings, 506 Nor filthy swine take thought to toss on high 507 With scattering snout the straw-wisps. But the clouds 508 Seek more the vales, and rest upon the plain, 509 And from the roof-top the night-owl for naught 510 Watching the sunset plies her 'lated song. 511 Distinct in clearest air is Nisus seen 512 Towering, and Scylla for the purple lock 513 Pays dear; for whereso, as she flies, her wings 514 The light air winnow, lo! fierce, implacable, 515 Nisus with mighty whirr through heaven pursues; 516 Where Nisus heavenward soareth, there her wings 517 Clutch as she flies, the light air winnowing still. 518 Soft then the voice of rooks from indrawn throat 519 Thrice, four times, o'er repeated, and full oft 520 On their high cradles, by some hidden joy 521 Gladdened beyond their wont, in bustling throngs 522 Among the leaves they riot; so sweet it is, 523 When showers are spent, their own loved nests again 524 And tender brood to visit. Not, I deem, 525 That heaven some native wit to these assigned, 526 Or fate a larger prescience, but that when 527 The storm and shifting moisture of the air 528 Have changed their courses, and the sky-god now, 529 Wet with the south-wind, thickens what was rare, 530 And what was gross releases, then, too, change 531 Their spirits' fleeting phases, and their breasts 532 Feel other motions now, than when the wind 533 Was driving up the cloud-rack. Hence proceeds 534 That blending of the feathered choirs afield, 535 The cattle's exultation, and the rooks' 536 Deep- throated triumph.

	507 dignus honos, squalent abductis arva colonis 508 et curvae rigidum falces conflantur in ensem. 509 Hinc movet Euphrates, illinc Germania bellum; 510 vicinae ruptis inter se legibus urbes
1.511	511 arma ferunt; saevit toto Mars inpius orbe; 512 ut cum carceribus sese effudere quadrigae, 513 addunt in spatia et frustra retinacula tendens 514 fertur equis auriga neque audit currus habenas.
2.1	1 Hactenus arvorum cultus et sidera caeli, 2 nunc te, Bacche, canam, nec non silvestria tecum 3 virgulta et prolem tarde crescentis olivae. 4 Huc, pater o Lenaee—tuis hic omnia plena 5 muneribus, tibi pampineo gravidus autumno 6 floret ager, spumat plenis vindemia labris— 7 huc, pater o Lenaee, veni nudataque musto 8 tingue novo mecum direptis crura cothurnis. 9 Principio arboribus varia est natura creandis. 10 namque aliae nullis hominum cogentibus ipsae 11 sponte sua veniunt camposque et flumina late 12 curva tenent, ut molle siler lentaeque genestae, 13 populus et glauca canentia fronde salicta; 14 pars autem posito surgunt de semine, ut altae 15 castaneae nemorumque Iovi quae maxima frondet 16 aesculus atque habitae Grais oracula quercus. 17 Pullulat ab radice aliis densissima silva, 18 ut cerasis ulmisque; etiam Parnasia laurus 19 parva sub ingenti matris se subicit umbra. 20 Hos natura modos primum dedit, his genus omne 21 silvarum fruticumque viret	1 Thus far the tilth of fields and stars of heaven; 2 Now will I sing thee, Bacchus, and, with thee, 3 The forest's young plantations and the fruit 4 Of slow-maturing olive. Hither haste, 5 O Father of the wine-press; all things here 6 Teem with the bounties of thy hand; for thee 7 With viny autumn laden blooms the field, 8 And foams the vintage high with brimming vats; 9 Hither, O Father of the wine-press, come, 10 And stripped of buskin stain thy bared limbs 11 In the new must with me.

	nemorumque sacrorum. 22 Sunt aliae, quas ipse via sibi repperit usus. 23 Hic plantas tenero abscindens de corpore matrum 24 deposuit sulcis, hic stirpes obruit arvo 25 quadrifidasque sudes et acuto robore vallos; 26 silvarumque aliae pressos propaginis arcus 27 exspectant et viva sua plantaria terra; 28 nil radicis egent aliae summumque putator 29 haud dubitat terrae referens mandare cacumen. 30 Quin et caudicibus sectis—mirabile dictu—
2.31	31 truditur e sicco radix oleagina ligno. 32 Et saepe alterius ramos inpune videmus 33 vertere in alterius mutatamque insita mala 34 ferre pirum et prunis lapidosa rubescere corna. 35 Quare agite o proprios generatim discite cultus, 36 agricolae, fructusque feros mollite colendo, 37 neu segnes iaceant terrae. Iuvat Ismara Baccho 38 conserere atque olea magnum vestire Taburnum. 39 Tuque ades inceptumque una decurre laborem, 40 O decus, o famae merito pars maxima nostrae, 41 Maecenas, pelagoque volans da vela patenti; 42 non ego cuncta meis amplecti versibus opto, 43 non, mihi si linguae centum sint oraque centum, 44 ferrea vox; ades et primi lege litoris oram. 45 In manibus terrae; non hic te carmine ficto 46 atque per ambages et longa exorsa tenebo. 47 Sponte sua quae se tollunt in luminis oras, 48 infecunda quidem, sed laeta et fortia surgunt; 49 quippe solo natura subest. Tamen haec quoque, si quis 50 inserat aut scrobibus mandet mutata subactis,	12 First, nature's law 13 For generating trees is manifold; 14 For some of their own force spontaneous spring, 15 No hand of man compelling, and possess 16 The plains and river-windings far and wide, 17 As pliant osier and the bending broom, 18 Poplar, and willows in wan companies 19 With green leaf glimmering gray; and some there be 20 From chance-dropped seed that rear them, as the tall 21 Chestnuts, and, mightiest of the branching wood, 22 Jove's Aesculus, and oaks, oracular 23 Deemed by the Greeks of old. With some sprouts forth 24 A forest of dense suckers from the root, 25 As elms and cherries; so, too, a pigmy plant, 26 Beneath its mother's mighty shade upshoots 27 The bay-tree of Parnassus. Such the modes 28 Nature imparted first; hence all the race 29 Of forest-trees and shrubs and sacred groves 30 Springs into verdure. Other means there are, 31 Which use by method for itself acquired. 32 One, sliving suckers from the tender frame 33 Of the tree-mother, plants them in the trench; 34 One buries the bare stumps within his field, 35 Truncheons cleft four-wise, or sharp-pointed stakes; 36 Some forest-trees the layer's bent arch await, 37 And slips yet quick within the parent-soil; 38 No root need others, nor doth the pruner's hand 39 Shrink to restore the topmost shoot to earth 40 That gave it being. Nay, marvellous to tell, 41 Lopped of its limbs, the olive, a mere stock, 42 Still thrusts its root out from the sapless wood, 43 And oft the

	51 exuerint silvestrem animum cultuque frequenti 52 in quascumque voles artis haud tarda sequentur. 53 Nec non et sterilis, quae stirpibus exit ab imis, 54 hoc faciat, vacuos si sit digesta per agros; 55 nunc altae frondes et rami matris opacant 56 crescentique adimunt fetus uruntque ferentem. 57 Iam quae seminibus iactis se sustulit arbos 58 tarda venit seris factura nepotibus umbram, 59 pomaque degenerant sucos oblita priores 60 et turpis avibus praedam fert uva racemos.	branches of one kind we see 44 Change to another's with no loss to rue, 45 Pear-tree transformed the ingrafted apple yield, 46 And stony cornels on the plum-tree blush. 47 Come then, and learn what tilth to each belongs 48 According to their kinds, ye husbandmen, 49 And tame with culture the wild fruits, lest earth 50 Lie idle. O blithe to make all Ismarus 51 One forest of the wine-god, and to clothe 52 With olives huge Tabernus! And be thou 53 At hand, and with me ply the voyage of toil 54 I am bound on, O my glory, O thou that art 55 Justly the chiefest portion of my fame, 56 Maecenas, and on this wide ocean launched 57 Spread sail like wings to waft thee. Not that I 58 With my poor verse would comprehend the whole, 59 Nay, though a hundred tongues, a hundred mouths 60 Were mine, a voice of iron; be thou at hand, 61 Skirt but the nearer coast-line; see the shore 62 Is in our grasp; not now with feigned song 63 Through winding bouts and tedious preludings 64 Shall I detain thee.
2.61	61 Scilicet omnibus est labor inpendendus et omnes 62 cogendae in sulcum ac multa mercede domandae. 63 Sed truncis oleae melius, propagine vites 64 respondent, solido Paphiae de robore myrtus; 65 plantis et durae coryli nascuntur et ingens 66 fraxinus Herculeaeque arbos umbrosa coronae 67 Chaoniique patris glandes, etiam ardua palma 68 nascitur et casus abies visura marinos. 69 Inseritur vero et fetu nucis arbutus horrida, 70 et steriles platani malos gessere valentis; 71 castaneae fagus, ornusque incanuit albo 72 flore piri glandemque sues fregere sub ulmis. 73 Nec modus inserere atque oculos inponere simplex. 74 Nam qua se medio trudunt de cortice gemmae 75 et tenuis rumpunt tunicas, angustus in ipso 76 fit nodo sinus: huc aliena ex arbore	65 Those that lift their head 66 Into the realms of light spontaneously, 67 Fruitless indeed, but blithe and strenuous spring, 68 Since Nature lurks within the soil. And yet 69 Even these, should one engraft them, or transplant 70 To well-drilled trenches, will anon put of 71 Their woodland temper, and, by frequent tilth, 72 To whatso craft thou summon them, make speed 73 To follow. So likewise will the barren shaft 74 That from the stock-root issueth, if it be 75 Set out with clear space amid open fields: 76 Now the tree-mother's towering leaves and boughs 77 Darken, despoil of increase as it grows, 78 And blast it in the bearing. Lastly, that 79 Which from shed seed ariseth, upward wins 80 But slowly, yielding promise of its shade 81 To late-born generations; apples wane 82 Forgetful of their former juice, the grape 83 Bears sorry clusters, for the birds a prey. 84 Soothly on all must toil be spent, and all 85 Trained to the trench and at great cost subdued. 86 But reared from truncheons olives answer best, 87 As vines from layers, and from the solid wood 88 The Paphian myrtles; while from suckers spring 89 Both hardy hazels and huge ash, the tree 90 That germen 77 includunt udoque docent inolescere libro. 78 Aut rursum enodes trunci resecantur et alte 79 finditur in solidum cuneis via, deinde feraces 80 plantae inmittuntur: nec longum tempus, et ingens 81 exsilit ad caelum ramis felicibus arbos 82 miraturque novas frondes et non sua poma. 83 Praeterea genus haud unum nec fortibus ulmis 84 nec salici lotoque neque Idaeis cyparissis, 85 nec pingues unam in faciem nascuntur olivae, 86 orchades et radii et amara pausia baca 87 pomaque et Alcinoi silvae, nec surculus idem 88 Crustumiis Syriisque piris gravibusque volemis. 89 Non eadem arboribus pendet vindemia nostris, 90 quam Methymnaeo carpit de palmite Lesbos;	rims with shade the brows of Hercules, 91 And acorns dear to the Chaonian sire: 92 So springs the towering palm too, and the fir 93 Destined to spy the dangers of the deep. 94 But the rough arbutus with walnut-fruit 95 Is grafted; so have barren planes ere now 96 Stout apples borne, with chestnut-flower the beech, 97 The mountain-ash with pear-bloom whitened o'er, 98 And swine crunched acorns 'neath the boughs of elms.

2.91	91 sunt Thasiae vites, sunt et Mareotides albae, 92 pinguibus hae terris habiles, levioribus illae, 93 et passo Psithia utilior tenuisque Lageos 94 temptatura pedes olim vincturaque linguam, 95 purpureae preciaeque, et quo te carmine dicam, 96 Rhaetica? Nec cellis ideo contende Falernis. 97 Sunt et Amineae vites, firmissima vina, 98 Tmolius adsurgit quibus et rex ipse Phanaeus; 99 Argitisque minor, cui non certaverit ulla 100 aut tantum fluere aut totidem durare per annos. 101 Non ego te, Dis et mensis accepta secundis, 102 transierim, Rhodia, et tumidis, Bumaste, racemis. 103 Sed neque quam multae species nec nomina quae sint, 104 est numerus; neque enim numero conprendere refert; 105 quem qui scire velit, Libyci velit	99 Nor is the method of inserting eyes 100 And grafting one: for where the buds push forth 101 Amidst the bark, and burst the membranes thin, 102 Even on the knot a narrow rift is made, 103 Wherein from some strange tree a germ they pen, 104 And to the moist rind bid it cleave and grow. 105 Or, otherwise, in knotless trunks is hewn 106 A breach, and deep into the solid grain 107 A path with wedges cloven; then fruitful slips 108 Are set herein, and—no long time—behold! 109 To heaven upshot with teeming boughs, the tree 110 Strange leaves admires and fruitage not its own. 111 Nor of one kind alone are sturdy elms, 112 Willow and lotus, nor the cypress-trees 113 Of Ida; nor of self-same fashion spring 114 Fat olives, orchades, and radii 115 And bitter-berried pausians, no, nor yet 116 Apples and the forests of Alcinous; 117 Nor from like cuttings are Crustumian pears 118 And Syrian, and the heavy hand-fillers. 119 Not the same vintage from our trees hangs down, 120 Which Lesbos from Methymna's tendril plucks. 121 Vines Thasian are there, Mareotids white, 122 These apt for richer soils, for aequoris idem 106 discere quam multae Zephyro turbentur harenae, 107 aut ubi navigiis violentior incidit Eurus, 108 nosse, quot Ionii veniant ad litora fluctus. 109 Nec vero terrae ferre omnes omnia possunt. 110 fluminibus salices crassisque paludibus alni 111 nascuntur, steriles saxosis montibus orni; 112 litora myrtetis laetissima; denique apertos 113 Bacchus amat collis, aquilonem et frigora taxi. 114 Aspice et extremis domitum cultoribus orbem 115 Eoasque domos Arabum pictosque Gelonos: 116 divisae arboribus patriae. Sola India nigrum 117 fert ebenum, solis est turea virga Sabaeis. 118 Quid tibi odorato referam sudantia ligno 119 balsamaque et bacas semper frondentis acanthi? 120 Quid nemora Aethiopum molli canentia lana,	lighter those: 123 Psithian for raisin-wine more useful, thin 124 Lageos, that one day will try the feet 125 And tie the tongue: purples and early-ripes, 126 And how, O Rhaetian, shall I hymn thy praise? 127 Yet cope not therefore with Falernian bins. 128 Vines Aminaean too, best-bodied wine, 129 To which the Tmolian bows him, ay, and king 130 Phanaeus too, and, lesser of that name, 131 Argitis, wherewith not a grape can vie 132 For gush of wine-juice or for length of years. 133 Nor thee must I pass over, vine of Rhodes, 134 Welcomed by gods and at the second board, 135 Nor thee, Bumastus, with plump clusters swollen. 136 But lo! how many kinds, and what their names, 137 There is no telling, nor doth it boot to tell; 138 Who lists to know it, he too would list to learn 139 How many sand-grains are by Zephyr tossed 140 On Libya's plain, or wot, when Eurus falls 141 With fury on the ships, how many waves 142 Come rolling shoreward from the Ionian sea.

2.121	121 velleraque ut foliis depectant tenuia Seres; 122 aut quos Oceano propior gerit India lucos, 123 extremi sinus orbis, ubi aera vincere summum 124 arboris haud ullae iactu potuere sagittae? 125 Et gens illa quidem sumptis non tarda pharetris. 126 Media fert tristis sucos tardumque saporem 127 felicis mali, quo non praesentius ullum, 128 pocula si quando saevae infecere novercae, 129 miscueruntque herbas et non innoxia verba, 130 auxilium venit ac membris agit atra venena. 131 Ipsa ingens arbos faciemque simillima lauro; 132 et, si non alium late iactaret odorem, 133 laurus erat; folia haud ullis labentia ventis; 134 flos ad prima tenax; animas et	143 Not that all soils can all things bear alike. 144 Willows by water-courses have their birth, 145 Alders in miry fens; on rocky heights 146 The barren mountain-ashes; on the shore 147 Myrtles throng gayest; Bacchus, lastly, loves 148 The bare hillside, and yews the north wind's chill. 149 Mark too the earth by outland tillers tamed, 150 And Eastern homes of Arabs, and tattooed 151 Geloni; to all trees their native lands 152 Allotted are; no clime but India bears 153 Black ebony; the branch of frankincense 154 Is Saba's sons' alone; why tell to thee 155 Of balsams oozing from the perfumed wood, 156 Or berries of acanthus ever green? 157 Of Aethiop forests hoar with downy wool, 158 Or how the Seres comb from off the leaves 159 Their silky fleece? Of groves which India bears, 160 Ocean's near neighbour, earth's remotest nook, 161 Where not an arrow-shot can cleave the air 162 Above their tree-tops? yet no laggards they, 163 When girded with the quiver! Media yields 164 The bitter juices and slow-lingering taste 165 Of olentia Medi 135 ora fovent illo et senibus medicantur anhelis. 136 sed neque Medorum, silvae ditissima, terra, 137 nec pulcher Ganges atque auro turbidus Hermus 138 laudibus Italiae certent, non Bactra neque Indi 139 totaque turiferis Panchaia pinguis harenis. 140 Haec loca non tauri spirantes naribus ignem 141 invertere satis inmanis dentibus hydri 142 nec galeis densisque virum seges horruit hastis; 143 sed gravidae fruges et Bacchi Massicus humor 144 inplevere; tenent oleae armentaque laeta. 145 Hinc bellator equus campo sese arduus infert; 146 hinc albi, Clitumne, greges et maxima taurus 147 victima, saepe tuo perfusi flumine sacro, 148 Romanos ad templa deum duxere triumphos. 149 Hic ver adsiduum atque alienis mensibus aestas 150 bis gravidae pecudes, bis pomis utilis arbos.	the blest citron-fruit, than which no aid 166 Comes timelier, when fierce step-dames drug the cup 167 With simples mixed and spells of baneful power, 168 To drive the deadly poison from the limbs. 169 Large the tree's self in semblance like a bay, 170 And, showered it not a different scent abroad, 171 A bay it had been; for no wind of heaven 172 Its foliage falls; the flower, none faster, clings; 173 With it the Medes for sweetness lave the lips, 174 And ease the panting breathlessness of age.

2.151	151 At rabidae tigres absunt et saeva leonum 152 semina nec miseros fallunt aconita legentis 153 nec rapit inmensos orbis per humum neque tanto 154 squameus in spiram tractu se colligit anguis. 155 Adde tot egregias urbes operumque laborem, 156 tot congesta manu praeruptis oppida saxis 157 fluminaque antiquos subter labentia muros. 158 An mare, quod supra, memorem, quodque adluit infra 159 anne lacus tantos? Te, Lari maxume, teque, 160 fluctibus et fremitu adsurgens Benace marino 161 an memorem portus Lucrinoque addita claustra 162 atque indignatum magnis stridoribus aequor 163 Iulia qua ponto longe sonat unda	175 But no, not Mede-land with its wealth of woods, 176 Nor Ganges fair, and Hermus thick with gold, 177 Can match the praise of Italy; nor Ind, 178 Nor Bactria, nor Panchaia, one wide tract 179 Of incense-teeming sand. Here never bulls 180 With nostrils snorting fire upturned the sod 181 Sown with the monstrous dragon's teeth, nor crop 182 Of warriors bristled thick with lance and helm; 183 But heavy harvests and the Massic juice 184 Of Bacchus fill its borders, overspread 185 With fruitful flocks and olives. Hence arose 186 The war-horse stepping proudly o'er the plain; 187 Hence thy white flocks, Clitumnus, and the bull, 188 Of victims mightiest, which full oft have led, 189 Bathed in thy sacred stream, the triumph-pomp 190 Of Romans to the temples of the gods. 191 Here blooms perpetual spring, and summer here 192 In months that are not summer's; twice teem the flocks; 193 Twice doth the tree yield service of her fruit. 194 But refuso 164 Tyrrhenusque fretis inmittitur aestus Avernis? 165 Haec eadem argenti rivos aerisque metalla 166 ostendit venis atque auro plurima fluxit. 167 Haec genus acre virum, Marsos pubemque Sabellam 168 adsuetumque malo Ligurem Volscosque verutos 169 extulit, haec Decios, Marios, magnosque Camillos, 170 Scipiadas duros bello et te, maxume Caesar, 171 qui nunc extremis Asiae iam victor in oris 172 inbellem avertis Romanis arcibus Indum. 173 Salve, magna parens frugum, Saturnia tellus, 174 magna virum; tibi res antiquae laudis et artem 175 ingredior, sanctos ausus recludere fontis, 176 Ascraeumque cano Romana per oppida carmen. 177 Nunc locus arvorum ingeniis: quae robora cuique, 178 quis color et quae sit rebus natura ferendis. 179 Difficiles primum terrae collesque maligni, 180 tenuis ubi argilla et dumosis calculus arvis,	ravening tigers come not nigh, nor breed 195 Of savage lion, nor aconite betrays 196 Its hapless gatherers, nor with sweep so vast 197 Doth the scaled serpent trail his endless coils 198 Along the ground, or wreathe him into spires. 199 Mark too her cities, so many and so proud, 200 Of mighty toil the achievement, town on town 201 Up rugged precipices heaved and reared, 202 And rivers undergliding ancient walls. 203 Or should I celebrate the sea that laves 204 Her upper shores and lower? or those broad lakes?

2.181	181 Palladia gaudent silva vivacis olivae. 182 Indicio est tractu surgens oleaster eodem 183 plurimus et strati bacis silvestribus agri. 184 At quae pinguis humus dulcique uligine laeta, 185 quique frequens herbis et fertilis ubere campus— 186 qualem saepe cava montis convalle solemus 187 despicere; huc summis liquuntur rupibus amnes 188 felicemque trahunt limum—quique editus austro 189 et filicem curvis invisam pascit aratris: 190 hic tibi praevalidas olim multoque fluentis 191 sufficiet Baccho vitis, hic fertilis uvae, 192 hic laticis, qualem pateris libamus	205 Thee, Larius, greatest and, Benacus, thee 206 With billowy uproar surging like the main? 207 Or sing her harbours, and the barrier cast 208 Athwart the Lucrine, and how ocean chafes 209 With mighty bellowings, where the Julian wave 210 Echoes the thunder of his rout, and through 211 Avernian inlets pours the Tuscan tide? 212 A land no less that in her veins displays 213 Rivers of silver, mines of copper ore, 214 Ay, and with gold hath flowed abundantly. 215 A land that reared a valiant breed of men, 216 The Marsi and Sabellian youth, and, schooled 217 To hardship, the Ligurian, and with these 218 The Volscian javelin-armed, the Decii too, 219 The Marii and Camilli, names of might, 220 The Scipios, stubborn warriors, ay, and thee, 221 Great Caesar, who in Asia's utmost bounds 222 With conquering arm e'en now art fending far 223 The unwarlike

	et auro, 193 inflavit cum pinguis ebur Tyrrhenus ad aras, 194 lancibus et pandis fumantia reddimus exta. 195 Sin armenta magis studium vitulosque tueri 196 aut ovium fetum aut urentis culta capellas, 197 saltus et saturi petito longinqua Tarenti 198 et qualem infelix amisit Mantua campum, 199 pascentem niveos herboso flumine cycnos; 200 non liquidi gregibus fontes, non gramina deerunt; 201 et, quantum longis carpent armenta diebus, 202 exigua tantum gelidus ros nocte reponet. 203 Nigra fere et presso pinguis sub vomere terra 204 et cui putre solum,—namque hoc imitamur arando— 205 optima frumentis; non ullo ex aequore cernes 206 plura domum tardis decedere plaustra iuvencis; 207 aut unde iratus silvam devexit arator 208 et nemora evertit multos ignava per annos 209 antiquasque domos avium cum stirpibus imis 210 eruit; illae altum nidis petiere relictis,	Indian from the heights of Rome. 224 Hail! land of Saturn, mighty mother thou 225 Of fruits and heroes; 'tis for thee I dare 226 Unseal the sacred fountains, and essay 227 Themes of old art and glory, as I sing 228 The song of Ascra through the towns of Rome.
2.211	211 at rudis enituit inpulso vomere campus. 212 Nam ieiuna quidem clivosi glarea ruris 213 vix humilis apibus casias roremque ministrat; 214 et tophus scaber et nigris exesa chelydris 215 creta negant alios aeque serpentibus agros 216 dulcem ferre cibum et curvas praebere latebras. 217 Quae tenuem exhalat nebulam fumosque volucris 218 et bibit humorem et, cum volt, ex se ipsa remittit 219 quaeque suo semper viridi se gramine vestit 220 nec scabie et salsa laedit robigine ferrum: 221 illa tibi laetis intexet vitibus ulmos,	229 Now for the native gifts of various soils, 230 What powers hath each, what hue, what natural bent 231 For yielding increase. First your stubborn lands 232 And churlish hill-sides, where are thorny fields 233 Of meagre marl and gravel, these delight 234 In long-lived olive-groves to Pallas dear. 235 Take for a sign the plenteous growth hard by 236 Of oleaster, and the fields strewn wide 237 With woodland berries. But a soil that's rich, 238 In moisture sweet exulting, and the plain 239 That teems with grasses on its fruitful breast, 240 Such as full oft in hollow mountain-dell 241 We view beneath us—from the craggy heights 242 Streams thither flow with fertilizing mud— 243 A plain which southward rising feeds the fern 244 By curved ploughs detested, this one day 245 Shall yield thee store of vines full

	222 illa ferax oleo est, illam experiere colendo 223 et facilem pecori et patientem vomeris unci. 224 Talem dives arat Capua et vicina Vesevo 225 ora iugo et vacuis Clanius non aequus Acerris. 226 Nunc, quo quamque modo possis cognoscere, dicam. 227 Rara sit an supra morem si densa requires— 228 altera frumentis quoniam favet, altera Baccho, 229 densa magis Cereri, rarissima quaeque Lyaeo— 230 ante locum capies oculis alteque iubebis 231 in solido puteum demitti omnemque repones 232 rursus humum et pedibus summas aequabis harenas. 233 Si deerunt, rarum pecorique et vitibus almis 234 aptius uber erit; sin in sua posse negabunt 235 ire loca et scrobibus superabit terra repletis, 236 spissus ager; glaebas cunctantis crassaque terga 237 exspecta et validis terram proscinde iuvencis. 238 Salsa autem tellus et quae perhibetur amara, 239 frugibus infelix—ea nec mansuescit arando 240 nec Baccho genus aut pomis sua nomina servat—	strong to gush 246 In torrents of the wine-god; this shall be 247 Fruitful of grapes and flowing juice like that 248 We pour to heaven from bowls of gold, what time 249 The sleek Etruscan at the altar blows 250 His ivory pipe, and on the curved dish 251 We lay the reeking entrails. If to rear 252 Cattle delight thee rather, steers, or lambs, 253 Or goats that kill the tender plants, then seek 254 Full-fed Tarentum's glades and distant fields, 255 Or such a plain as luckless Mantua lost 256 Whose weedy water feeds the snow-white swan: 257 There nor clear springs nor grass the flocks will fail, 258 And all the day-long browsing of thy herds
2.241	241 tale dabit specimen: tu spisso vimine qualos 242 colaque prelorum fumosis deripe tectis; 243 huc ager ille malus dulcesque a fontibus undae 244 ad plenum calcentur; aqua eluctabitur omnis 245 scilicet, et grandes ibunt per vimina guttae; 246 at sapor indicium faciet manifestus et ora 247 tristia temptantum sensu torquebit amaro. 248 Pinguis item quae sit tellus, hoc denique pacto 249 discimus: haud umquam manibus iactata fatiscit, 250 sed picis in morem ad digitos lentescit habendo.	259 Shall the cool dews of one brief night repair. 260 Land which the burrowing share shows dark and rich, 261 With crumbling soil—for this we counterfeit 262 In ploughing—for corn is goodliest; from no field 263 More wains thou'lt see wend home with plodding steers; 264 Or that from which the husbandman in spleen 265 Has cleared the timber, and o'erthrown the copse 266 That year on year lay idle, and from the roots 267 Uptorn the immemorial haunt of birds; 268 They banished from their nests have sought the skies; 269 But the rude plain beneath the ploughshare's stroke 270 Starts into sudden brightness. For indeed 271 The starved hill-country gravel scarce serves the bees 272 With lowly cassias and with rosemary; 273

	251 Humida maiores herbas alit, ipsaque iusto 252 laetior. Ah nimium ne sit mihi fertilis illa 253 nec se praevalidam primis ostendat aristis! 254 Quae gravis est, ipso tacitam se pondere prodit, 255 quaeque levis. Promptum est oculis praediscere nigram, 256 et quis cui color. At sceleratum exquirere frigus 257 difficile est: piceae tantum taxique nocentes 258 interdum aut hederae pandunt vestigia nigrae. 259 his animadversis terram multo ante memento 260 excoquere et magnos scrobibus concidere montis, 261 ante supinatas aquiloni ostendere glaebas, 262 quam laetum infodias vitis genus. Optima putri 263 arva solo: id venti curant gelidaeque pruinae 264 et labefacta movens robustus iugera fossor. 265 Ac si quos haud ulla viros vigilantia fugit, 266 ante locum similem exquirunt, ubi prima paretur 267 arboribus seges et quo mox digesta feratur, 268 mutatam ignorent subito ne semina matrem. 269 Quin etiam caeli regionem in cortice signant, 270 ut, quo quaeque modo steterit, qua parte calores	Rough tufa and chalk too, by black water-worms 274 Gnawed through and through, proclaim no soils beside 275 So rife with serpent-dainties, or that yield 276 Such winding lairs to lurk in. That again, 277 Which vapoury mist and flitting smoke exhales, 278 Drinks moisture up and casts it forth at will, 279 Which, ever in its own green grass arrayed, 280 Mars not the metal with salt scurf of rust— 281 That shall thine elms with merry vines enwreathe; 282 That teems with olive; that shall thy tilth prove kind 283 To cattle, and patient of the curved share. 284 Such ploughs rich Capua, such the coast that skirts 285 Thy ridge, Vesuvius, and the Clanian flood, 286 Acerrae's desolation and her bane.
2.271	271 Austrinos tulerit, quae terga obverterit axi, 272 restituant: adeo in teneris consuescere multum est. 273 Collibus an plano melius sit ponere vitem, 274 quaere prius. Si pinguis agros metabere campi, 275 densa sere; in denso non segnior ubere Bacchus; 276 sin tumulis adclive solum collisque supinos, 277 indulge ordinibus, nec setius omnis in unguem 278 arboribus positis secto via limite quadret. 279 Ut saepe ingenti bello cum longa cohortis	287 How each to recognize now hear me tell. 288 Dost ask if loose or passing firm it be— 289 Since one for corn hath liking, one for wine, 290 The firmer sort for Ceres, none too loose 291 For thee, Lyaeus?—with scrutinizing eye 292 First choose thy ground, and bid a pit be sunk 293 Deep in the solid earth, then cast the mould 294 All back again, and stamp the surface smooth. 295 If it suffice not, loose will be the land, 296 More meet for cattle and for kindly vines; 297 But if, rebellious, to its proper bounds 298 The soil returns not, but fills all the trench 299 And overtops it, then the glebe is gross; 300 Look for stiff ridges and reluctant clods, 301 And with strong bullocks cleave the fallow

	280 explicuit legio et campo stetit agmen aperto, 281 directaeque acies, ac late fluctuat omnis 282 aere renidenti tellus, necdum horrida miscent 283 proelia, sed dubius mediis Mars errat in armis: 284 omnia sint paribus numeris dimensa viarum; 285 non animum modo uti pascat prospectus inanem, 286 sed quia non aliter viris dabit omnibus aequas 287 terra neque in vacuum poterunt se extendere rami. 288 Forsitan et scrobibus quae sint fastigia quaeras. 289 ausim vel tenui vitem committere sulco. 290 Altior ac penitus terrae defigitur arbos, 291 aesculus in primis, quae quantum vertice ad auras 292 aetherias, tantum radice in Tartara tendit. 293 Ergo non hiemes illam, non flabra neque imbres 294 convellunt; inmota manet, multosque nepotes, 295 multa virum volvens durando saecula vincit. 296 Tum fortis late ramos et bracchia pandens 297 huc illuc, media ipsa ingentem sustinet umbram. 298 Neve tibi ad solem vergant vineta cadentem, 299 Neve inter vitis corylum sere, neve flagella 300 summa pete aut summa defringe ex arbore plantas	crust. 302 Salt ground again, and bitter, as 'tis called— 303 Barren for fruits, by tilth untamable, 304 Nor grape her kind, nor apples their good name 305 Maintaining—will in this wise yield thee proof: 306 Stout osier-baskets from the rafter-smoke, 307 And strainers of the winepress pluck thee down; 308 Hereinto let that evil land, with fresh 309 Spring-water mixed, be trampled to the full; 310 The moisture, mark you, will ooze all away, 311 In big drops issuing through the osier-withes, 312 But plainly will its taste the secret tell, 313 And with a harsh twang ruefully distort 314 The mouths of them that try it. Rich soil again 315 We learn on this wise: tossed from hand to hand 316 Yet cracks it never, but pitch-like, as we hold, 317 Clings to the fingers. A land with moisture rife 318 Breeds lustier herbage, and is more than meet 319 Prolific. Ah I may never such for me 320 O'er-fertile prove, or make too stout a show 321 At the first earing! Heavy land or light 322 The mute self-witness of its weight betrays. 323 A glance will serve to warn thee which is black, 324 Or what the hue of any. But hard it is 325 To track the signs of that pernicious cold: 326 Pines only, noxious yews, and ivies dark 327 At times reveal its traces.
2.301	301 tantus amor terrae—neu ferro laede retunso 302 semina, neve oleae silvestris insere truncos: 303 nam saepe incautis pastoribus excidit ignis, 304 qui furtim pingui primum sub cortice tectus 305 robora conprendit frondesque elapsus in altas 306 ingentem caelo sonitum dedit; inde secutus 307 per ramos victor perque alta cacumina regnat 308 et totum involvit flammis nemus et ruit atram	328 All these rules 329 Regarding, let your land, ay, long before, 330 Scorch to the quick, and into trenches carve 331 The mighty mountains, and their upturned clods 332 Bare to the north wind, ere thou plant therein 333 The vine's prolific kindred. Fields whose soil 334 Is crumbling are the best: winds look to that, 335 And bitter hoar-frosts, and the delver's toil 336 Untiring, as he stirs the loosened glebe. 337 But those, whose vigilance no care escapes, 338 Search for a kindred site, where first to rear 339 A nursery for the trees, and eke whereto 340 Soon to translate them, lest the sudden shock 341 From

	309 ad caelum picea crassus caligine nubem, 310 praesertim si tempestas a vertice silvis 311 incubuit glomeratque ferens incendia ventus. 312 Hoc ubi, non a stirpe valent caesaeque reverti 313 possunt atque ima similes revirescere terra; 314 infelix superat foliis oleaster amaris. 315 Nec tibi tam prudens quisquam persuadeat auctor 316 tellurem Borea rigidam spirante movere. 317 Rura gelu tum claudit hiems nec semine iacto 318 concretam patitur radicem adfigere terrae. 319 Optima vinetis satio, cum vere rubenti 320 candida venit avis longis invisa colubris, 321 prima vel autumni sub frigora, cum rapidus Sol 322 nondum hiemem contingit equis, iam praeterit aestas. 323 Ver adeo frondi nemorum, ver utile silvis; 324 vere tument terrae et genitalia semina poscunt. 325 Tum pater omnipotens fecundis imbribus Aether 326 coniugis in gremium laetae descendit et omnis 327 magnus alit magno commixtus corpore fetus. 328 Avia tum resonant avibus virgulta canoris 329 et Venerem certis repetunt armenta diebus; 330 parturit almus ager Zephyrique tepentibus auris	their new mother the young plants estrange. 342 Nay, even the quarter of the sky they brand 343 Upon the bark, that each may be restored, 344 As erst it stood, here bore the southern heats, 345 Here turned its shoulder to the northern pole; 346 So strong is custom formed in early years. 347 Whether on hill or plain 'tis best to plant 348 Your vineyard first inquire. If on some plain 349 You measure out rich acres, then plant thick; 350 Thick planting makes no niggard of the vine; 351 But if on rising mound or sloping bill, 352 Then let the rows have room, so none the less 353 Each line you draw, when all the trees are set, 354 May tally to perfection. Even as oft 355 In mighty war, whenas the legion's length 356 Deploys its cohorts, and the column stands 357 In open plain, the ranks of battle set, 358 And far and near with rippling sheen of arms 359 The wide earth flickers, nor yet in grisly strife 360 Foe grapples foe, but dubious 'twixt the hosts 361 The war-god wavers; so let all be ranged 362 In equal rows symmetric, not alone 363 To feed an idle fancy with the view, 364 But since not otherwise will earth afford 365 Vigour to all alike, nor yet the boughs 366 Have power to stretch them into open space.
2.331	331 laxant arva sinus; superat tener omnibus humor; 332 inque novos soles audent se germina tuto 333 credere, nec metuit surgentis pampinus austros 334 aut actum caelo magnis aquilonibus imbrem, 335 sed trudit gemmas et frondes explicat omnis. 336 Non alios prima crescentis origine mundi 337 inluxisse dies aliumve habuisse tenorem

	338 crediderim: ver illud erat, ver magnus agebat 339 orbis et hibernis parcebant flatibus Euri, 340 cum primae lucem pecudes hausere virumque 341 terrea progenies duris caput extulit arvis, 342 inmissaeque ferae silvis et sidera caelo. 343 Nec res hunc tenerae possent perferre laborem, 344 si non tanta quies iret frigusque caloremque 345 inter, et exciperet caeli indulgentia terras. 346 Quod superest, quaecumque premes virgulta per agros, 347 sparge fimo pingui et multa memor occule terra, 348 aut lapidem bibulum aut squalentis infode conchas; 349 inter enim labentur aquae tenuisque subibit 350 halitus atque animos tollent sata; iamque reperti, 351 qui saxo super atque ingentis pondere testae 352 urgerent; hoc effusos munimen ad imbris, 353 hoc, ubi hiulca siti findit canis aestifer arva. 354 Seminibus positis superest diducere terram 355 saepius ad capita et duros iactare bidentis, 356 aut presso exercere solum sub vomere et ipsa 357 flectere luctantis inter vineta iuvencos; 358 tum levis calamos et rasae hastilia virgae 359 fraxineasque aptare sudes furcasque valentis, 360 viribus eniti quarum et contemnere ventos
2.361	361 adsuescant summasque sequi tabulata per ulmos. 362 Ac dum prima novis adolescit frondibus aetas, 363 parcendum teneris, et dum se laetus ad auras 364 palmes agit laxis per purum inmissus habenis, 365 ipsa acie nondum falcis temptanda, sed uncis 366 carpendae manibus frondes interque legendae.	367 Shouldst haply of the furrow's depth inquire, 368 Even to a shallow trench I dare commit 369 The vine; but deeper in the ground is fixed 370 The tree that props it, aesculus in chief, 371 Which howso far its summit soars toward heaven, 372 So deep strikes root into the vaults of hell. 373 It therefore neither storms, nor blasts, nor showers 374 Wrench from its bed; unshaken it abides, 375 Sees many a generation, many an age 376 Of men roll onward,

	367 Inde ubi iam validis amplexae stirpibus ulmos 368 exierint, tum stringe comas, tum bracchia tonde— 369 ante reformidant ferrum—tum denique dura 370 exerce imperia et ramos conpesce fluentis. 371 Texendae saepes etiam et pecus omne tenendum, 372 praecipue dum frons tenera inprudensque laborum; 373 cui super indignas hiemes solemque potentem 374 silvestres uri adsidue capreaeque sequaces 375 inludunt, pascuntur oves avidaeque iuvencae. 376 Frigora nec tantum cana concreta pruina 377 aut gravis incumbens scopulis arentibus aestas, 378 quantum illi nocuere greges durique venenum 379 dentis et admorso signata in stirpe cicatrix. 380 Non aliam ob culpam Baccho caper omnibus aris 381 caeditur et veteres ineunt proscaenia ludi 382 praemiaque ingeniis pagos et compita circum 383 thesidae posuere atque inter pocula laeti 384 mollibus in pratis unctos saluere per utres. 385 Nec non Ausonii, Troia gens missa, coloni 386 versibus incomptis ludunt risuque soluto 387 oraque corticibus sumunt horrenda cavatis 388 et te, Bacche, vocant per carmina laeta tibique 389 oscilla ex alta suspendunt mollia pinu. 390 Hinc omnis largo pubescit vinea fetu,	and survives them all, 377 Stretching its titan arms and branches far, 378 Sole central pillar of a world of shade. 379 Nor toward the sunset let thy vineyards slope, 380 Nor midst the vines plant hazel; neither take 381 The topmost shoots for cuttings, nor from the top 382 Of the supporting tree your suckers tear; 383 So deep their love of earth; nor wound the plants 384 With blunted blade; nor truncheons intersperse 385 Of the wild olive: for oft from careless swains 386 A spark hath fallen, that, 'neath the unctuous rind 387 Hid thief-like first, now grips the tough tree-bole, 388 And mounting to the leaves on high, sends forth 389 A roar to heaven, then coursing through the boughs 390 And airy summits reigns victoriously, 391 Wraps all the grove in robes of fire, and gross 392 With pitch-black vapour heaves the murky reek 393 Skyward, but chiefly if a storm has swooped 394 Down on the forest, and a driving wind 395 Rolls up the conflagration. When 'tis so, 396 Their root-force fails them, nor, when lopped away, 397 Can they recover, and from the earth beneath 398 Spring to like verdure; thus alone survives 399 The bare wild olive with its bitter leaves.
2.391	391 conplentur vallesque cavae saltusque profundi, 392 et quocumque deus circum caput egit honestum. 393 Ergo rite suum Baccho dicemus honorem 394 carminibus patriis lancesque et liba feremus 395 et ductus cornu stabit sacer hircus ad aram	400 Let none persuade thee, howso weighty-wise, 401 To stir the soil when stiff with Boreas' breath. 402 Then ice-bound winter locks the fields, nor lets 403 The young plant fix its frozen root to earth. 404 Best sow your vineyards when in blushing Spring 405 Comes the white bird long-bodied snakes abhor, 406 Or on the eve of autumn's earliest frost, 407 Ere the swift sun-steeds touch

	396 pinguiaque in veribus torrebimus exta colurnis. 397 Est etiam ille labor curandis vitibus alter, 398 cui numquam exhausti satis est: namque omne quot annis 399 terque quaterque solum scindendum glebaque versis 400 aeternum frangenda bidentibus, omne levandum 401 fronde nemus. Redit agricolis labor actus in orbem 402 atque in se sua per vestigia volvitur annus. 403 Ac iam olim, seras posuit cum vinea frondes, 404 frigidus et silvis aquilo decussit honorem, 405 iam tum acer curas venientem extendit in annum 406 rusticus et curvo Saturni dente relictam 407 persequitur vitem attondens fingitque putando. 408 Primus humum fodito, primus devecta cremato 409 sarmenta et vallos primus sub tecta referto; 410 postremus metito. Bis vitibus ingruit umbra, 411 bis segetem densis obducunt sentibus herbae; 412 durus uterque labor: laudato ingentia rura, 413 exiguum colito. Nec non etiam aspera rusci 414 vimina per silvam et ripis fluvialis arundo 415 caeditur, incultique exercet cura salicti. 416 Iam vinctae vites, iam falcem arbusta reponunt, 417 iam canit effectos extremus vinitor antes: 418 sollicitanda tamen tellus pulvisque movendus 419 et iam maturis metuendus Iuppiter uvis. 420 Contra non ulla est oleis cultura; neque illae	the wintry Signs, 408 While summer is departing. Spring it is 409 Blesses the fruit-plantation, Spring the groves; 410 In Spring earth swells and claims the fruitful seed. 411 Then Aether, sire omnipotent, leaps down 412 With quickening showers to his glad wife's embrace, 413 And, might with might commingling, rears to life 414 All germs that teem within her; then resound 415 With songs of birds the greenwood-wildernesses, 416 And in due time the herds their loves renew; 417 Then the boon earth yields increase, and the fields 418 Unlock their bosoms to the warm west winds; 419 Soft moisture spreads o'er all things, and the blades 420 Face the new suns, and safely trust them now; 421 The vine-shoot, fearless of the rising south, 422 Or mighty north winds driving rain from heaven, 423 Bursts into bud, and every leaf unfolds. 424 Even so, methinks, when Earth to being sprang, 425 Dawned the first days, and such the course they held; 426 'Twas Spring-tide then, ay, Spring, the mighty world 427 Was keeping: Eurus spared his wintry blasts, 428 When first the flocks drank sunlight, and a race 429 Of men like iron from the hard glebe arose, 430 And wild beasts thronged the woods, and stars the heaven. 431 Nor could frail creatures bear this heavy strain, 432 Did not so large a respite interpose 433 'Twixt frost and heat, and heaven's relenting arms 434 Yield earth a welcome.
2.421	421 procurvam exspectant falcem rastrosque tenacis, 422 cum semel haeserunt arvis aurasque tulerunt; 423 ipsa satis tellus, cum dente recluditur unco, 424 sufficit humorem et gravidas, cum vomere, fruges.	435 For the rest, whate'er 436 The sets thou plantest in thy fields, thereon 437 Strew refuse rich, and with abundant earth 438 Take heed to hide them, and dig in withal 439 Rough shells or porous stone, for therebetween 440 Will water trickle and fine vapour creep, 441 And so the plants their drooping spirits

	425 Hoc pinguem et placitam Paci nutritor olivam. 426 Poma quoque, ut primum truncos sensere valentis 427 et viris habuere suas, ad sidera raptim 428 vi propria nituntur opisque haud indiga nostrae. 429 Nec minus interea fetu nemus omne gravescit 430 sanguineisque inculta rubent aviaria bacis. 431 Tondentur cytisi, taedas silva alta ministrat, 432 pascunturque ignes nocturni et lumina fundunt. 433 Et dubitant homines serere atque inpendere curam 434 quid maiora sequar?—salices humilesque genestae 435 aut illae pecori frondem aut pastoribus umbram 436 Sufficiunt saepemque satis et pabula melli— 437 et iuvat undantem buxo spectare Cytorum 438 naryciaeque picis lucos, iuvat arva videre 439 non rastris, hominum non ulli obnoxia curae. 440 Ipsae Caucasio steriles in vertice silvae, 441 quas animosi Euri adsidue franguntque feruntque, 442 dant alios aliae fetus, dant utile lignum 443 navigiis pinus, domibus cedrumque cupressosque. 444 Hinc radios trivere rotis, hinc tympana plaustris 445 agricolae et pandas ratibus posuere carinas, 446 viminibus salices fecundae, frondibus ulmi, 447 at myrtus validis hastilibus et bona bello 448 cornus, Ituraeos taxi torquentur in arcus. 449 Nec tiliae leves aut torno rasile buxum 450 non formam accipiunt ferroque cavantur acuto.	raise. 442 Aye, and there have been, who with weight of stone 443 Or heavy potsherd press them from above; 444 This serves for shield in pelting showers, and this 445 When the hot dog-star chaps the fields with drought. 446 The slips once planted, yet remains to cleave 447 The earth about their roots persistently, 448 And toss the cumbrous hoes, or task the soil 449 With burrowing plough-share, and ply up and down 450 Your labouring bullocks through the vineyard's midst, 451 Then too smooth reeds and shafts of whittled wand, 452 And ashen poles and sturdy forks to shape, 453 Whereby supported they may learn to mount, 454 Laugh at the gales, and through the elm-tops win 455 From story up to story.
2.451	451 Nec non et torrentem undam levis innatat alnus, 452 missa Pado; nec non et apes examina condunt 453 corticibusque cavis vitiosaeque ilicis alvo.	456 Now while yet 457 The leaves are in their first fresh infant growth, 458 Forbear their frailty, and while yet the bough 459 Shoots joyfully toward heaven, with loosened rein 460 Launched on the void, assail it not as

	454 Quid memorandum aeque Baccheia dona tulerunt 455 Bacchus et ad culpam causas dedit; ille furentis 456 centauros leto domuit, Rhoetumque Pholumque 457 et magno Hylaeum Lapithis cratere minantem. 458 O fortunatos nimium, sua si bona norint, 459 agricolas! quibus ipsa procul discordibus armis 460 fundit humo facilem victum iustissima tellus. 461 Si non ingentem foribus domus alta superbis 462 mane salutantum totis vomit aedibus undam, 463 nec varios inhiant pulchra testudine postis 464 inlusasque auro vestes Ephyreiaque aera, 465 alba neque Assyrio fucatur lana veneno 466 nec casia liquidi corrumpitur usus olivi: 467 at secura quies et nescia fallere vita, 468 dives opum variarum, at latis otia fundis— 469 speluncae vivique lacus et frigida Tempe 470 mugitusque boum mollesque sub arbore somni— 471 non absunt; illic saltus ac lustra ferarum 472 et patiens operum exiguoque adsueta iuventus, 473 sacra deum sanctique patres; extrema per illos 474 iustitia excedens terris vestigia fecit. 475 Me vero primum dulces ante omnia Musae, 476 quarum sacra fero ingenti percussus amore, 477 accipiant caelique vias et sidera monstrent, 478 defectus solis varios lunaeque labores; 479 unde tremor terris, qua vi maria alta tumescant 480 obicibus ruptis rursusque in se ipsa residant,	yet 461 With keen-edged sickle, but let the leaves alone 462 Be culled with clip of fingers here and there. 463 But when they clasp the elms with sturdy trunks 464 Erect, then strip the leaves off, prune the boughs; 465 Sooner they shrink from steel, but then put forth 466 The arm of power, and stem the branchy tide. 467 Hedges too must be woven and all beasts 468 Barred entrance, chiefly while the leaf is young 469 And witless of disaster; for therewith, 470 Beside harsh winters and o'erpowering sun, 471 Wild buffaloes and pestering goats for ay 472 Besport them, sheep and heifers glut their greed. 473 Nor cold by hoar-frost curdled, nor the prone 474 Dead weight of summer upon the parched crags, 475 So scathe it, as the flocks with venom-bite 476 Of their hard tooth, whose gnawing scars the stem. 477 For no offence but this to Bacchus bleeds 478 The goat at every altar, and old plays 479 Upon the stage find entrance; therefore too 480 The sons of Theseus through the country-side— 481 Hamlet and crossway—set the prize of wit, 482 And on the smooth sward over oiled skins 483 Dance in their tipsy frolic. Furthermore 484 The Ausonian swains, a race from Troy derived, 485 Make merry with rough rhymes and boisterous mirth, 486 Grim masks of hollowed bark assume, invoke 487 Thee with glad hymns, O Bacchus, and to thee 488 Hang puppet-faces on tall pines to swing. 489 Hence every vineyard teems with mellowing fruit, 490 Till hollow vale o'erflows, and gorge profound, 491 Where'er the god hath turned his comely head. 492 Therefore to Bacchus duly will we sing 493 Meet honour with ancestral hymns, and cates 494 And dishes bear him; and the doomed goat 495 Led by the horn shall at the altar stand, 496 Whose entrails rich on hazel-spits we'll roast.
2.481	481 quid tantum Oceano properent se tinguere soles 482 hiberni, vel quae tardis mora noctibus obstet.	497 This further task again, to dress the vine, 498 Hath needs beyond exhausting; the whole soil 499 Thrice, four times, yearly must be cleft, the sod

	483 Sin, has ne possim naturae accedere partis, 484 frigidus obstiterit circum praecordia sanguis: 485 rura mihi et rigui placeant in vallibus amnes, 486 flumina amem silvasque inglorius. O ubi campi 487 Spercheosque et virginibus bacchata Lacaenis 488 Taygeta! O, qui me gelidis convallibus Haemi 489 sistat et ingenti ramorum protegat umbra! 490 Felix, qui potuit rerum cognoscere causas, 491 atque metus omnis et inexorabile fatum 492 subiecit pedibus strepitumque Acherontis avari. 493 Fortunatus et ille, deos qui novit agrestis, 494 panaque Silvanumque senem Nymphasque sorores: 495 illum non populi fasces, non purpura regum 496 flexit et infidos agitans discordia fratres 497 aut coniurato descendens Dacus ab Histro, 498 non res Romanae perituraque regna; neque ille 499 aut doluit miserans inopem aut invidit habenti 500 quos rami fructus, quos ipsa volentia rura 501 sponte tulere sua, carpsit; nec ferrea iura 502 insanumque forum aut populi tabularia vidit. 503 sollicitant alii remis freta caeca ruuntque 504 in ferrum, penetrant aulas et limina regum; 505 hic petit excidiis urbem miserosque Penatis, 506 ut gemma bibat et Sarrano dormiat ostro; 507 condit opes alius defossoque incubat auro; 508 hic stupet attonitus rostris; hunc plausus hiantem 509 per cuneos—geminatus enim plebisque patrumque— 510 corripuit; gaudent perfusi sanguine fratrum,	500 With hoes reversed be crushed continually, 501 The whole plantation lightened of its leaves. 502 Round on the labourer spins the wheel of toil, 503 As on its own track rolls the circling year. 504 Soon as the vine her lingering leaves hath shed, 505 And the chill north wind from the forests shook 506 Their coronal, even then the careful swain 507 Looks keenly forward to the coming year, 508 With Saturn's curved fang pursues and prunes 509 The vine forlorn, and lops it into shape. 510 Be first to dig the ground up, first to clear 511 And burn the refuse-branches, first to house 512 Again your vine-poles, last to gather fruit. 513 Twice doth the thickening shade beset the vine, 514 Twice weeds with stifling briers o'ergrow the crop; 515 And each a toilsome labour. Do thou praise 516 Broad acres, farm but few. Rough twigs beside 517 Of butcher's broom among the woods are cut, 518 And reeds upon the river-banks, and still 519 The undressed willow claims thy fostering care. 520 So now the vines are fettered, now the trees 521 Let go the sickle, and the last dresser now 522 Sings of his finished rows; but still the ground 523 Must vexed be, the dust be stirred, and heaven 524 Still set thee trembling for the ripened grapes.
2.511	511 exsilioque domos et dulcia limina mutant	525 Not so with olives; small husbandry need they, 526 Nor look for sickle

	512 atque alio patriam quaerunt sub sole iacentem. 513 Agricola incurvo terram dimovit aratro: 514 hinc anni labor, hinc patriam parvosque nepotes 515 sustinet, hinc armenta boum meritosque iuvencos. 516 Nec requies, quin aut pomis exuberet annus 517 aut fetu pecorum aut cerealis mergite culmi, 518 proventuque oneret sulcos atque horrea vincat. 519 Venit hiems: teritur Sicyonia baca trapetis, 520 glande sues laeti redeunt, dant arbuta silvae; 521 et varios ponit fetus autumnus et alte 522 mitis in apricis coquitur vindemia saxis. 523 Interea dulces pendent circum oscula nati, 524 casta pudicitiam servat domus, ubera vaccae 525 lactea demittunt pinguesque in gramine laeto 526 inter se adversis luctantur cornibus haedi. 527 Ipse dies agitat festos fususque per herbam, 528 ignis ubi in medio et socii cratera coronant, 529 te libans, Lenaee, vocat pecorisque magistris 530 velocis iaculi certamina ponit in ulmo, 531 corporaque agresti nudant praedura palaestrae. 532 Hanc olim veteres vitam coluere Sabini, 533 hanc Remus et frater, sic fortis Etruria crevit 534 scilicet et rerum facta est pulcherrima Roma, 535 septemque una sibi muro circumdedit arces. 536 Ante etiam sceptrum Dictaei regis et ante 537 inpia quam caesis gens est epulata iuvencis, 538 aureus hanc vitam in terris Saturnus agebat; 539 necdum etiam audierant inflari classica, necdum 540 inpositos duris crepitare incudibus enses.	bowed or biting rake, 527 When once they have gripped the soil, and borne the breeze. 528 Earth of herself, with hooked fang laid bare, 529 Yields moisture for the plants, and heavy fruit, 530 The ploughshare aiding; therewithal thou'lt rear 531 The olive's fatness well-beloved of Peace. 532 Apples, moreover, soon as first they feel 533 Their stems wax lusty, and have found their strength, 534 To heaven climb swiftly, self-impelled, nor crave 535 Our succour. All the grove meanwhile no less 536 With fruit is swelling, and the wild haunts of birds 537 Blush with their blood-red berries. Cytisus 538 Is good to browse on, the tall forest yields 539 Pine-torches, and the nightly fires are fed 540 And shoot forth radiance. And shall men be loath 541 To plant, nor lavish of their pains? Why trace 542 Things mightier? Willows even and lowly brooms 543 To cattle their green leaves, to shepherds shade, 544 Fences for crops, and food for honey yield. 545 And blithe it is Cytorus to behold 546 Waving with box, Narycian groves of pitch; 547 Oh! blithe the sight of fields beholden not 548 To rake or man's endeavour! the barren woods 549 That crown the scalp of Caucasus, even these, 550 Which furious blasts for ever rive and rend, 551 Yield various wealth, pine-logs that serve for ships, 552 Cedar and cypress for the homes of men; 553 Hence, too, the farmers shave their wheel-spokes, hence 554 Drums for their wains, and curved boat-keels fit; 555 Willows bear twigs enow, the elm-tree leaves, 556 Myrtle stout spear-shafts, war-tried cornel too; 557 Yews into Ituraean bows are bent: 558 Nor do smooth lindens or lathe-polished box 559 Shrink from man's shaping and keen-furrowing steel; 560 Light alder floats upon the boiling flood 561 Sped down the Padus, and bees house their swarms 562 In rotten holm-oak's hollow bark and bole. 563 What of like praise can Bacchus' gifts afford? 564 Nay, Bacchus even to crime hath prompted, he 565 The wine-infuriate Centaurs quelled with death, 566 Rhoetus and Pholus, and with mighty bowl 567 Hylaeus threatening high the Lapithae.

2.541	541 Sed nos inmensum spatiis confecimus aequor, 542 et iam tempus equum fumantia solvere colla.	667 But lo! a boundless space we have travelled o'er; 668 'Tis time our steaming horses to unyoke.
3.1	1 Te quoque, magna Pales, et te memorande canemus 2 pastor ab Amphryso, vos, silvae amnesque Lycaei. 3 Cetera, quae vacuas tenuissent carmine mentes, 4 omnia iam volgata: quis aut Eurysthea durum 5 aut inlaudati nescit Busiridis aras? 6 Cui non dictus Hylas puer et Latonia Delos 7 Hippodameque umeroque Pelops insignis eburno, 8 acer equis? Temptanda via est, qua me quoque possim 9 tollere humo victorque virum volitare per ora. 10 Primus ego in patriam mecum, modo vita supersit, 11 Aonio rediens deducam vertice Musas; 12 primus Idumaeas referam tibi, Mantua, palmas, 13 et viridi in campo templum de marmore ponam 14 propter aquam. Tardis ingens ubi flexibus errat 15 Mincius et tenera praetexit arundine ripas. 16 In medio mihi Caesar erit templumque tenebit: 17 illi victor ego et Tyrio conspectus in ostro 18 centum quadriiugos agitabo ad flumina currus. 19 Cuncta mihi Alpheum linquens lucosque Molorchi 20 cursibus et crudo decernet Graecia caestu. 21 Ipse caput tonsae foliis ornatus olivae 22 dona feram. Iam nunc sollemnis ducere pompas 23 ad delubra iuvat caesosque videre iuvencos, 24 vel scaena ut versis discedat frontibus utque 25 purpurea intexti tollant aulaea Britanni. 26 In foribus pugnam ex auro solidoque elephanto 27 Gangaridum faciam victorisque arma Quirini, 28 atque hic undantem bello	1 Thee too, great Pales, will I hymn, and thee, 2 Amphrysian shepherd, worthy to be sung, 3 You, woods and waves Lycaean. All themes beside, 4 Which else had charmed the vacant mind with song, 5 Are now waxed common. Of harsh Eurystheus who 6 The story knows not, or that praiseless king 7 Busiris, and his altars? or by whom 8 Hath not the tale been told of Hylas young, 9 Latonian Delos and Hippodame, 10 And Pelops for his ivory shoulder famed, 11 Keen charioteer? Needs must a path be tried, 12 By which I too may lift me from the dust, 13 And float triumphant through the mouths of men. 14 Yea, I shall be the first, so life endure, 15 To lead the Muses with me, as I pass 16 To mine own country from the Aonian height; 17 I, Mantua, first will bring thee back the palms 18 Of Idumaea, and raise a marble shrine 19 On thy green plain fast by the water-side, 20 Where Mincius winds more vast in lazy coils, 21 And rims his margent with the tender reed. 22 Amid my shrine shall Caesar's godhead dwell. 23 To him will I, as victor, bravely dight 24 In Tyrian purple, drive along the bank 25 A hundred four-horse cars. All Greece for me, 26 Leaving Alpheus and Molorchus' grove, 27 On foot shall strive, or with the raw-hide glove; 28 Whilst I, my head with stripped green olive crowned, 29 Will offer gifts. Even 'tis present joy 30 To lead the high processions to the fane, magnumque fluentem 29 Nilum ac navali surgentis aere columnas. 30 Addam urbes Asiae domitas pulsumque Niphaten

3.31	31 fidentemque fuga Parthum versisque sagittis, 32 et duo rapta manu diverso ex hoste tropaea 33 bisque triumphatas utroque ab litore gentes. 34 Stabunt et Parii lapides, spirantia signa, 35 Assaraci proles demissaeque ab Iove gentis 36 nomina, Trosque parens et Troiae Cynthius auctor. 37 Invidia infelix Furias amnemque severum 38 Cocyti metuet tortosque Ixionis anguis 39 immanemque rotam et non exsuperabile saxum. 40 Interea Dryadum silvas saltusque sequamur 41 intactos, tua, Maecenas, haud mollia iussa. 42 Te sine nil altum mens incohat; en age segnis 43 rumpe moras; vocat ingenti clamore Cithaeron 44 Taygetique canes domitrixque Epidaurus equorum 45 et vox adsensu nemorum ingeminata remugit. 46 Mox tamen ardentis accingar dicere pugnas 47 Caesaris et nomen fama tot ferre per annos, 48 Tithoni prima quot abest ab origine Caesar. 49 Seu quis Olympiacae miratus praemia palmae 50 pascit equos seu quis fortis ad aratra iuvencos, 51 corpora praecipue matrum legat. Optuma torvae 52 forma bovis, cui turpe caput, cui plurima cervix, 53 et crurum tenus a mento palearia pendent; 54 tum longo nullus lateri modus; omnia magna, 55 pes etiam; et camuris hirtae sub cornibus aures. 56 Nec mihi displiceat maculis insignis et albo, 57 aut iuga detractans interdumque	31 And view the victims felled; or how the scene 32 Sunders with shifted face, and Britain's sons 33 Inwoven thereon with those proud curtains rise. 34 Of gold and massive ivory on the doors 35 I'll trace the battle of the Gangarides, 36 And our Quirinus' conquering arms, and there 37 Surging with war, and hugely flowing, the Nile, 38 And columns heaped on high with naval brass. 39 And Asia's vanquished cities I will add, 40 And quelled Niphates, and the Parthian foe, 41 Who trusts in flight and backward-volleying darts, 42 And trophies torn with twice triumphant hand 43 From empires twain on ocean's either shore. 44 And breathing forms of Parian marble there 45 Shall stand, the offspring of Assaracus, 46 And great names of the Jove-descended folk, 47 And father Tros, and Troy's first founder, lord 48 Of Cynthus. And accursed Envy there 49 Shall dread the Furies, and thy ruthless flood, 50 Cocytus, and Ixion's twisted snakes, 51 And that vast wheel and ever-baffling stone. 52 Meanwhile the Dryad-haunted woods and lawns 53 Unsullied seek we; 'tis thy hard behest, 54 Maecenas. Without thee no lofty task 55 My mind essays. Up! break the sluggish bonds 56 Of tarriance; with loud din Cithaeron calls, 57 Steed-taming Epidaurus, and thy hounds, 58 Taygete; and hark! the assenting groves 59 With peal on peal reverberate the roar. 60 Yet must I gird me to rehearse ere long

	aspera cornu 58 et faciem tauro propior, quaeque ardua tota, 59 et gradiens ima verrit vestigia cauda, 60 Aetas Lucinam iustosque pati hymenaeos
3.61	61 desinit ante decem, post quattuor incipit annos; 62 cetera nec feturae habilis nec fortis aratris. 63 Interea, superat gregibus dum laeta iuventas, 64 solve mares; mitte in Venerem pecuaria primus, 65 atque aliam ex alia generando suffice prolem. 66 Optuma quaeque dies miseris mortalibus aevi 67 prima fugit; subeunt morbi tristisque senectus 68 et labor, et durae rapit inclementia mortis. 69 Semper erunt, quarum mutari corpora malis: 70 semper enim refice ac, ne post amissa requiras, 71 ante veni et subolem armento sortire quotannis. 72 Nec non et pecori est idem dilectus equino. 73 Tu modo, quos in spem statues submittere gentis, 74 praecipuum iam inde a teneris impende laborem. 75 Continuo pecoris generosi pullus in arvis 76 altius ingreditur et mollia crura reponit; 77 primus et ire viam et fluvios temptare minaces 78 audet et ignoto sese committere ponti 79 nec vanos horret strepitus. Illi ardua cervix 80 argutumque caput, brevis alvus obesaque terga, 81 luxuriatque toris animosum pectus. Honesti 82 spadices glaucique, color deterrimus albis 83 et gilvo. Tum, si qua sonum procul arma dedere 84 stare loco nescit, micat auribus et tremit artus 85 collectumque premens volvit sub naribus ignem. 86 Densa iuba, et dextro iactata	61 The fiery fights of Caesar, speed his name 62 Through ages, countless as to Caesar's self 63 From the first birth-dawn of Tithonus old. 64 If eager for the prized Olympian palm 65 One breed the horse, or bullock strong to plough, 66 Be his prime care a shapely dam to choose. 67 Of kine grim-faced is goodliest, with coarse head 68 And burly neck, whose hanging dewlaps reach 69 From chin to knee; of boundless length her flank; 70 Large every way she is, large-footed even, 71 With incurved horns and shaggy ears beneath. 72 Nor let mislike me one with spots of white 73 Conspicuous, or that spurns the yoke, whose horn 74 At times hath vice in't: liker bull-faced she, 75 And tall-limbed wholly, and with tip of tail 76 Brushing her footsteps as she walks along. 77 The age for Hymen's rites, Lucina's pangs, 78 Ere ten years ended, after four begins; 79 Their residue of days nor apt to teem, 80 Nor strong for ploughing. Meantime, while youth's delight 81 Survives within them, loose the males: be first 82 To speed thy herds of cattle to their loves, 83 Breed stock with stock, and keep the race supplied. 84 Ah! life's best hours are ever first to fly 85 From hapless mortals; in their place succeed 86 Disease and dolorous eld; till travail sore 87 And death unpitying sweep them from the scene. 88 Still will be some, whose form thou fain wouldst change; 89 Renew them still; with yearly choice of young 90 Preventing losses, lest too late thou rue.

	recumbit in armo; 87 at duplex agitur per lumbos spina, cavatque 88 tellurem et solido graviter sonat ungula cornu. 89 Talis Amyclaei domitus Pollucis habenis 90 Cyllarus et, quorum Grai meminere poetae, 3.91	91 Martis equi biiuges et magni currus Achilli. 92 Talis et ipse iubam cervice effundit equina 93 coniugis adventu pernix Saturnus et altum 94 Pelion hinnitu fugiens implevit acuto. 95 Hunc quoque, ubi aut morbo gravis aut iam segnior annis 96 deficit, abde domo nec turpi ignosce senectae. 97 frigidus in Venerem senior, frustraque laborem 98 ingratum trahit, et, si quando ad proelia ventum est, 99 ut quondam in stipulis magnus sine viribus ignis, 100 incassum furit. Ergo animos aevumque notabis 101 praecipue; hinc alias artis prolemque parentum 102 et quis cuique dolor victo, quae gloria palmae. 103 Nonne vides, cum praecipiti certamine campum 104 corripuere ruuntque effusi carcere currus, 105 cum spes arrectae iuvenum, exsultantiaque haurit 106 corda pavor pulsans? Illi instant verbere torto 107 et proni dant lora, volat vi fervidus axis; 108 iamque humiles, iamque elati sublime videntur 109 aera per vacuum ferri atque adsurgere in auras; 110 nec mora nec requies; at fulvae nimbus harenae 111 tollitur, umescunt spumis flatuque sequentum: 112 tantus amor laudum, tantae est victoria curae. 113 Primus Erichthonius currus et quattuor ausus 114 iungere equos rapidusque rotis insistere victor 115 Frena Pelethronii Lapithae	91 Nor steeds crave less selection; but on those 92 Thou think'st to rear, the promise of their line, 93 From earliest youth thy chiefest pains bestow. 94 See from the first yon high-bred colt afield, 95 His lofty step, his limbs' elastic tread: 96 Dauntless he leads the herd, still first to try 97 The threatening flood, or brave the unknown bridge, 98 By no vain noise affrighted; lofty-necked, 99 With clean-cut head, short belly, and stout back; 100 His sprightly breast exuberant with brawn. 101 Chestnut and grey are good; the worst-hued white 102 And sorrel. Then lo! if arms are clashed afar, 103 Bide still he cannot: ears stiffen and limbs quake; 104 His nostrils snort and roll out wreaths of fire. 105 Dense is his mane, that when uplifted falls 106 On his right shoulder; betwixt either loin 107 The spine runs double; his earth-dinting hoof 108 Rings with the ponderous beat of solid horn. 109 Even such a horse was Cyllarus, reined and tamed 110 By Pollux of Amyclae; such the pair 111 In Grecian song renowned, those steeds of Mars, 112 And famed Achilles' team: in such-like form 113 Great Saturn's self with mane flung loose on neck 114 Sped at his wife's approach, and flying filled 115 The heights of Pelion with his piercing neigh. 116 Even him, when sore disease or sluggish eld 117 Now saps his strength, pen fast at home, and spare 118 His not inglorious age. A horse grown old 119 Slow kindling unto love in vain prolongs 120 The fruitless task, and, to the encounter come, 121 As fire in stubble blusters without strength, 122 He rages idly. Therefore mark thou first 123 Their age and mettle, other points anon, 124 As breed and lineage, or what pain was theirs 125 To lose the race, what pride the palm to win. 126 Seest how the chariots in mad rivalry 127 Poured from the barrier grip the course and go, 128 When youthful hope is highest, and

	gyrosque dedere 116 impositi dorso atque equitem docuere sub armis 117 insultare solo et gressus glomerare superbos. 118 Aequus uterque labor, aeque iuvenemque magistri 119 exquirunt calidumque animis et cursibus acrem, 120 quamvis saepe fuga versos ille egerit hostis	every heart 129 Drained with each wild pulsation? How they ply 130 The circling lash, and reaching forward let 131 The reins hang free! Swift spins the glowing wheel; 132 And now they stoop, and now erect in air 133 Seem borne through space and towering to the sky: 134 No stop, no stay; the dun sand whirls aloft; 135 They reek with foam-flakes and pursuing breath; 136 So sweet is fame, so prized the victor's palm. 137 'Twas Ericthonius first took heart to yoke 138 Four horses to his car, and rode above 139 The whirling wheels to victory: but the ring 140 And bridle-reins, mounted on horses' backs, 141 The Pelethronian Lapithae bequeathed, 142 And taught the knight in arms to spurn the ground, 143 And arch the upgathered footsteps of his pride. 144 Each task alike is arduous, and for each 145 A horse young, fiery, swift of foot, they seek; 146 How oft so-e'er yon rival may have chased 147 The flying foe, or boast his native plain 148 Epirus, or Mycenae's stubborn hold, 149 And trace his lineage back to Neptune's birth.
3.121	121 et patriam Epirum referat fortisque Mycenas 122 Neptunique ipsa deducat origine gentem. 123 His animadversis instant sub tempus et omnis 124 impendunt curas denso distendere pingui, 125 quem legere ducem et pecori dixere maritum; 126 florentisque secant herbas fluviosque ministrant 127 farraque, ne blando nequeat superesse labori 128 invalidique patrum referant ieiunia nati. 129 Ipsa autem macie tenuant armenta volentes, 130 atque, ubi concubitus primos iam nota voluptas 131 sollicitat, frondesque negant et fontibus arcent. 132 Saepe etiam cursu quatiunt et sole fatigant, 133 cum graviter tunsis gemit area frugibus et cum 134 surgentem ad Zephyrum paleae iactantur inanes. 135 Hoc faciunt, nimio ne luxu obtunsior usus	150 These points regarded, as the time draws nigh, 151 With instant zeal they lavish all their care 152 To plump with solid fat the chosen chief 153 And designated husband of the herd: 154 And flowery herbs they cut, and serve him well 155 With corn and running water, that his strength 156 Not fail him for that labour of delight, 157 Nor puny colts betray the feeble sire. 158 The herd itself of purpose they reduce 159 To leanness, and when love's sweet longing first 160 Provokes them, they forbid the leafy food, 161 And pen them from the springs, and oft beside 162 With running shake, and tire them in the sun, 163 What time the threshing-floor groans heavily 164 With pounding of the corn-ears, and light chaff 165 Is whirled on high to catch the rising west. 166 This do they that the soil's prolific powers 167 May not be dulled by surfeiting, nor choke 168 The sluggish furrows, but eagerly absorb 169 Their fill of love, and deeply entertain.

	136 sit genitali arvo et sulcos oblimet inertis, 137 sed rapiat sitiens Venerem interiusque recondat. 138 Rursus cura patrum cadere et succedere matrum 139 incipit. Exactis gravidae cum mensibus errant, 140 non illas gravibus quisquam iuga ducere plaustris, 141 non saltu superare viam sit passus et acri 142 carpere prata fuga fluviosque innare rapacis. 143 Saltibus in vacuis pascunt et plena secundum 144 flumina, muscus ubi et viridissima gramine ripa, 145 speluncaeque tegant et saxea procubet umbra. 146 Est lucos Silari circa ilicibusque; virentem 147 plurimus Alburnum volitans, cui nomen asilo 148 Romanum est, oestrum Grai vertere vocantes, 149 asper, acerba sonans, quo tota exterrita silvis 150 diffugiunt armenta; furit mugitibus aether
3.151	151 concussus silvaeque et sicci ripa Tanagri. 152 Hoc quondam monstro horribilis exercuit iras 153 Inachiae Iuno pestem meditata iuvencae. 154 Hunc quoque, nam mediis fervoribus acrior instat, 155 arcebis gravido pecori, armentaque pasces 156 sole recens orto aut noctem ducentibus astris. 157 Post partum cura in vitulos traducitur omnis, 158 continuoque notas et nomina gentis inurunt 159 et quos aut pecori malint submittere habendo 160 aut aris servare sacros aut scindere terram 161 et campum horrentem fractis invertere glaebis. 162 Cetera pascuntur viridis armenta per herbas: 163 Tu quos ad studium atque usum formabis agrestem, 164 iam vitulos hortare viamque insiste domandi,	170 To care of sire the mother's care succeeds. 171 When great with young they wander nigh their time, 172 Let no man suffer them to drag the yoke 173 In heavy wains, nor leap across the way, 174 Nor scour the meads, nor swim the rushing flood. 175 In lonely lawns they feed them, by the course 176 Of brimming streams, where moss is, and the banks 177 With grass are greenest, where are sheltering caves, 178 And far outstretched the rock-flung shadow lies. 179 Round wooded Silarus and the ilex-bowers 180 Of green Alburnus swarms a winged pest— 181 Its Roman name Asilus, by the Greeks 182 Termed Oestros—fierce it is, and harshly hums, 183 Driving whole herds in terror through the groves, 184 Till heaven is madded by their bellowing din, 185 And Tanager's dry bed and forest-banks. 186 With this same scourge did Juno wreak of old 187 The terrors of her wrath, a plague devised 188 Against the heifer sprung from Inachus. 189 From this too thou, since in the noontide heats 190 'Tis most persistent, fend thy teeming herds, 191 And feed them when the sun

	165 dum faciles animi iuvenum, dum mobilis aetas. 166 Ac primum laxos tenui de vimine circlos 167 cervici subnecte; dehinc, ubi libera colla 168 servitio adsuerint, ipsis e torquibus aptos 169 iunge pares et coge gradum conferre iuvencos; 170 atque illis iam saepe rotae ducantur inanes 171 per terram et summo vestigia pulvere signent; 172 post valido nitens sub pondere faginus axis 173 instrepat et iunctos temo trahat aereus orbes. 174 Interea pubi indomitae non gramina tantum 175 nec vescas salicum frondes ulvamque palustrem, 176 sed frumenta manu carpes sata; nec tibi fetae 177 more patrum nivea implebunt mulctraria vaccae, 178 sed tota in dulcis consument ubera natos. 179 Sin ad bella magis studium turmasque ferocis, 180 aut Alphea rotis praelabi flumina Pisae	is newly risen, 192 Or the first stars are ushering in the night.
3.181	181 et Iovis in luco currus agitare volantis: 182 primus equi labor est, animos atque arma videre 183 bellantum lituosque pati tractuque gementem 184 ferre rotam et stabulo frenos audire sonantis; 185 tum magis atque magis blandis gaudere magistri 186 laudibus et plausae sonitum cervicis amare. 187 Atque haec iam primo depulsus ab ubere matris 188 audeat, inque vicem det mollibus ora capistris 189 invalidus etiamque tremens, etiam inscius aevi. 190 At tribus exactis ubi quarta accesserit aestas, 191 carpere mox gyrum incipiat gradibusque sonare 192 compositis sinuetque alterna volumina crurum 193 sitque laboranti similis; tum cursibus auras,	193 But, yeaning ended, all their tender care 194 Is to the calves transferred; at once with marks 195 They brand them, both to designate their race, 196 And which to rear for breeding, or devote 197 As altar-victims, or to cleave the ground 198 And into ridges tear and turn the sod. 199 The rest along the greensward graze at will. 200 Those that to rustic uses thou wouldst mould, 201 As calves encourage and take steps to tame, 202 While pliant wills and plastic youth allow. 203 And first of slender withies round the throat 204 Loose collars hang, then when their free-born necks 205 Are used to service, with the self-same bands 206 Yoke them in pairs, and steer by steer compel 207 Keep pace together. And time it is that oft 208 Unfreighted wheels be drawn along the ground 209 Behind them, as to dint the surface-dust; 210 Then let the beechen axle strain and creak 211 'Neath some stout burden, whilst a brazen pole 212 Drags on the wheels made fast thereto. Meanwhile 213 For 194 tum vocet, ac per aperta volans ceu liber habenis 195 aequora vix summa vestigia ponat harena; 196 qualis Hyperboreis Aquilo cum densus ab oris 197 incubuit, Scythiaeque hiemes atque arida differt 198 nubila: tum segetes altae campique natantes 199 lenibus horrescunt flabris summaeque sonorem 200 dant silvae longique urgent ad litora fluctus; 201 ille volat simul arva fuga, simul aequora verrens 202 Hinc vel ad Elei metas et maxuma campi 203 sudabit spatia et spumas aget ore cruentas, 204 Belgica vel molli melius feret esseda collo. 205 Tum demum crassa magnum farragine corpus 206 crescere iam domitis sinito: namque ante domandum 207 ingentis tollent animos prensique negabunt 208 verbera lenta pati et duris parere lupatis. 209 Sed non ulla magis viris industria firmat, 210 quam Venerem et caeci stimulos avertere amoris,	their unbroken youth not grass alone, 214 Nor meagre willow-leaves and marish-sedge, 215 But corn-ears with thy hand pluck from the crops. 216 Nor shall the brood-kine, as of yore, for thee 217 Brim high the snowy milking-pail, but spend 218 Their udders' fullness on their own sweet young.

3.211	211 sive boum sive est cui gratior usus equorum. 212 Atque ideo tauros procul atque in sola relegant 213 pascua post montem oppositum et trans flumina lata, 214 aut intus clausos satura ad praesepia servant. 215 Carpit enim viris paulatim uritque videndo 216 femina nec nemorum patitur meminisse nec herbae 217 dulcibus illa quidem inlecebris, et saepe superbos 218 cornibus inter se subigit decernere amantis. 219 Pascitur in magna Sila formosa iuvenca: 220 illi alternantes multa vi proelia miscent 221 volneribus crebris, lavit ater corpora sanguis, 222 versaque in obnixos urguentur cornua vasto	219 But if fierce squadrons and the ranks of war 220 Delight thee rather, or on wheels to glide 221 At Pisa, with Alpheus fleeting by, 222 And in the grove of Jupiter urge on 223 The flying chariot, be your steed's first task 224 To face the warrior's armed rage, and brook 225 The trumpet, and long roar of rumbling wheels, 226 And clink of chiming bridles in the stall; 227 Then more and more to love his master's voice 228 Caressing, or loud hand that claps his neck. 229 Ay, thus far let him learn to dare, when first 230 Weaned from his mother, and his mouth at times 231 Yield to the supple halter, even while yet 232 Weak, tottering-limbed, and ignorant of life. 233 But, three years ended, when the fourth arrives, 234 Now let him tarry not to run the ring 235 With rhythmic hoof-beat echoing, and now learn 236 Alternately to curve each bending leg, 237 And be like one that struggleth; then at last 238

	223 cum gemitu, reboant silvaeque et longus Olympus 224 Nec mos bellantis una stabulare, sed alter 225 victus abit longeque ignotis exulat oris, 226 multa gemens ignominiam plagasque superbi 227 victoris, tum, quos amisit inultus, amores; 228 et stabula aspectans regnis excessit avitis. 229 Ergo omni cura viris exercet et inter 230 dura iacet pernix instrato saxa cubili 231 frondibus hirsutis et carice pastus acuta, 232 et temptat sese atque irasci in cornua discit 233 arboris obnixus trunco ventosque lacessit 234 ictibus et sparsa ad pugnam proludit harena. 235 Post ubi collectum robur viresque refectae 236 signa movet praecepsque oblitum fertur in hostem: 237 fluctus uti medio coepit cum albescere ponto 238 longius ex altoque sinum trahit, utque volutus 239 ad terras immane sonat per saxa neque ipso 240 monte minor procumbit, at ima exaestuat unda	Challenge the winds to race him, and at speed 239 Launched through the open, like a reinless thing, 240 Scarce print his footsteps on the surface-sand. 241 As when with power from Hyperborean climes 242 The north wind stoops, and scatters from his path 243 Dry clouds and storms of Scythia; the tall corn 244 And rippling plains 'gin shiver with light gusts; 245 A sound is heard among the forest-tops; 246 Long waves come racing shoreward: fast he flies, 247 With instant pinion sweeping earth and main. 248 A steed like this or on the mighty course 249 Of Elis at the goal will sweat, and shower 250 Red foam-flakes from his mouth, or, kindlier task, 251 With patient neck support the Belgian car. 252 Then, broken at last, let swell their burly frame 253 With fattening corn-mash, for, unbroke, they will 254 With pride wax wanton, and, when caught, refuse 255 Tough lash to brook or jagged curb obey.
3.241	241 verticibus nigramque alte subiectat harenam. 242 Omne adeo genus in terris hominumque ferarumque, 243 et genus aequoreum, pecudes pictaeque volucres, 244 in furias. ignemque ruunt. Amor omnibus idem. 245 Tempore non alio catulorum oblita leaena 246 saevior erravit campis, nec funera volgo 247 tam multa informes ursi stragemque dedere 248 per silvas; tum saevus aper, tum pessima tigris; 249 heu male tum Libyae solis erratur in agris. 250 Nonne vides, ut tota tremor pertemptet equorum 251 corpora, si tantum notas odor attulit auras?	256 But no device so fortifies their power 257 As love's blind stings of passion to forefend, 258 Whether on steed or steer thy choice be set. 259 Ay, therefore 'tis they banish bulls afar 260 To solitary pastures, or behind 261 Some mountain-barrier, or broad streams beyond, 262 Or else in plenteous stalls pen fast at home. 263 For, even through sight of her, the female wastes 264 His strength with smouldering fire, till he forget 265 Both grass and woodland. She indeed full oft 266 With her sweet charms can lovers proud compel 267 To battle for the conquest horn to horn. 268 In Sila's forest feeds the heifer fair, 269 While each on each the furious rivals run; 270 Wound follows wound; the black blood laves their limbs; 271 Horns push and strive against opposing horns, 272 With mighty groaning; all the forest-side 273

	252 Ac neque eos iam frena virum neque verbera saeva 253 non scopuli rupesque cavae atque obiecta retardant 254 flumina correptosque unda torquentia montis. 255 Ipse ruit dentesque Sabellicus exacuit sus 256 et pede prosubigit terram, fricat arbore costas 257 atque hinc atque illinc umeros ad volnera durat. 258 Quid iuvenis, magnum cui versat in ossibus ignem 259 durus amor? Nempe abruptis turbata procellis 260 nocte natat caeca serus freta; quem super ingens 261 porta tonat caeli et scopulis inlisa reclamant 262 aequora; nec miseri possunt revocare parentes 263 nec moritura super crudeli funere virgo. 264 Quid lynces Bacchi variae et genus acre luporum 265 atque canum? Quid, quae imbelles dant proelia cervi? 266 Scilicet ante omnis furor est insignis equarum; 267 et mentem Venus ipsa dedit, quo tempore Glauci 268 Potniades malis membra absumpsere quadrigae. 269 Illas ducit amor trans Gargara transque sonantem 270 Ascanium; superant montis et flumina tranant.	And far Olympus bellow back the roar. 274 Nor wont the champions in one stall to couch; 275 But he that's worsted hies him to strange climes 276 Far off, an exile, moaning much the shame, 277 The blows of that proud conqueror, then love's loss 278 Avenged not; with one glance toward the byre, 279 His ancient royalties behind him lie. 280 So with all heed his strength he practiseth, 281 And nightlong makes the hard bare stones his bed, 282 And feeds on prickly leaf and pointed rush, 283 And proves himself, and butting at a tree 284 Learns to fling wrath into his horns, with blows 285 Provokes the air, and scattering clouds of sand 286 Makes prelude of the battle; afterward, 287 With strength repaired and gathered might breaks camp, 288 And hurls him headlong on the unthinking foe: 289 As in mid ocean when a wave far of 290 Begins to whiten, mustering from the main 291 Its rounded breast, and, onward rolled to land 292 Falls with prodigious roar among the rocks, 293 Huge as a very mountain: but the depths 294 Upseethe in swirling eddies, and disgorge 295 The murky sand-lees from their sunken bed.
3.271	271 Continuoque avidis ubi subdita flamma medullis, 272 vere magis, quia vere calor redit ossibus: illae 273 ore omnes versae in Zephyrum stant rupibus altis, 274 exceptantque levis auras et saepe sine ullis 275 coniugiis vento gravidae, mirabile dictu, 276 saxa per et scopulos et depressas convallis 277 diffugiunt, non, Eure, tuos, neque solis ad ortus, 278 in Borean caurumque, aut unde nigerrimus auster 279 nascitur et pluvio contristat frigore caelum. 280 Hic demum, hippomanes vero quod nomine dicunt	296 Nay, every race on earth of men, and beasts, 297 And ocean-folk, and flocks, and painted birds, 298 Rush to the raging fire: love sways them all. 299 Never than then more fiercely o'er the plain 300 Prowls heedless of her whelps the lioness: 301 Nor monstrous bears such wide-spread havoc-doom 302 Deal through the forests; then the boar is fierce, 303 Most deadly then the tigress: then, alack! 304 Ill roaming is it on Libya's lonely plains. 305 Mark you what shivering thrills the horse's frame, 306 If but a waft the well-known gust conveys? 307 Nor curb can check them then, nor lash severe, 308 Nor rocks and caverned crags, nor barrier-floods, 309 That rend and whirl and wash the hills away. 310 Then speeds amain the great Sabellian boar, 311 His tushes

	281 pastores, lentum destillat ab inguine virus, 282 hippomanes, quod saepe malae legere novercae 283 miscueruntque herbas et non innoxia verba. 284 Sed fugit interea, fugit inreparabile tempus, 285 singula dum capti circumvectamur amore. 286 Hoc satis armentis: superat pars altera curae, 287 lanigeros agitare greges hirtasque capellas. 288 Hic labor, hinc laudem fortes sperate coloni. 289 Nec sum animi dubius, verbis ea vincere magnum 290 quam sit, et angustis hunc addere rebus honorem; 291 sed me Parnasi deserta per ardua dulcis 292 raptat amor; iuvat ire iugis, qua nulla priorum 293 Castaliam molli devertitur orbita clivo. 294 Nunc, veneranda Pales, magno nunc ore sonandum 295 Incipiens stabulis edico in mollibus herbam 296 carpere ovis, dum mox frondosa reducitur aestas, 297 et multa duram stipula filicumque maniplis 298 sternere subter humum, glacies ne frigida laedat 299 molle pecus scabiemque ferat turpisque podagras. 300 Post hinc digressus iubeo frondentia capris	whets, with forefoot tears the ground, 312 Rubs 'gainst a tree his flanks, and to and fro 313 Hardens each wallowing shoulder to the wound. 314 What of the youth, when love's relentless might 315 Stirs the fierce fire within his veins? Behold! 316 In blindest midnight how he swims the gulf 317 Convulsed with bursting storm-clouds! Over him 318 Heaven's huge gate thunders; the rock-shattered main 319 Utters a warning cry; nor parents' tears 320 Can backward call him, nor the maid he loves, 321 Too soon to die on his untimely pyre. 322 What of the spotted ounce to Bacchus dear, 323 Or warlike wolf-kin or the breed of dogs? 324 Why tell how timorous stags the battle join? 325 O'er all conspicuous is the rage of mares,
3.301	301 arbuta sufficere et fluvios praebere recentis 302 et stabula a ventis hiberno opponere soli 303 ad medium conversa diem, cum frigidus olim 304 iam cadit extremoque inrorat Aquarius anno. 305 Haec quoque non cura nobis leviore tuendae, 306 nec minor usus erit, quamvis Milesia magno 307 vellera mutentur Tyrios incocta rubores: 308 densior hinc suboles, hinc largi copia lactis; 309 quam magis exhausto spumaverit ubere mulctra,	326 By Venus' self inspired of old, what time 327 The Potnian four with rending jaws devoured 328 The limbs of Glaucus. Love-constrained they roam 329 Past Gargarus, past the loud Ascanian flood; 330 They climb the mountains, and the torrents swim; 331 And when their eager marrow first conceives 332 The fire, in Spring-tide chiefly, for with Spring 333 Warmth doth their frames revisit, then they stand 334 All facing westward on the rocky heights, 335 And of the gentle breezes take their fill; 336 And oft unmated, marvellous to tell, 337 But of the wind impregnate, far and wide 338 O'er craggy height and lowly vale they scud, 339 Not toward thy rising, Eurus,

	310 laeta magis pressis manabunt flumina mammis. 311 Nec minus interea barbas incanaque menta 312 Cinyphii tondent hirci saetasque comantis 313 usum in castrorum et miseris velamina nautis. 314 Pascuntur vero silvas et summa Lycaei 315 horrentisque rubos et amantis ardua dumos: 316 atque ipsae memores redeunt in tecta suosque 317 ducunt et gravido superant vix ubere limen. 318 Ergo omni studio glaciem ventosque nivalis 319 quo minor est illis curae mortalis egestas, 320 avertes victumque feres et virgea laetus 321 pabula, nec tota claudes faenilia bruma. 322 At vero Zephyris cum laeta vocantibus aestas 323 in saltus utrumque gregem atque in pascua mittet, 324 Luciferi primo cum sidere frigida rura 325 carpamus, dum mane novum, dum gramina canent, 326 et ros in tenera pecori gratissimus herba. 327 Inde ubi quarta sitim caeli collegerit hora 328 et cantu querulae rumpent arbusta cicadae, 329 ad puteos aut alta greges ad stagna iubebo 330 currentem ilignis potare canalibus undam;	or the sun's, 340 But westward and north-west, or whence up-springs 341 Black Auster, that glooms heaven with rainy cold. 342 Hence from their groin slow drips a poisonous juice, 343 By shepherds truly named hippomanes, 344 Hippomanes, fell stepdames oft have culled, 345 And mixed with herbs and spells of baneful bode.
3.331	331 aestibus at mediis umbrosam exquirere vallem, 332 sicubi magna Iovis antiquo robore quercus 333 ingentis tendat ramos, aut sicubi nigrum 334 ilicibus crebris sacra nemus accubet umbra; 335 tum tenuis dare rursus aquas et pascere rursus 336 solis ad occasum, cum frigidus aera vesper 337 temperat et saltus reficit iam roscida luna 338 litoraque alcyonem resonant, acalanthida dumi.	346 Fast flies meanwhile the irreparable hour, 347 As point to point our charmed round we trace. 348 Enough of herds. This second task remains, 349 The wool-clad flocks and shaggy goats to treat. 350 Here lies a labour; hence for glory look, 351 Brave husbandmen. Nor doubtfully know 352 How hard it is for words to triumph here, 353 And shed their lustre on a theme so slight: 354 But I am caught by ravishing desire 355 Above the lone Parnassian steep; I love 356 To walk the heights, from whence no earlier track 357 Slopes gently downward to Castalia's spring. 358 Now, awful Pales,

	339 Quid tibi pastores Libyae, quid pascua versu 340 prosequar et raris habitata mapalia tectis? 341 Saepe diem noctemque et totum ex ordine mensem 342 pascitur itque pecus longa in deserta sine ullis 343 hospitiis: tantum campi iacet. Omnia secum 344 armentarius Afer agit, tectumque laremque 345 armaque Amyclaeumque canem Cressamque pharetram; 346 non secus ac patriis acer Romanus in armis 347 iniusto sub fasce viam cum carpit et hosti 348 ante expectatum positis stat in agmine castris. 349 At non, qua Scythiae gentes Maeotiaque unda, 350 turbidus et torquens flaventis Hister harenas, 351 quaque redit medium Rhodope porrecta sub axem. 352 Illic clausa tenent stabulis armenta, neque ullae 353 aut herbae campo apparent aut arbore frondes; 354 sed iacet aggeribus niveis informis et alto 355 terra gelu late septemque adsurgit in ulnas. 356 Semper hiemps, semper spirantes frigora cauri. 357 Tum Sol pallentis haud umquam discutit umbras, 358 nec cum invectus equis altum petit aethera, nec cum 359 praecipitem Oceani rubro lavit aequore currum. 360 Concrescunt subitae currenti in flumine crustae	strike a louder tone. 359 First, for the sheep soft pencotes I decree 360 To browse in, till green summer's swift return; 361 And that the hard earth under them with straw 362 And handfuls of the fern be littered deep, 363 Lest chill of ice such tender cattle harm 364 With scab and loathly foot-rot. Passing thence 365 I bid the goats with arbute-leaves be stored, 366 And served with fresh spring-water, and their pens 367 Turned southward from the blast, to face the suns 368 Of winter, when Aquarius' icy beam 369 Now sinks in showers upon the parting year. 370 These too no lightlier our protection claim, 371 Nor prove of poorer service, howsoe'er 372 Milesian fleeces dipped in Tyrian reds 373 Repay the barterer; these with offspring teem 374 More numerous; these yield plenteous store of milk: 375 The more each dry-wrung udder froths the pail, 376 More copious soon the teat-pressed torrents flow. 377 Ay, and on Cinyps' bank the he-goats too 378 Their beards and grizzled chins and bristling hair 379 Let clip for camp-use, or as rugs to wrap 380 Seafaring wretches. But they browse the woods 381 And summits of Lycaeus, and rough briers, 382 And brakes that love the highland: of themselves 383 Right heedfully the she-goats homeward troop 384 Before their kids, and with plump udders clogged 385 Scarce cross the threshold. Wherefore rather ye, 386 The less they crave man's vigilance, be fain 387 From ice to fend them and from snowy winds; 388 Bring food and feast them with their branchy fare,
3.361	361 undaque iam tergo ferratos sustinet orbis, 362 puppibus illa prius, patulis nunc hospita plaustris; 363 aeraque dissiliunt vulgo vestesque rigescunt 364 indutae caeduntque securibus umida vina 365 et totae solidam in glaciem vertere lacunae 366 stiriaque impexis induruit horrida barbis. 367 Interea toto non setius aere ninguit:	389 Nor lock your hay-loft all the winter long. 390 But when glad summer at the west wind's call 391 Sends either flock to pasture in the glades, 392 Soon as the day-star shineth, hie we then 393 To the cool meadows, while the dawn is young, 394 The grass yet hoary, and to browsing herds 395 The dew tastes sweetest on the tender sward. 396 When heaven's fourth hour draws on the thickening drought, 397 And shrill cicalas pierce the brake with song, 398 Then at the well-springs bid them, or deep pools, 399 From troughs of holm-

	368 intereunt pecudes, stant circumfusa pruinis 369 corpora magna boum, confertoque agmine cervi 370 torpent mole nova et summis vix cornibus extant. 371 Hos non immissis canibus, non cassibus ullis 372 puniceaeve agitant pavidos formidine pennae, 373 sed frustra oppositum trudentis pectore montem 374 comminus obtruncant ferro graviterque rudentis 375 caedunt et magno laeti clamore reportant. 376 Ipsi in defossis specubus secura sub alta 377 otia agunt terra congestaque robora totasque 378 advolvere focis ulmos ignique dedere. 379 Hic noctem ludo ducunt et pocula laeti 380 fermento atque acidis imitantur vitea sorbis. 381 Talis Hyperboreo septem subiecta trioni 382 gens effrena virum Rhiphaeo tunditur euro 383 et pecudum fulvis velatur corpora saetis. 384 Si tibi lanitium curae, primum aspera silva, 385 lappaeque tribolique, absint; fuge pabula laeta; 386 Continuoque greges villis lege mollibus albos. 387 Illum autem, quamvis aries sit candidus ipse, 388 nigra subest udo tantum cui lingua palato, 389 reice, ne maculis infuscet vellera pullis 390 nascentum, plenoque alium circumspice campo.	oak quaff the running wave: 400 But at day's hottest seek a shadowy vale, 401 Where some vast ancient-timbered oak of Jove 402 Spreads his huge branches, or where huddling black 403 Ilex on ilex cowers in awful shade. 404 Then once more give them water sparingly, 405 And feed once more, till sunset, when cool eve 406 Allays the air, and dewy moonbeams slake 407 The forest glades, with halcyon's song the shore, 408 And every thicket with the goldfinch rings.
3.391	391 Munere sic niveo lanae, si credere dignum est, 392 Pan deus Arcadiae captam te, Luna, fefellit 393 in nemora alta vocans; nec tu aspernata vocantem. 394 At cui lactis amor, cytisum lotosque frequentis 395 ipse manu salsasque ferat praesepibus herbas. 396 Hinc et amant fluvios magis et magis ubera tendunt	409 Of Libya's shepherds why the tale pursue? 410 Why sing their pastures and the scattered huts 411 They house in? Oft their cattle day and night 412 Graze the whole month together, and go forth 413 Into far deserts where no shelter is, 414 So flat the plain and boundless. All his goods 415 The Afric swain bears with him, house and home, 416 Arms, Cretan quiver, and Amyclaean dog; 417 As some keen Roman in his country's arms 418 Plies

	397 et salis occultum referunt in lacte saporem. 398 Multi iam excretos prohibent a matribus haedos 399 primaque ferratis praefigunt ora capistris. 400 Quod surgente die mulsere horisque diurnis, 401 nocte premunt; quod iam tenebris et sole cadente, 402 sub lucem exportant calathis adit oppida pastor; 403 aut parco sale contingunt hiemique reponunt. 404 Nec tibi cura canum fuerit postrema, sed una 405 velocis Spartae catulos acremque Molossum 406 pasce sero pingui. Numquam custodibus illis 407 nocturnum stabulis furem incursusque luporum 408 aut impacatos a tergo horrebis Hiberos. 409 Saepe etiam cursu timidos agitabis onagros 410 et canibus leporem, canibus venabere dammas, 411 saepe volutabris pulsos silvestribus apros 412 latratu turbabis agens montisque per altos 413 ingentem clamore premes ad retia cervum. 414 Disce et odoratam stabulis accendere cedrum 415 galbaneoque agitare gravis nidore chelydros. 416 saepe sub immotis praesepibus aut mala tactu 417 vipera delituit caelumque exterrita fugit, 418 aut tecto adsuetus coluber succedere et umbrae, 419 pestis acerba boum, pecorique aspergere virus, 420 fovit humum. Cape saxa manu, cape robora, pastor,	the swift march beneath a cruel load; 419 Soon with tents pitched and at his post he stands, 420 Ere looked for by the foe.
3.421	421 tollentemque minas et sibila colla tumentem 422 deice. Iamque fuga timidum caput abdidit alte, 423 cum medii nexus extremaeque agmina caudae 424 solvuntur, tardosque trahit sinus ultimus orbis. 425 Est etiam ille malus Calabris in saltibus anguis,	421 Not thus the tribes 422 Of Scythia by the far Maeotic wave, 423 Where turbid Ister whirls his yellow sands, 424 And Rhodope stretched out beneath the pole 425 Comes trending backward. There the herds they keep 426 Close-pent in byres, nor any grass is seen 427 Upon the plain, nor leaves upon the tree: 428 But with snow-ridges and deep frost afar 429 Heaped seven ells

	426 squamea convolvens sublato pectore terga 427 atque notis longam maculosus grandibus alvum 428 qui, dum amnes ulli rumpuntur fontibus et dum 429 vere madent udo terrae ac pluvialibus austris 430 stagna colit, ripisque habitans hic piscibus atram 431 improbus ingluviem ranisque loquacibus explet; 432 postquam exusta palus, terraeque ardore dehiscunt, 433 exsilit in siccum et flammantia lumina torquens 434 saevit agris asperque siti atque exterritus aestu. 435 Ne mihi tum mollis sub divo carpere somnos 436 neu dorso nemoris libeat iacuisse per herbas, 437 cum positis novus exuviis nitidusque iuventa 438 volvitur, aut catulos tectis aut ova relinquens 439 arduus ad solem et linguis micat ore trisulcis. 440 Morborum quoque te causas et signa docebo. 441 Turpis ovis temptat scabies, ubi frigidus imber 442 altius ad vivum persedit et horrida cano 443 bruma gelu, vel cum tonsis inlotus adhaesit 444 sudor et hirsuti secuerunt corpora vepres. 445 Dulcibus idcirco fluviis pecus omne magistri 446 perfundunt, udisque aries in gurgite villis 447 mersatur missusque secundo defluit amni; 448 aut tonsum tristi contingunt corpus amurca 449 et spumas miscent argenti et sulfura viva 450 Idaeasque pices et pinguis unguine ceras	high the earth lies featureless: 430 Still winter? still the north wind's icy breath! 431 Nay, never sun disparts the shadows pale, 432 Or as he rides the steep of heaven, or dips 433 In ocean's fiery bath his plunging car. 434 Quick ice-crusts curdle on the running stream, 435 And iron-hooped wheels the water's back now bears, 436 To broad wains opened, as erewhile to ships; 437 Brass vessels oft asunder burst, and clothes 438 Stiffen upon the wearers; juicy wines 439 They cleave with axes; to one frozen mass 440 Whole pools are turned; and on their untrimmed beards 441 Stiff clings the jagged icicle. Meanwhile 442 All heaven no less is filled with falling snow; 443 The cattle perish: oxen's mighty frames 444 Stand island-like amid the frost, and stags 445 In huddling herds, by that strange weight benumbed, 446 Scarce top the surface with their antler-points. 447 These with no hounds they hunt, nor net with toils, 448 Nor scare with terror of the crimson plume; 449 But, as in vain they breast the opposing block, 450 Butcher them, knife in hand, and so dispatch 451 Loud-bellowing, and with glad shouts hale them home. 452 Themselves in deep-dug caverns underground 453 Dwell free and careless; to their hearths they heave 454 Oak-logs and elm-trees whole, and fire them there, 455 There play the night out, and in festive glee 456 With barm and service sour the wine-cup mock. 457 So 'neath the seven-starred Hyperborean wain 458 The folk live tameless, buffeted with blasts 459 Of Eurus from Rhipaean hills, and wrap 460 Their bodies in the tawny fells of beasts.
3.451	451 scillamque elleborosque gravis nigrumque bitumen. 452 Non tamen ulla magis praesens fortuna laborum est, 453 quam si quis ferro potuit rescindere summum 454 ulceris os: alitur vitium vivitque tegendo,	461 If wool delight thee, first, be far removed 462 All prickly boskage, burrs and caltrops; shun 463 Luxuriant pastures; at the outset choose 464 White flocks with downy fleeces. For the ram, 465 How white soe'er himself, be but the tongue 466 'Neath his moist palate black, reject him, lest 467 He

	455 dum medicas adhibere manus ad volnera pastor 456 abnegat et meliora deos sedet omnia poscens. 457 Quin etiam, ima dolor balantum lapsus ad ossa 458 cum furit atque artus depascitur arida febris, 459 profuit incensos aestus avertere et inter 460 ima ferire pedis salientem sanguine venam, 461 Bisaltae quo more solent acerque Gelonus; 462 cum fugit in Rhodopen atque in deserta Getarum 463 et lac concretum cum sanguine potat equino. 464 Quam procul aut molli succedere saepius umbrae 465 videris aut summas carpentem ignavius herbas 466 extremamque sequi aut medio procumbere campo 467 pascentem et serae solam decedere nocti: 468 continuo culpam ferro compesce, prius quam 469 dira per incautum serpant contagia volgus. 470 Non tam creber agens hiemem ruit aequore turbo, 471 quam multae pecudum pestes. Nec singula morbi 472 corpora corripiunt, sed tota aestiva repente, 473 spemque gregemque simul cunctamque ab origine gentem. 474 Tum sciat, aerias Alpis et Norica si quis 475 castella in tumulis et Iapydis arva Timavi 476 nunc quoque post tanto videat desertaque regna 477 pastorum et longe saltus lateque vacantis. 478 Hic quondam morbo caeli miseranda coorta est 479 tempestas totoque autumni incanduit aestu 480 et genus omne neci pecudum dedit, omne ferarum,	sully with dark spots his offspring's fleece, 468 And seek some other o'er the teeming plain. 469 Even with such snowy bribe of wool, if ear 470 May trust the tale, Pan, God of Arcady, 471 Snared and beguiled thee, Luna, calling thee 472 To the deep woods; nor thou didst spurn his call. 473 But who for milk hath longing, must himself 474 Carry lucerne and lotus-leaves enow 475 With salt herbs to the cote, whence more they love 476 The streams, more stretch their udders, and give back 477 A subtle taste of saltness in the milk. 478 Many there be who from their mothers keep 479 The new-born kids, and straightway bind their mouths 480 With iron-tipped muzzles. What they milk at dawn, 481 Or in the daylight hours, at night they press; 482 What darkling or at sunset, this ere morn 483 They bear away in baskets—for to town 484 The shepherd hies him—or with dash of salt 485 Just sprinkle, and lay by for winter use.
3.481	481 corrupitque lacus, infecit pabula tabo. 482 Nec via mortis erat simplex, sed ubi ignea venis 483 omnibus acta sitis miseros adduxerat artus,	486 Nor be thy dogs last cared for; but alike 487 Swift Spartan hounds and fierce Molossian feed 488 On fattening whey. Never, with these to watch, 489 Dread nightly thief afold and ravening wolves, 490 Or Spanish desperadoes in

	484 rursus abundabat fluidus liquor omniaque in se 485 ossa minutatim morbo collapsa trahebat. 486 Saepe in honore deum medio stans hostia ad aram 487 lanea dum nivea circumdatur infula vitta, 488 inter cunctantis cecidit moribunda ministros. 489 Aut si quam ferro mactaverat ante sacerdos 490 inde neque impositis ardent altaria fibris 491 nec responsa potest consultus reddere vates, 492 ac vix suppositi tinguntur sanguine cultri 493 summaque ieiuna sanie infuscatur harena. 494 Hinc laetis vituli volgo moriuntur in herbis 495 et dulcis animas plena ad praesepia reddunt; 496 hinc canibus blandis rabies venit et quatit aegros 497 tussis anhela sues ac faucibus angit obesis. 498 Labitur infelix studiorum atque immemor herbae 499 victor equus fontisque avertitur et pede terram 500 crebra ferit; demissae aures, incertus ibidem 501 sudor et ille quidem morituris frigidus, aret 502 pellis et ad tactum tractanti dura resistit. 503 Haec ante exitium primis dant signa diebus; 504 sin in processu coepit crudescere morbus, 505 tum vero ardentes oculi atque attractus ab alto 506 spiritus, interdum gemitu gravis, imaque longo 507 ilia singultu tendunt, it naribus ater 508 sanguis et obsessas fauces premit aspera lingua. 509 Profuit inserto latices infundere cornu 510 Lenaeos; ea visa salus morientibus una;	the rear. 491 And oft the shy wild asses thou wilt chase, 492 With hounds, too, hunt the hare, with hounds the doe; 493 Oft from his woodland wallowing-den uprouse 494 The boar, and scare him with their baying, and drive, 495 And o'er the mountains urge into the toils 496 Some antlered monster to their chiming cry. 497 Learn also scented cedar-wood to burn 498 Within the stalls, and snakes of noxious smell 499 With fumes of galbanum to drive away. 500 Oft under long-neglected cribs, or lurks 501 A viper ill to handle, that hath fled 502 The light in terror, or some snake, that wont 503 'Neath shade and sheltering roof to creep, and shower 504 Its bane among the cattle, hugs the ground, 505 Fell scourge of kine. Shepherd, seize stakes, seize stones! 506 And as he rears defiance, and puffs out 507 A hissing throat, down with him! see how low 508 That cowering crest is vailed in flight, the while, 509 His midmost coils and final sweep of tail 510 Relaxing, the last fold drags lingering spires. 511 Then that vile worm that in Calabrian glades 512 Uprears his breast, and wreathes a scaly back, 513 His length of belly pied with mighty spots— 514 While from their founts gush any streams, while yet 515 With showers of Spring and rainy south-winds earth 516 Is moistened, lo! he haunts the pools, and here 517 Housed in the banks, with fish and chattering frogs 518 Crams the black void of his insatiate maw. 519 Soon as the fens are parched, and earth with heat 520 Is gaping, forth he darts into the dry, 521 Rolls eyes of fire and rages through the fields, 522 Furious from thirst and by the drought dismayed. 523 Me list not then beneath the open heaven 524 To snatch soft slumber, nor on forest-ridge 525 Lie stretched along the grass, when, slipped his slough, 526 To glittering youth transformed he winds his spires, 527 And eggs or younglings leaving in his lair, 528 Towers sunward, lightening with three-forked tongue.
3.511	511 mox erat hoc ipsum exitio, furiisque refecti 512 ardebant ipsique suos iam morte sub aegra,	529 Of sickness, too, the causes and the signs 530 I'll teach thee. Loathly scab assails the sheep, 531 When chilly showers have probed them to the quick,

	513 di meliora piis erroremque hostibus illum, 514 discissos nudis laniabant dentibus artus. 515 Ecce autem duro fumans sub vomere taurus 516 concidit et mixtum spumis vomit ore cruorem 517 extremosque ciet gemitus. It tristis arator 518 maerentem abiungens fraterna morte iuvencum, 519 atque opere in medio defixa relinquit aratra. 520 Non umbrae altorum nemorum, non mollia possunt 521 prata movere animum, non qui per saxa volutus 522 purior electro campum petit amnis; at ima 523 solvuntur latera atque oculos stupor urguet inertis 524 ad terramque fluit devexo pondere cervix. 525 Quid labor aut benefacta iuvant? Quid vomere terras 526 invertisse gravis? Atqui non Massica Bacchi 527 munera, non illis epulae nocuere repostae: 528 frondibus et victu pascuntur simplicis herbae, 529 pocula sunt fontes liquidi atque exercita cursu 530 flumina, nec somnos abrumpit cura salubris. 531 Tempore non alio dicunt regionibus illis 532 quaesitas ad sacra boves Iunonis et uris 533 imparibus ductos alta ad donaria currus. 534 Ergo aegre rastris terram rimantur et ipsis 535 unguibus infodiunt fruges montisque per altos 536 contenta cervice trahunt stridentia plaustra. 537 Non lupus insidias explorat ovilia circum 538 nec gregibus nocturnus obambulat; acrior illum 539 cura domat; timidi dammae cervique fugaces 540 nunc interque canes et circum tecta vagantur.	532 And winter stark with hoar-frost, or when sweat 533 Unpurged cleaves to them after shearing done, 534 And rough thorns rend their bodies. Hence it is 535 Shepherds their whole flock steep in running streams, 536 While, plunged beneath the flood, with drenched fell, 537 The ram, launched free, goes drifting down the tide. 538 Else, having shorn, they smear their bodies o'er 539 With acrid oil-lees, and mix silver-scum 540 And native sulphur and Idaean pitch, 541 Wax mollified with ointment, and therewith 542 Sea-leek, strong hellebores, bitumen black. 543 Yet ne'er doth kindlier fortune crown his toil, 544 Than if with blade of iron a man dare lance 545 The ulcer's mouth ope: for the taint is fed 546 And quickened by confinement; while the swain 547 His hand of healing from the wound withholds, 548 Or sits for happier signs imploring heaven. 549 Aye, and when inward to the bleater's bones 550 The pain hath sunk and rages, and their limbs 551 By thirsty fever are consumed, 'tis good 552 To draw the enkindled heat therefrom, and pierce 553 Within the hoof-clefts a blood-bounding vein. 554 Of tribes Bisaltic such the wonted use, 555 And keen Gelonian, when to Rhodope 556 He flies, or Getic desert, and quaffs milk 557 With horse-blood curdled. Seest one far afield 558 Oft to the shade's mild covert win, or pull 559 The grass tops listlessly, or hindmost lag, 560 Or, browsing, cast her down amid the plain, 561 At night retire belated and alone; 562 With quick knife check the mischief, ere it creep 563 With dire contagion through the unwary herd. 564 Less thick and fast the whirlwind scours the main 565 With tempest in its wake, than swarm the plagues 566 Of cattle; nor seize they single lives alone, 567 But sudden clear whole feeding grounds, the flock 568 With all its promise, and extirpate the breed. 569 Well would he trow it who, so long after, still 570 High Alps and Noric hill-forts should behold, 571 And Iapydian Timavus' fields, 572 Ay, still behold the shepherds' realms a waste, 573 And far and wide the lawns untenanted.
3.541	541 Iam maris immensi prolem et genus omne natantum

	542 litore in extremo, ceu naufraga corpora, fluctus 543 proluit; insolitae fugiunt in flumina phocae. 544 Interit et curvis frustra defensa latebris 545 vipera et attoniti squamis adstantibus hydri. 546 Ipsis est aer avibus non aequus et illae 547 praecipites alta vitam sub nube relinquunt. 548 Praeterea iam nec mutari pabula refert 549 artes nocent quaesitaeque; cessere magistri 550 Phillyrides Chiron Amythaoniusque Melampus. 551 Saevit et in lucem Stygiis emissa tenebris 552 pallida Tisiphone Morbos agit ante Metumque, 553 inque dies avidum surgens caput altius effert: 554 Balatu pecorum et crebris mugitibus amnes 555 arentesque sonant ripae collesque supini: 556 Iamque catervatim dat stragem atque aggerat ipsis 557 in stabulis turpi dilapsa cadavera tabo 558 donec humo tegere ac foveis abscondere discunt. 559 Nam neque erat coriis usus nec viscera quisquam 560 aut undis abolere potest aut vincere flamma; 561 ne tondere quidem morbo inluvieque peresa 562 vellera nec telas possunt attingere putris; 563 verum etiam invisos si quis temptarat amictus, 564 ardentes papulae atque immundus olentia sudor 565 membra sequebatur nec longo deinde moranti 566 tempore contactos artus sacer ignis edebat.
4.1	1 Protinus aerii mellis caelestia dona 2 exsequar: hanc etiam, Maecenas, adspice partem. 3 Admiranda tibi levium spectacula rerum 4 magnanimosque duces totiusque ordine gentis 5 mores et studia et populos et proelia	1 Of air-born honey, gift of heaven, I now 2 Take up the tale. Upon this theme no less 3 Look thou, Maecenas, with indulgent eye. 4 A marvellous display of puny powers, 5 High-hearted chiefs, a nation's history, 6 Its traits, its bent, its battles and its clans, 7 All, each, shall pass before you, while I sing.

	dicam. 6 In tenui labor; at tenuis non gloria, si quem 7 numina laeva sinunt auditque vocatus Apollo. 8 Principio sedes apibus statioque petenda, 9 quo neque sit ventis aditus—nam pabula venti 10 ferre domum prohibent—neque oves haedique petulci 11 floribus insultent aut errans bucula campo 12 decutiat rorem et surgentes atterat herbas. 13 Absint et picti squalentia terga lacerti 14 pinguibus a stabulis meropesque aliaeque volucres 15 et manibus Procne pectus signata cruentis; 16 omnia nam late vastant ipsasque volantes 17 ore ferunt dulcem nidis immitibus escam. 18 At liquidi fontes et stagna virentia musco 19 adsint et tenuis fugiens per gramina rivus, 20 palmaque vestibulum aut ingens oleaster inumbret, 21 ut, cum prima novi ducent examina reges 22 vere suo ludetque favis emissa iuventus, 23 vicina invitet decedere ripa calori, 24 obviaque hospitiis teneat frondentibus arbos. 25 In medium, seu stabit iners seu profluet umor, 26 transversas salices et grandia conice saxa, 27 pontibus ut crebris possint consistere et alas 28 pandere ad aestivum solem, si forte morantes 29 sparserit aut praeceps Neptuno immerserit Eurus. 30 Haec circum casiae virides et olentia late	8 Slight though the poet's theme, not slight the praise, 9 So frown not heaven, and Phoebus hear his call.
4.31	31 serpylla et graviter spirantis copia thymbrae 32 floreat inriguumque bibant violaria fontem. 33 Ipsa autem, seu corticibus tibi suta cavatis, 34 seu lento fuerint alvaria vimine texta,	10 First find your bees a settled sure abode, 11 Where neither winds can enter (winds blow back 12 The foragers with food returning home) 13 Nor sheep and butting kids tread down the flowers, 14 Nor heifer wandering wide upon the plain 15 Dash off the dew, and bruise the springing blades. 16 Let the

	35 angustos habeant aditus: nam frigore mella 36 cogit hiems, eademque calor liquefacta remittit. 37 Utraque vis apibus pariter metuenda; neque illae 38 nequiquam in tectis certatim tenuia cera 39 spiramenta linunt fucoque et floribus oras 40 explent collectumque haec ipsa ad munera gluten 41 et visco et Phrygiae servant pice lentius Idae. 42 Saepe etiam effossis, si vera est fama, latebris 43 sub terra fovere larem, penitusque repertae 44 pumicibusque cavis exesaeque arboris antro. 45 Tu tamen et levi rimosa cubilia limo 46 ungue fovens circum et raras superinice frondes. 47 Neu propius tectis taxum sine, neve rubentes 48 ure foco cancros, altae neu crede paludi, 49 aut ubi odor caeni gravis aut ubi concava pulsu 50 saxa sonant vocisque offensa resultat imago. 51 Quod superest, ubi pulsam hiemem sol aureus egit 52 sub terras caelumque aestiva luce reclusit, 53 illae continuo saltus silvasque peragrant 54 purpureosque metunt flores et flumina libant 55 summa leves. Hinc nescio qua dulcedine laetae 56 progeniem nidosque fovent, hinc arte recentes 57 excudunt ceras et mella tenacia fingunt. 58 Hinc ubi iam emissum caveis ad sidera caeli 59 nare per aestatem liquidam suspexeris agmen 60 obscuramque trahi vento mirabere nubem,	gay lizard too keep far aloof 17 His scale-clad body from their honied stalls, 18 And the bee-eater, and what birds beside, 19 And Procne smirched with blood upon the breast 20 From her own murderous hands. For these roam wide 21 Wasting all substance, or the bees themselves 22 Strike flying, and in their beaks bear home, to glut 23 Those savage nestlings with the dainty prey. 24 But let clear springs and moss-green pools be near, 25 And through the grass a streamlet hurrying run, 26 Some palm-tree o'er the porch extend its shade, 27 Or huge-grown oleaster, that in Spring, 28 Their own sweet Spring-tide, when the new-made chiefs 29 Lead forth the young swarms, and, escaped their comb, 30 The colony comes forth to sport and play, 31 The neighbouring bank may lure them from the heat, 32 Or bough befriend with hospitable shade. 33 O'er the mid-waters, whether swift or still, 34 Cast willow-branches and big stones enow, 35 Bridge after bridge, where they may footing find 36 And spread their wide wings to the summer sun, 37 If haply Eurus, swooping as they pause, 38 Have dashed with spray or plunged them in the deep. 39 And let green cassias and far-scented thymes, 40 And savory with its heavy-laden breath 41 Bloom round about, and violet-beds hard by 42 Sip sweetness from the fertilizing springs. 43 For the hive's self, or stitched of hollow bark, 44 Or from tough osier woven, let the doors 45 Be strait of entrance; for stiff winter's cold 46 Congeals the honey, and heat resolves and thaws, 47 To bees alike disastrous; not for naught 48 So haste they to cement the tiny pores 49 That pierce their walls, and fill the crevices 50 With pollen from the flowers, and glean and keep 51 To this same end the glue, that binds more fast 52 Than bird-lime or the pitch from Ida's pines. 53 Oft too in burrowed holes, if fame be true, 54 They make their cosy subterranean home, 55 And deeply lodged in hollow rocks are found, 56 Or in the cavern of an age-hewn tree. 57 Thou not the less smear round their crannied cribs 58 With warm smooth mud-coat, and strew leaves above; 59 But near their home let neither yew-tree grow, 60 Nor reddening crabs be roasted, and mistrust 61 Deep marish-ground and mire with noisome smell, 62 Or where the hollow rocks sonorous ring, 63 And the word spoken buffets and rebounds.

4.61	61 contemplator: aquas dulces et frondea semper 62 tecta petunt. Huc tu iussos adsperge sapores, 63 trita melisphylla et cerinthae ignobile gramen, 64 tinnitusque cie et Matris quate cymbala circum. 65 ipsae consident medicatis sedibus, ipsae 66 intima more suo sese in cunabula condent. 67 Sin autem ad pugnam exierint, nam saepe duobus 68 regibus incessit magno discordia motu, 69 continuoque animos vulgi et trepidantia bello 70 corda licet longe praesciscere; namque morantes 71 Martius ille aeris rauci canor increpat et vox 72 auditur fractos sonitus imitata tubarum; 73 tum trepidae inter se coeunt pennisque coruscant 74 spiculaque exacuunt rostris aptantque lacertos 75 et circa regem atque ipsa ad praetoria densae 76 miscentur magnisque vocant clamoribus hostem. 77 Ergo ubi ver nactae sudum camposque patentes, 78 erumpunt portis; concurritur, aethere in alto 79 fit sonitus, magnum mixtae glomerantur in orbem 80 praecipitesque cadunt; non densior aere grando, 81 nec de concussa tantum pluit ilice glandis. 82 ipsi per medias acies insignibus alis 83 ingentes animos angusto in pectore versant, 84 usque adeo obnixi non cedere, dum gravis aut hos 85 aut hos versa fuga victor dare terga subegit. 86 Hi motus animorum atque haec certamina tanta 87 pulveris exigui iactu compressa quiescent. 88 Verum ubi ductores acie	64 What more? When now the golden sun has put 65 Winter to headlong flight beneath the world, 66 And oped the doors of heaven with summer ray, 67 Forthwith they roam the glades and forests o'er, 68 Rifle the painted flowers, or sip the streams, 69 Light-hovering on the surface. Hence it is 70 With some sweet rapture, that we know not of, 71 Their little ones they foster, hence with skill 72 Work out new wax or clinging honey mould. 73 So when the cage-escaped hosts you see 74 Float heavenward through the hot clear air, until 75 You marvel at yon dusky cloud that spreads 76 And lengthens on the wind, then mark them well; 77 For then 'tis ever the fresh springs they seek 78 And bowery shelter: hither must you bring 79 The savoury sweets I bid, and sprinkle them, 80 Bruised balsam and the wax-flower's lowly weed, 81 And wake and shake the tinkling cymbals heard 82 By the great Mother: on the anointed spots 83 Themselves will settle, and in wonted wise 84 Seek of themselves the cradle's inmost depth. 85 But if to battle they have hied them forth— 86 For oft 'twixt king and king with uproar dire 87 Fierce feud arises, and at once from far 88 You may discern what passion sways the mob, 89 And how their hearts are throbbing for the strife; 90 Hark! the hoarse brazen note that warriors know 91 Chides on the loiterers, and the ear may catch 92 A sound that mocks the war-trump's broken blasts; 93 Then in hot haste they muster, then flash wings, 94 Sharpen their pointed beaks and knit their thews, 95 And round the king, even to his royal tent, 96 Throng rallying, and with shouts defy the foe. 97 So, when a dry Spring and clear space is given, 98 Forth from the gates they burst, they clash on high; 99 A din arises; they are heaped and rolled 100 Into one mighty mass, and headlong fall, 101 Not denselier hail through heaven, nor pelting so 102 Rains from the shaken oak its acorn-shower. 103 Conspicuous by their wings the chiefs themselves 104 Press through the heart of battle, and display 105 A giant's spirit in each revocaveris ambo, 89 deterior qui visus, eum, ne prodigus obsit, 90 dede neci; melior vacua sine regnet in aula.	pigmy frame, 106 Steadfast no inch to yield till these or those 107 The victor's ponderous arm has turned to flight. 108 Such fiery passions and such fierce assaults 109 A little sprinkled dust controls and quells.

4.91	91 Alter erit maculis auro squalentibus ardens; 92 nam duo sunt genera: hic melior, insignis et ore 93 et rutilis clarus squamis, ille horridus alter 94 desidia latamque trahens inglorius alvum. 95 Ut binae regum facies, ita corpora plebis. 96 Namque aliae turpes horrent, ceu pulvere ab alto 97 cum venit et sicco terram spuit ore viator 98 aridus; elucent aliae et fulgore coruscant 99 ardentes auro et paribus lita corpora guttis. 100 Haec potior suboles, hinc caeli tempore certo 101 dulcia mella premes, nec tantum dulcia, quantum 102 et liquida et durum Bacchi domitura saporem. 103 At cum incerta volant caeloque examina ludunt 104 contemnuntque favos et frigida tecta relinquunt, 105 instabiles animos ludo prohibebis inani. 106 Nec magnus prohibere labor: tu regibus alas 107 eripe; non illis quisquam cunctantibus altum 108 ire iter aut castris audebit vellere signa. 109 Invitent croceis halantes floribus horti 110 et custos furum atque avium cum falce saligna 111 Hellespontiaci servet tutela Priapi. 112 Ipse thymum pinosque ferens de montibus altis 113 tecta serat late circum, cui talia curae; 114 ipse labore manum duro terat, ipse feraces 115 figat humo plantas et amicos inriget imbres. 116 Atque equidem, extremo ni iam sub fine laborum 117 vela traham et terris festinem	110 And now, both leaders from the field recalled, 111 Who hath the worser seeming, do to death, 112 Lest royal waste wax burdensome, but let 113 His better lord it on the empty throne. 114 One with gold-burnished flakes will shine like fire, 115 For twofold are their kinds, the nobler he, 116 Of peerless front and lit with flashing scales; 117 That other, from neglect and squalor foul, 118 Drags slow a cumbrous belly. As with kings, 119 So too with people, diverse is their mould, 120 Some rough and loathly, as when the wayfarer 121 Scapes from a whirl of dust, and scorched with heat 122 Spits forth the dry grit from his parched mouth: 123 The others shine forth and flash with lightning-gleam, 124 Their backs all blazoned with bright drops of gold 125 Symmetric: this the likelier breed; from these, 126 When heaven brings round the season, thou shalt strain 127 Sweet honey, nor yet so sweet as passing clear, 128 And mellowing on the tongue the wine-god's fire.

	advertere proram, 118 forsitan et, pingues hortos quae cura colendi 119 ornaret, canerem, biferique rosaria Paesti, 120 quoque modo potis gauderent intiba rivis
4.121	121 et virides apio ripae, tortusque per herbam 122 cresceret in ventrem cucumis; nec sera comantem 123 narcissum aut flexi tacuissem vimen acanthi 124 pallentesque hederas et amantes litora myrtos. 125 Namque sub Oebaliae memini me turribus arcis, 126 qua niger umectat flaventia culta Galaesus, 127 Corycium vidisse senem, cui pauca relicti 128 iugera ruris erant, nec fertilis illa iuvencis 129 nec pecori opportuna seges nec commoda Baccho. 130 Hic rarum tamen in dumis olus albaque circum 131 lilia verbenasque premens vescumque papaver 132 regum aequabat opes animis seraque revertens 133 nocte domum dapibus mensas onerabat inemptis. 134 Primus vere rosam atque autumno carpere poma, 135 et cum tristis hiems etiamnum frigore saxa 136 rumperet et glacie cursus frenaret aquarum, 137 ille comam mollis iam tondebat hyacinthi 138 aestatem increpitans seram Zephyrosque morantes. 139 Ergo apibus fetis idem atque examine multo 140 primus abundare et spumantia cogere pressis 141 mella favis; illi tiliae atque uberrima pinus, 142 quotque in flore novo pomis se fertilis arbos 143 induerat, totidem autumno matura tenebat. 144 Ille etiam seras in versum distulit ulmos 145 eduramque pirum et spinos iam pruna ferentes 146 iamque ministrantem platanum	129 But when the swarms fly aimlessly abroad, 130 Disport themselves in heaven and spurn their cells, 131 Leaving the hive unwarmed, from such vain play 132 Must you refrain their volatile desires, 133 Nor hard the task: tear off the monarchs' wings; 134 While these prove loiterers, none beside will dare 135 Mount heaven, or pluck the standards from the camp. 136 Let gardens with the breath of saffron flowers 137 Allure them, and the lord of Hellespont, 138 Priapus, wielder of the willow-scythe, 139 Safe in his keeping hold from birds and thieves. 140 And let the man to whom such cares are dear 141 Himself bring thyme and pine-trees from the heights, 142 And strew them in broad belts about their home; 143 No hand but his the blistering task should ply, 144 Plant the young slips, or shed the genial showers. 145 And I myself, were I not even now 146 Furling my sails, and, nigh the journey's end, 147 Eager to turn my vessel's prow to shore, 148 Perchance would sing what careful husbandry 149 Makes the trim garden smile; of Paestum too, 150 Whose roses bloom and fade and bloom again; 151 How endives glory in the streams they drink, 152 And green banks in their parsley, and how the gourd 153 Twists through the grass and rounds him to paunch; 154 Nor of Narcissus had my lips been dumb, 155 That loiterer of the flowers, nor supple-stemmed 156 Acanthus, with the praise of ivies pale, 157 And myrtles clinging to the shores they love. 158 For 'neath the shade of tall Oebalia's towers, 159 Where dark Galaesus laves the yellowing fields, 160 An old man once I mind me to have seen — 161 From Corycus he came—to whom had fallen 162 Some few poor acres of neglected land, 163 And they nor fruitful' neath the plodding steer, 164 Meet for the grazing herd, nor good for vines. 165 Yet he, the while his meagre garden-herbs 166 Among the thorns he planted, and all round 167 White lilies, vervains, and lean poppy set, 168 In

	potantibus umbras. 147 Verum haec ipse equidem spatiis exclusus iniquis 148 praetereo atque aliis post me memoranda relinquo. 149 Nunc age, naturas apibus quas Iuppiter ipse 150 addidit, expediam, pro qua mercede canoros	pride of spirit matched the wealth of kings, 169 And home returning not till night was late, 170 With unbought plenty heaped his board on high. 171 He was the first to cull the rose in spring, 172 He the ripe fruits in autumn; and ere yet 173 Winter had ceased in sullen ire to rive 174 The rocks with frost, and with her icy bit
4.151	151 Curetum sonitus crepitantiaque aera secutae 152 Dictaeo caeli regem pavere sub antro. 153 Solae communes natos, consortia tecta 154 urbis habent magnisque agitant sub legibus aevum, 155 et patriam solae et certos novere penates, 156 venturaeque hiemis memores aestate laborem 157 experiuntur et in medium quaesita reponunt. 158 Namque aliae victu invigilant et foedere pacto 159 exercentur agris; pars intra saepta domorum 160 Narcissi lacrimam et lentum de cortice gluten 161 prima favis ponunt fundamina, deinde tenaces 162 suspendunt ceras: aliae spem gentis adultos 163 educunt fetus, aliae purissima mella 164 stipant et liquido distendunt nectare cellas. 165 Sunt quibus ad portas cecidit custodia sorti, 166 inque vicem speculantur aquas et nubila caeli 167 aut onera accipiunt venientum aut agmine facto 168 ignavum fucos pecus a praesepibus arcent. 169 Fervet opus, redolentque thymo fragrantia mella. 170 ac veluti lentis Cyclopes fulmina massis 171 cum properant, alii taurinis follibus auras 172 accipiunt redduntque, alii stridentia tingunt 173 aera lacu; gemit impositis incudibus Aetna; 174 illi inter sese magna vi bracchia tollunt 175 in numerum versantque tenaci	175 Curb in the running waters, there was he 176 Plucking the rathe faint hyacinth, while he chid 177 Summer's slow footsteps and the lagging West. 178 Therefore he too with earliest brooding bees 179 And their full swarms o'erflowed, and first was he 180 To press the bubbling honey from the comb; 181 Lime-trees were his, and many a branching pine; 182 And all the fruits wherewith in early bloom 183 The orchard-tree had clothed her, in full tale 184 Hung there, by mellowing autumn perfected. 185 He too transplanted tall-grown elms a-row, 186 Time-toughened pear, thorns bursting with the plum 187 And plane now yielding serviceable shade 188 For dry lips to drink under: but these things, 189 Shut off by rigorous limits, I pass by, 190 And leave for others to sing after me.

	forcipe ferrum: 176 non aliter, si parva licet componere magnis, 177 Cecropias innatus apes amor urget habendi, 178 munere quamque suo. Grandaevis oppida curae 179 et munire favos et daedala fingere tecta. 180 At fessae multa referunt se nocte minores,
4.181	181 crura thymo plenae; pascuntur et arbuta passim 182 et glaucas salices casiamque crocumque rubentem 183 et pinguem tiliam et ferrugineos hyacinthos. 184 Omnibus una quies operum, labor omnibus unus: 185 mane ruunt portis; nusquam mora; rursus easdem 186 vesper ubi e pastu tandem decedere campis 187 admonuit, tum tecta petunt, tum corpora curant; 188 fit sonitus, mussantque oras et limina circum. 189 Post, ubi iam thalamis se composuere, siletur 190 in noctem fessosque sopor suus occupat artus. 191 Nec vero a stabulis pluvia impendente recedunt 192 longius aut credunt caelo adventantibus Euris, 193 sed circum tutae sub moenibus urbis aquantur, 194 excursusque breves temptant et saepe lapillos, 195 ut cumbae instabiles fluctu iactante saburram, 196 tollunt, his sese per inania nubila librant. 197 Illum adeo placuisse apibus mirabere morem, 198 quod neque concubitu indulgent nec corpora segnes 199 in Venerem solvunt aut fetus nixibus edunt: 200 verum ipsae e foliis natos, e suavibus herbis 201 ore legunt, ipsae regem parvosque Quirites 202 sufficiunt aulasque et cerea regna refigunt. 203 saepe etiam duris errando in cotibus alas 204 attrivere ultroque animam sub	191 Come, then, I will unfold the natural powers 192 Great Jove himself upon the bees bestowed, 193 The boon for which, led by the shrill sweet strains 194 Of the Curetes and their clashing brass, 195 They fed the King of heaven in Dicte's cave. 196 Alone of all things they receive and hold 197 Community of offspring, and they house 198 Together in one city, and beneath 199 The shelter of majestic laws they live; 200 And they alone fixed home and country know, 201 And in the summer, warned of coming cold, 202 Make proof of toil, and for the general store 203 Hoard up their gathered harvesting. For some 204 Watch o'er the victualling of the hive, and these 205 By settled order ply their tasks afield; 206 And some within the confines of their home 207 Plant firm the comb's first layer, Narcissus' tear, 208 And sticky gum oozed from the bark of trees, 209 Then set the clinging wax to hang therefrom. 210 Others the while lead forth the full-grown young, 211 Their country's hope, and others press and pack 212 The thrice repured honey, and stretch their cells 213 To bursting with the clear-strained nectar sweet. 214 Some, too, the wardship of the gates befalls, 215 Who watch in turn for showers and cloudy skies, 216 Or ease returning labourers of their load, 217 Or form a band and from their precincts drive 218 The drones, a lazy herd. How glows the work! 219 How sweet the honey smells of perfumed thyme 220 Like the Cyclopes, when in haste they forge

	fasce dedere: 205 tantus amor florum et generandi gloria mellis. 206 Ergo ipsas quamvis angusti terminus aevi 207 excipiat, neque enim plus septima ducitur aestas, 208 at genus immortale manet multosque per annos 209 stat fortuna domus et avi numerantur avorum. 210 Praeterea regem non sic Aegyptus et ingens
4.211	211 Lydia nec populi Parthorum aut Medus Hydaspes 212 observant. Rege incolumi mens omnibus una est; 213 amisso rupere fidem constructaque mella 214 diripuere ipsae et crates solvere favorum. 215 Ille operum custos, illum admiruntur et omnes 216 circumstant fremitu denso stipantque frequentes 217 et saepe attollunt umeris et corpora bello 218 obiectant pulchramque petunt per vulnera mortem. 219 His quidam signis atque haec exempla secuti 220 esse apibus partem divinae mentis et haustus 221 aetherios dixere; deum namque ire per omnes 222 terrasque tractusque maris caelumque profundum. 223 Hinc pecudes, armenta, viros, genus omne ferarum, 224 quemque sibi tenues nascentem arcessere vitas; 225 scilicet huc reddi deinde ac resoluta referri 226 omnia nec morti esse locum, sed viva volare 227 sideris in numerum atque alto succedere caelo. 228 Si quando sedem angustam servataque mella 229 thesauris relines, prius haustu sparsus aquarum 230 ora fove fumosque manu praetende sequaces. 231 Bis gravidos cogunt fetus, duo tempora messis, 232 Taygete simul os terris ostendit honestum 233 Pleas et Oceani spretos pede	221 From the slow-yielding ore the thunderbolts, 222 Some from the bull's-hide bellows in and out 223 Let the blasts drive, some dip i' the water-trough 224 The sputtering metal: with the anvil's weight 225 Groans Etna: they alternately in time 226 With giant strength uplift their sinewy arms, 227 Or twist the iron with the forceps' grip— 228 Not otherwise, to measure small with great, 229 The love of getting planted in their breasts 230 Goads on the bees, that haunt old Cecrops' heights, 231 Each in his sphere to labour. The old have charge 232 To keep the town, and build the walled combs, 233 And mould the cunning chambers; but the youth, 234 Their tired legs packed with thyme, come labouring home 235 Belated, for afar they range to feed 236 On arbutes and the grey-green willow-leaves, 237 And cassia and the crocus blushing red, 238 Glue-yielding limes, and hyacinths dusky-eyed. 239 One hour for rest have all, and one for toil: 240 With dawn they hurry from the gates—no room 241 For loiterers there: and once again, when even 242 Now bids them quit their pasturing on the plain, 243 Then homeward make they, then refresh their strength: 244 A hum arises: hark! they buzz and buzz 245 About the doors and threshold; till at length 246 Safe laid to rest they hush them for the night, 247 And welcome slumber laps their weary limbs.

	reppulit amnes, 234 aut eadem sidus fugiens ubi Piscis aquosi 235 tristior hibernas caelo descendit in undas. 236 Illis ira modum supra est, laesaeque venenum 237 morsibus inspirant et spicula caeca relinquunt 238 adfixae venis animasque in vulnere ponunt. 239 Sin duram metues hiemem parcesque futuro 240 contunsosque animos et res miserabere fractas, 4.241	241 at suffire thymo cerasque recidere inanes 242 quis dubitet? nam saepe favos ignotus adedit 243 stellio et lucifugis congesta cubilia blattis 244 immunisque sedens aliena ad pabula fucus 245 aut asper crabro imparibus se immiscuit armis, 246 aut dirum tiniae genus, aut invisa Minervae 247 laxos in foribus suspendit aranea casses. 248 Quo magis exhaustae fuerint, hoc acrius omnes 249 incumbent generis lapsi sarcire ruinas 250 complebuntque foros et floribus horrea texent. 251 Si vero, quoniam casus apibus quoque nostros 252 vita tulit, tristi languebunt corpora morbo— 253 quod iam non dubiis poteris cognoscere signis: 254 continuo est aegris alius color, horrida vultum 255 deformat macies, tum corpora luce carentum 256 exportant tectis et tristia funera ducunt; 257 aut illae pedibus conexae ad limina pendent, 258 aut intus clausis cunctantur in aedibus, omnes 259 ignavaeque fame et contracto frigore pigrae. 260 Tum sonus auditur gravior, tractimque susurrant, 261 frigidus ut quondam silvis immurmurat Auster, 262 ut mare sollicitum stridit	248 But from the homestead not too far they fare, 249 When showers hang like to fall, nor, east winds nigh, 250 Confide in heaven, but 'neath the city walls 251 Safe-circling fetch them water, or essay 252 Brief out-goings, and oft weigh-up tiny stones, 253 As light craft ballast in the tossing tide, 254 Wherewith they poise them through the cloudy vast. 255 This law of life, too, by the bees obeyed, 256 Will move thy wonder, that nor sex with sex 257 Yoke they in marriage, nor yield their limbs to love, 258 Nor know the pangs of labour, but alone 259 From leaves and honied herbs, the mothers, each, 260 Gather their offspring in their mouths, alone 261 Supply new kings and pigmy commonwealth, 262 And their old court and waxen realm repair. 263 Oft, too, while wandering, against jagged stones 264 Their wings they fray, and 'neath the burden yield 265 Their liberal lives: so deep their love of flowers, 266 So glorious deem they honey's proud acquist. 267 Therefore, though each a life of narrow span, 268 Ne'er stretched to summers more than seven, befalls, 269 Yet deathless doth the race endure, and still 270 Perennial stands the fortune of their line, 271 From grandsire unto grandsire backward told. 272 Moreover, not Aegyptus, nor the realm 273 Of boundless Lydia, no, nor Parthia's hordes, 274 Nor Median Hydaspes, to their king 275 Do such obeisance: lives the king unscathed, 276 One will inspires the million: is he dead, 277 Snapt is the bond of fealty; they themselves 278 Ravage their toil-wrought honey, and rend amain 279 Their own comb's waxen trellis. He is the lord 280 Of all their labour; him

	refluentibus undis, 263 aestuat ut clausis rapidus fornacibus ignis: 264 hic iam galbaneos suadebo incendere odores 265 mellaque harundineis inferre canalibus, ultro 266 hortantem et fessas ad pabula nota vocantem. 267 Proderit et tunsum gallae admiscere saporem 268 Arentesque rosas aut igni pinguia multo 269 defruta vel psithia passos de vite racemos 270 Cecropiumque thymum et grave olentia centaurea.	with awful eye 281 They reverence, and with murmuring throngs surround, 282 In crowds attend, oft shoulder him on high, 283 Or with their bodies shield him in the fight, 284 And seek through showering wounds a glorious death.
4.271	271 Est etiam flos in pratis, cui nomen amello 272 fecere agricolae, facilis quaerentibus herba; 273 namque uno ingentem tollit de caespite silvam, 274 aureus ipse, sed in foliis, quae plurima circum 275 funduntur, violae sublucet purpura nigrae; 276 277 asper in ore sapor; tonsis in vallibus illum 278 pastores et curva legunt prope flumina Mellae. 279 Huius odorato radices incoque Baccho 280 pabulaque in foribus plenis adpone canistris. 281 Sed siquem proles subito defecerit omnis, 282 nec genus unde novae stirpis revocetur habebit, 283 tempus et Arcadii memoranda inventa magistri 284 pandere, quoque modo caesis iam saepe iuvencis 285 insincerus apes tulerit cruor. Altius omnem 286 expediam prima repetens ab origine famam. 287 Nam qua Pellaei gens fortunata Canopi 288 accolit effuso stagnantem flumine Nilum 289 et circum pictis vehitur sua rura phaselis, 290 quaque pharetratae vicinia Persidis urget, 291 292	285 Led by these tokens, and with such traits to guide, 286 Some say that unto bees a share is given 287 Of the Divine Intelligence, and to drink 288 Pure draughts of ether; for God permeates all — 289 Earth, and wide ocean, and the vault of heaven— 290 From whom flocks, herds, men, beasts of every kind, 291 Draw each at birth the fine essential flame; 292 Yea, and that all things hence to Him return, 293 Brought back by dissolution, nor can death 294 Find place: but, each into his starry rank, 295 Alive they soar, and mount the heights of heaven. 296 If now their narrow home thou wouldst unseal, 297 And broach the treasures of the honey-house, 298 With draught of water first toment thy lips, 299 And spread before thee fumes of trailing smoke. 300 Twice is the teeming produce gathered in, 301 Twofold their time of harvest year by year, 302 Once when Taygete the Pleiad uplifts 303 Her comely forehead for the earth to see, 304 With foot of scorn spurning the ocean-streams, 305 Once when in gloom she flies the watery Fish, 306 And dips from heaven into the wintry wave. 307 Unbounded then their wrath; if hurt, they breathe 308 Venom into their bite, cleave to the veins 309 And let the sting lie buried, and leave their lives 310 Behind them in the wound. But if you dread 311 Too rigorous a winter, and would fain 312 Temper the coming time, and their bruised hearts 313 And broken estate to pity move thy soul, 314 Yet who would fear to fumigate with thyme, 315 Or cut the empty wax away? for oft 316 Into their comb the newt has

	293 294 omnis in hac certam regio iacit arte salutem. 295 Exiguus primum atque ipsos contractus in usus 296 eligitur locus; hunc angustique imbrice tecti 297 parietibusque premunt artis et quattuor addunt, 298 quattuor a ventis obliqua luce fenestras. 299 Tum vitulus bima curvans iam cornua fronte 300 quaeritur; huic geminae nares et spiritus oris	gnawed unseen, 317 And the light-loathing beetles crammed their bed, 318 And he that sits at others' board to feast, 319 The do-naught drone; or 'gainst the unequal foe 320 Swoops the fierce hornet, or the moth's fell tribe; 321 Or spider, victim of Minerva's spite, 322 Athwart the doorway hangs her swaying net. 323 The more impoverished they, the keenlier all 324 To mend the fallen fortunes of their race 325 Will nerve them, fill the cells up, tier on tier, 326 And weave their granaries from the rifled flowers.
4.301	301 multa reluctanti obstruitur, plagisque perempto 302 tunsa per integram solvuntur viscera pellem. 303 Sic positum in clauso linquunt et ramea costis 304 subiciunt fragmenta, thymum casiasque recentes. 305 Hoc geritur Zephyris primum impellentibus undas, 306 ante novis rubeant quam prata coloribus, ante 307 garrula quam tignis nidum suspendat hirundo. 308 Interea teneris tepefactus in ossibus umor 309 aestuat et visenda modis animalia miris, 310 trunca pedum primo, mox et stridentia pennis, 311 miscentur tenuemque magis magis aera carpunt, 312 donec, ut aestivis effusus nubibus imber, 313 erupere aut ut nervo pulsante sagittae, 314 prima leves ineunt si quando proelia Parthi. 315 Quis deus hanc, Musae, quis nobis extudit artem? 316 Unde nova ingressus hominum experientia cepit? 317 Pastor Aristaeus fugiens Peneia Tempe, 318 amissis, ut fama, apibus morboque fameque, 319 tristis ad extremi sacrum caput adstitit amnis 320 multa querens atque hac adfatus voce parentem: 321 “Mater, Cyrene mater, quae gurgitis huius 322 ima tenes, quid me praeclara	327 Now, seeing that life doth even to bee-folk bring 328 Our human chances, if in dire disease 329 Their bodies' strength should languish—which anon 330 By no uncertain tokens may be told — 331 Forthwith the sick change hue; grim leanness mars 332 Their visage; then from out the cells they bear 333 Forms reft of light, and lead the mournful pomp; 334 Or foot to foot about the porch they hang, 335 Or within closed doors loiter, listless all 336 From famine, and benumbed with shrivelling cold. 337 Then is a deep note heard, a long-drawn hum, 338 As when the chill South through the forests sighs, 339 As when the troubled ocean hoarsely booms 340 With back-swung billow, as ravening tide of fire 341 Surges, shut fast within the furnace-walls. 342 Then do I bid burn scented galbanum, 343 And, honey-streams through reeden troughs instilled, 344 Challenge and cheer their flagging appetite 345 To taste the well-known food; and it shall boot 346 To mix therewith the savour bruised from gall, 347 And rose-leaves dried, or must to thickness boiled 348 By a fierce fire, or juice of raisin-grapes 349 From Psithian vine, and with its bitter smell 350 Centaury, and the famed Cecropian thyme. 351 There is a meadow-flower by country folk 352 Hight star-wort; 'tis a plant not far to seek; 353 For from one sod an ample growth it rears, 354 Itself all golden, but girt with plenteous leaves, 355 Where glory of purple shines through violet gloom. 356 With chaplets woven hereof full oft are decked 357 Heaven's altars: harsh its taste upon the tongue; 358 Shepherds in vales smooth-shorn of nibbling flocks

	stirpe deorum, 323 si modo, quem perhibes, pater est Thymbraeus Apollo, 324 invisum fatis genuisti? aut quo tibi nostri 325 pulsus amor? quid me caelum sperare iubebas? 326 En etiam hunc ipsum vitae mortalis honorem, 327 quem mihi vix frugum et pecudum custodia sollers 328 omnia temptanti extuderat, te matre relinquo. 329 Quin age et ipsa manu felices erue silvas, 330 fer stabulis inimicum ignem atque interfice messes,	359 By Mella's winding waters gather it. 360 The roots of this, well seethed in fragrant wine, 361 Set in brimmed baskets at their doors for food.
4.331	331 ure sata et validam in vites molire bipennem, 332 tanta meae si te ceperunt taedia laudis.” 333 At mater sonitum thalamo sub fluminis alti 334 sensit. Eam circum Milesia vellera Nymphae 335 carpebant hyali saturo fucata colore, 336 drymoque Xanthoque Ligeaque Phyllodoceque, 337 caesariem effusae nitidam per candida colla, 338 Nesaee Spioque Thaliaque Cymodoceque, 339 Cydippeque et flava Lycorias, altera virgo, 340 altera tum primos Lucinae experta labores, 341 Clioque et Beroe soror, Oceanitides ambae, 342 ambae auro, pictis incinctae pellibus ambae, 343 atque Ephyre atque Opis et Asia Deiopea 344 et tandem positis velox Arethusa sagittis. 345 Inter quas curam Clymene narrabat inanem 346 Vulcani Martisque dolos et dulcia furta, 347 aque Chao densos divum numerabat amores 348 carmine quo captae dum fusis mollia pensa 349 devolvunt, iterum maternas impulit aures 350 luctus Aristaei, vitreisque sedilibus omnes 351 obstipuere; sed ante alias

	Arethusa sorores 352 prospiciens summa flavum caput extulit unda 353 et procul: “O gemitu non frustra exterrita tanto, 354 Cyrene soror, ipse tibi, tua maxima cura, 355 tristis Aristaeus Penei genitoris ad undam 356 stat lacrimans et te crudelem nomine dicit.” 357 Huic percussa nova mentem formidine mater, 358 “duc, age, duc ad nos; fas illi limina divum 359 tangere,” ait. Simul alta iubet discedere late 360 flumina, qua iuvenis gressus inferret. At illum
4.361	361 curvata in montis faciem circumstetit unda 362 accepitque sinu vasto misitque sub amnem. 363 Iamque domum mirans genetricis et umida regna 364 speluncisque lacus clausos lucosque sonantes 365 ibat et ingenti motu stupefactus aquarum 366 omnia sub magna labentia flumina terra 367 spectabat diversa locis, Phasimque Lycumque 368 et caput, unde altus primum se erumpit Enipeus 369 unde pater Tiberinus et unde Aniena fluenta 370 saxosusque sonans Hypanis Mysusque Caicus, 371 et gemina auratus taurino cornua vultu 372 Eridanus, quo non alius per pinguia culta 373 in mare purpureum violentior effluit amnis. 374 Postquam est in thalami pendentia pumice tecta 375 perventum et nati fletus cognovit inanes 376 Cyrene, manibus liquidos dant ordine fontes 377 germanae tonsisque ferunt mantelia villis; 378 pars epulis onerant mensas et plena reponunt 379 pocula, Panchaeis adolescunt ignibus arae; 380 et mater, “Cape Maeonii carchesia	362 But if one's whole stock fail him at a stroke, 363 Nor hath he whence to breed the race anew, 364 'Tis time the wondrous secret to disclose 365 Taught by the swain of Arcady, even how 366 The blood of slaughtered bullocks oft has borne 367 Bees from corruption. I will trace me back 368 To its prime source the story's tangled thread, 369 And thence unravel. For where thy happy folk, 370 Canopus, city of Pellaean fame, 371 Dwell by the Nile's lagoon-like overflow, 372 And high o'er furrows they have called their own 373 Skim in their painted wherries; where, hard by, 374 The quivered Persian presses, and that flood 375 Which from the swart-skinned Aethiop bears him down, 376 Swift-parted into sevenfold branching mouths 377 With black mud fattens and makes Aegypt green, 378 That whole domain its welfare's hope secure 379 Rests on this art alone. And first is chosen 380 A strait recess, cramped closer to this end, 381 Which next with narrow roof of tiles atop 382 'Twixt prisoning walls they pinch, and add hereto 383 From the four winds four slanting window-slits. 384 Then seek they from the herd a steer, whose horns 385 With two years' growth are curling, and stop fast, 386 Plunge madly as he may, the panting mouth 387 And nostrils twain, and done with blows to death, 388 Batter his flesh to pulp i' the hide yet whole, 389 And shut the doors, and leave him there to lie. 390 But 'neath his ribs they scatter broken boughs, 391 With thyme and fresh-

	Bacchi: 381 Oceano libemus," ait. Simul ipsa precatur 382 Oceanumque patrem rerum Nymphasque sorores 383 centum quae silvas, centum quae flumina servant. 384 Ter liquido ardentem perfundit nectare Vestam, 385 ter flamma ad summum tecti subiecta reluxit. 386 Omine quo firmans animum sic incipit ipsa: 387 "Est in Carphatio Neptuni gurgite vates 388 caeruleus Proteus, magnum qui piscibus aequor 389 et iuncto bipedum curru metitur equorum. 390 Hic nunc Emathiae portus patriamque revisit	pulled cassias: this is done 392 When first the west winds bid the waters flow, 393 Ere flush the meadows with new tints, and ere 394 The twittering swallow buildeth from the beams. 395 Meanwhile the juice within his softened bones 396 Heats and ferments, and things of wondrous birth, 397 Footless at first, anon with feet and wings, 398 Swarm there and buzz, a marvel to behold; 399 And more and more the fleeting breeze they take, 400 Till, like a shower that pours from summer-clouds, 401 Forth burst they, or like shafts from quivering string 402 When Parthia's flying hosts provoke the fray.
4.391	391 Pallenen, hunc et Nymphae veneramur et ipse 392 grandaevus Nereus; novit namque omnia vates, 393 quae sint, quae fuerint, quae mox ventura trahantur; 394 quippe ita Neptuno visum est, immania cuius 395 armenta et turpes pascit sub gurgite phocas. 396 Hic tibi, nate, prius vinclis capiendus, ut omnem 397 expediat morbi causam eventusque secundet. 398 Nam sine vi non ulla dabit praecepta, neque illum 399 orando flectes; vim duram et vincula capto 400 tende; doli circum haec demum frangentur inanes. 401 Ipsa ego, te, medios cum sol accenderit aestus, 402 cum sitiunt herbae et pecori iam gratior umbra est, 403 in secreta senis ducam, quo fessus ab undis 404 se recipit, facile ut somno adgrediare iacentem. 405 Verum ubi correptum manibus vinclisque tenebis, 406 tum variae eludent species atque ora ferarum 407 Fiet enim subito sus horridus atraque tigris 408 squamosusque draco et fulva cervice leaena, 409 aut acrem flammae sonitum dabit	403 Say what was he, what God, that fashioned forth 404 This art for us, O Muses? of man's skill 405 Whence came the new adventure? From thy vale, 406 Peneian Tempe, turning, bee-bereft, 407 So runs the tale, by famine and disease, 408 Mournful the shepherd Aristaeus stood 409 Fast by the haunted river-head, and thus 410 With many a plaint to her that bare him cried: 411 "Mother, Cyrene, mother, who hast thy home 412 Beneath this whirling flood, if he thou sayest, 413 Apollo, lord of Thymbra, be my sire, 414 Sprung from the Gods' high line, why barest thou me 415 With fortune's ban for birthright? Where is now 416 Thy love to me-ward banished from thy breast? 417 O! wherefore didst thou bid me hope for heaven? 418 Lo! even the crown of this poor mortal life, 419 Which all my skilful care by field and fold, 420 No art neglected, scarce had fashioned forth, 421 Even this falls from me, yet thou call'st me son. 422 Nay, then, arise! With thine own hands pluck up 423 My fruit-plantations: on the homestead fling 424 Pitiless fire; make havoc of my crops; 425 Burn the young plants, and wield the stubborn axe 426 Against my vines, if there hath taken the 427 Such loathing of my greatness."

	atque ita vinclis 410 excidet, aut in aquas tenues dilapsus abibit. 411 Sed quanto ille magis formas se vertet in omnes, 412 tanto, nate, magis contende tenacia vincla, 413 donec talis erit mutato corpore, qualem 414 videris, incepto tegeret cum lumina somno.” 415 Haec ait et liquidum ambrosiae defundit odorem, 416 quo totum nati corpus perduxit; at illi 417 dulcis compositis spiravit crinibus aura 418 atque habilis membris venit vigor. Est specus ingens 419 exesi latere in montis, quo plurima vento 420 cogitur inque sinus scindit sese unda reductos, 4.421	421 deprensis olim statio tutissima nautis; 422 intus se vasti Proteus tegit obice saxi. 423 Hic iuvenem in latebris aversum a lumine Nympha 424 collocat; ipsa procul nebulis obscura resistit. 425 Iam rapidus torrens sitientes Sirius Indos 426 ardebat, caelo et medium sol igneus orbem 427 hauserat; arebant herbae et cava flumina siccis 428 faucibus ad limum radii tepefacta coquebant: 429 cum Proteus consueta petens e fluctibus antra 430 ibat; eum vasti circum gens umida ponti 431 exsultans rorem late dispergit amarum. 432 Sternunt se somno diversae in litore phocae. 433 Ipse, velut stabuli custos in montibus olim, 434 vesper ubi e pastu vitulos ad tecta reducit, 435 auditisque lupos acuunt balatibus agni, 436 considit scopulo medius numerumque recenset. 437 Cuius Aristaeo quoniam est oblata facultas, 438 vix defessa senem passus	428 But that cry, 429 Even from her chamber in the river-deeps, 430 His mother heard: around her spun the nymphs 431 Milesian wool stained through with hyaline dye, 432 Drymo, Xantho, Ligea, Phyllodoce, 433 Their glossy locks o'er snowy shoulders shed, 434 Cydippe and Lycorias yellow-haired, 435 A maiden one, one newly learned even then 436 To bear Lucina's birth-pang. Clio, too, 437 And Beroe, sisters, ocean-children both, 438 Both zoned with gold and girt with dappled fell, 439 Ephyre and Opis, and from Asian meads 440 Deiopea, and, bow at length laid by, 441 Fleet-footed Arethusa. But in their midst 442 Fair Clymene was telling o'er the tale 443 Of Vulcan's idle vigilance and the stealth 444 Of Mars' sweet rapine, and from Chaos old 445 Counted the jostling love-joys of the Gods. 446 Charmed by whose lay, the while their woolly tasks 447 With spindles down they drew, yet once again 448 Smote on his mother's ears the mournful plaint 449 Of Aristaeus; on their glassy thrones 450 Amazement held them all; but Arethuse 451 Before the rest put forth her auburn head, 452 Peering above the wave-top, and from far 453 Exclaimed, “Cyrene, sister, not for naught 454 Scared by a groan so deep, behold! 'tis he, 455 Even Aristaeus, thy heart's fondest care, 456 Here by the brink of the Peneian sire

	componere membra 439 cum clamore ruit magno manicisque iacentem 440 occupat. Ille suae contra non immemor artis 441 omnia transformat sese in miracula rerum, 442 ignemque horribilemque feram fluviumque liquentem. 443 Verum ubi nulla fugam reperit fallacia, victus 444 in sese redit atque hominis tandem ore locutus: 445 “Nam quis te, iuvenum confidentissime, nostras 446 iussit adire domos? Quidve hinc petis?” inquit. At ille: 447 “Scis, Proteu, scis ipse; neque est te fallere quicquam 448 sed tu desine velle. Deum praecepta secuti 449 venimus hinc lapsis quaesitum oracula rebus.” 450 Tantum effatus. Ad haec vates vi denique multa	457 Stands woebegone and weeping, and by name
4.451	451 ardentes oculos intorsit lumine glauco 452 et graviter frendens sic fatis ora resolvit. 453 “Non te nullius exercent numinis irae; 454 magna luis commissa: tibi has miserabilis Orpheus 455 haudquaquam ob meritum poenas, ni fata resistant, 456 suscitat et rapta graviter pro coniuge saevit. 457 Illa quidem, dum te fugeret per flumina praeceps, 458 immanem ante pedes hydrum moritura puella 459 servantem ripas alta non vidit in herba. 460 At chorus aequalis Dryadum clamore supremos 461 implerunt montes; flerunt Rhodopeiae arces 462 altaque Pangaea et Rhesi mavortia tellus 463 atque Getae atque Hebrus et Actias Orithyia. 464 Ipse cava solans aegrum testudine amorem 465 te, dulcis coniunx, te solo in litore secum, 466 te veniente die, te decedente canebat. 467 Taenarias etiam fauces, alta ostia	458 Cries out upon thee for thy cruelty.” 459 To whom, strange terror knocking at her heart, 460 “Bring, bring him to our sight,” the mother cried; 461 “His feet may tread the threshold even of Gods.” 462 So saying, she bids the flood yawn wide and yield 463 A pathway for his footsteps; but the wave 464 Arched mountain-wise closed round him, and within 465 Its mighty bosom welcomed, and let speed 466 To the deep river-bed. And now, with eyes 467 Of wonder gazing on his mother's hall 468 And watery kingdom and cave-prisoned pools 469 And echoing groves, he went, and, stunned by that 470 Stupendous whirl of waters, separate saw 471 All streams beneath the mighty earth that glide, 472 Phasis and Lycus, and that fountain-head 473 Whence first the deep Enipeus leaps to light, 474 Whence father Tiber, and whence Anio's flood, 475 And Hypanis that roars amid his rocks, 476 And Mysian Caicus, and, bull-browed 477 'Twixt either gilded horn, Eridanus, 478 Than whom none other through the laughing plains 479 More furious pours into the purple sea. 480 Soon as the chamber's hanging roof of stone 481 Was gained, and now Cyrene from her son 482 Had heard his idle weeping, in due course 483 Clear water for his hands the sisters bring,

	Ditis, 468 et caligantem nigra formidine lucum 469 ingressus manesque adiit regemque tremendum 470 nesciaque humanis precibus mansuescere corda. 471 At cantu commotae Erebi de sedibus imis 472 umbrae ibant tenues simulacraque luce carentum, 473 quam multa in foliis avium se milia condunt 474 vesper ubi aut hibernus agit de montibus imber, 475 matres atque viri defunctaque corpora vita 476 magnanimum heroum, pueri innuptaeque puellae, 477 impositique rogis iuvenes ante ora parentum, 478 quos circum limus niger et deformis harundo 479 Cocyti tardaque palus inamabilis unda 480 alligat et noviens Styx interfusa coercet.	484 With napkins of shorn pile, while others heap 485 The board with dainties, and set on afresh 486 The brimming goblets; with Panchaian fires 487 Upleap the altars; then the mother spake,
4.481	481 Quin ipsae stupuere domus atque intima Leti 482 tartara caeruleosque implexae crinibus angues 483 Eumenides, tenuitque inhians tria Cerberus ora 484 atque Ixionii vento rota constitit orbis. 485 Iamque pedem referens casus evaserat omnes; 486 redditaque Eurydice superas veniebat ad auras, 487 pone sequens, namque hanc dederat Proserpina legem, 488 cum subita incautum dementia cepit amantem, 489 ignoscenda quidem, scirent si ignoscere manes. 490 Restitit Eurydicenque suam iam luce sub ipsa 491 immemor heu! victusque animi respexit. Ibi omnis 492 effusus labor atque immitis rupta tyranni 493 foedera, terque fragor stagnis auditus Avernis. 494 Illa, “Quis et me,” inquit, “miseram et te perdidit, Orpheu, 495 quis tantus furor? En iterum crudelia retro 496 Fata vocant, conditque natantia	488 “Take beakers of Maconian wine,” she said, 489 “Pour we to Ocean.” Ocean, sire of all, 490 She worships, and the sister-nymphs who guard 491 The hundred forests and the hundred streams; 492 Thrice Vesta's fire with nectar clear she dashed, 493 Thrice to the roof-top shot the flame and shone: 494 Armed with which omen she essayed to speak: 495 “In Neptune's gulf Carpathian dwells a seer, 496 Caerulean Proteus, he who metes the main 497 With fish-drawn chariot of two-footed steeds; 498 Now visits he his native home once more, 499 Pallene and the Emathian ports; to him 500 We nymphs do reverence, ay, and Nereus old; 501 For all things knows the seer, both those which are 502 And have been, or which time hath yet to bring; 503 So willed it Neptune, whose portentous flocks, 504 And loathly sea-calves 'neath the surge he feeds. 505 Him first, my son, behoves thee seize and bind 506 That he may all the cause of sickness show, 507 And grant a prosperous end. For save by force 508 No rede will he vouchsafe, nor shalt thou bend 509 His soul by praying; whom once made captive, ply 510 With rigorous force and fetters; against these

	lumina somnus. 497 Iamque vale: feror ingenti circumdata nocte 498 invalidasque tibi tendens, heu non tua, palmas!” 499 dixit et ex oculis subito, ceu fumus in auras 500 commixtus tenues, fugit diversa, neque illum, 501 prensantem nequiquam umbras et multa volentem 502 dicere, praeterea vidit, nec portitor Orci 503 amplius obiectam passus transire paludem. 504 Quid faceret? Quo se rapta bis coniuge ferret? 505 Quo fletu Manis, quae numina voce moveret? 506 Illa quidem Stygia nabat iam frigida cumba. 507 Septem illum totos perhibent ex ordine menses 508 rupe sub aeria deserti ad Strymonis undam 509 flesse sibi et gelidis haec evolvisse sub antris 510 mulcentem tigres et agentem carmine quercus;	511 His wiles will break and spend themselves in vain. 512 I, when the sun has lit his noontide fires, 513 When the blades thirst, and cattle love the shade, 514 Myself will guide thee to the old man's haunt, 515 Whither he hies him weary from the waves, 516 That thou mayst safelier steal upon his sleep. 517 But when thou hast gripped him fast with hand and gyve, 518 Then divers forms and bestial semblances 519 Shall mock thy grasp; for sudden he will change 520 To bristly boar, fell tigress, dragon scaled, 521 And tawny-tufted lioness, or send forth 522 A crackling sound of fire, and so shake of 523 The fetters, or in showery drops anon 524 Dissolve and vanish. But the more he shifts 525 His endless transformations, thou, my son, 526 More straitlier clench the clinging bands, until 527 His body's shape return to that thou sawest, 528 When with closed eyelids first he sank to sleep.”
4.511	511 qualis populea maerens philomela sub umbra 512 amissos queritur fetus, quos durus arator 513 observans nido implumes detraxit; at illa 514 flet noctem ramoque sedens miserabile carmen 515 integrat et maestis late loca questibus implet. 516 Nulla Venus, non ulli animum flexere hymenaei. 517 Solus Hyperboreas glacies Tanaimque nivalem 518 arvaque Rhipaeis numquam viduata pruinis 519 lustrabat raptam Eurydicen atque inrita Ditis 520 dona querens; spretae Ciconum quo munere matres 521 inter sacra deum nocturnique orgia Bacchi 522 discerptum latos iuvenem sparsere per agros. 523 Tum quoque marmorea caput a cervice revulsum 524 gurgite cum medio portans Oeagrius Hebrus 525 volveret, Eurydicen vox ipsa et	529 So saying, an odour of ambrosial dew 530 She sheds around, and all his frame therewith 531 Steeps throughly; forth from his trim-combed locks 532 Breathed effluence sweet, and a lithe vigour leapt 533 Into his limbs. There is a cavern vast 534 Scooped in the mountain-side, where wave on wave 535 By the wind's stress is driven, and breaks far up 536 Its inmost creeks—safe anchorage from of old 537 For tempest-taken mariners: therewithin, 538 Behind a rock's huge barrier, Proteus hides. 539 Here in close covert out of the sun's eye 540 The youth she places, and herself the while 541 Swathed in a shadowy mist stands far aloof. 542 And now the ravening dog-star that burns up 543 The thirsty Indians blazed in heaven; his course 544 The fiery sun had half devoured: the blades 545 Were parched, and the void streams with droughty jaws 546 Baked to their mud-beds by the scorching ray, 547 When Proteus seeking his accustomed cave 548 Strode from the billows: round him frolicking 549 The watery folk that people the waste sea 550 Sprinkled the bitter frigida lingua 526 “ah miseram Eurydicen!” anima fugiente vocabat: 527 “Eurydicen” toto referebant flumine ripae.” 528 Haec Proteus, et se iactu dedit aequor in altum, 529 quaque dedit, spumantem undam sub vertice torsit. 530 At non Cyrene; namque ultro adfata timentem: 531 “Nate, licet tristes animo deponere curas. 532 Haec omnis morbi causa; hinc miserabile Nymphae, 533 cum quibus illa choros lucis agitabat in altis, 534 exitium misere apibus. Tu munera supplex 535 tende petens pacem et faciles venerare Napaeas; 536 namque dabunt veniam votis irasque remittent. 537 Sed modus orandi qui sit, prius ordine dicam. 538 Quattuor eximios praestanti corpore tauros, 539 qui tibi nunc viridis depascunt summa Lycaei, 540 delige et intacta totidem cervice iuvencas.	brine-dew far and wide. 551 Along the shore in scattered groups to feed 552 The sea-calves stretch them: while the seer himself, 553 Like herdsman on the hills when evening bids 554 The steers from pasture to their stall repair, 555 And the lambs' bleating whets the listening wolves, 556 Sits midmost on the rock and tells his tale. 557 But Aristaeus, the foe within his clutch, 558 Scarce suffering him compose his aged limbs, monstrum 555 adspiciunt, liquefacta boum per viscera toto 556 stridere apes utero et ruptis effervere costis, 557 immensasque trahi nubes, iamque arbore summa 558 confluere et lentis uvam demittere ramis. 559 Haec super arvorum cultu pecorumque canebam 560 et super arboribus, Caesar dum magnus ad altum 561 fulminat Euphraten bello victorque volentes 562 per populos dat iura viamque adfectat Olympo. 563 Illo Vergilium me tempore dulcis alebat 564 Parthenope studiis florentem ignobilis oti, 565 carmina qui lusi pastorum audaxque iuventa, 566 Tityre, te patulae cecini sub tegmine fagi.

4.541	541 Quattuor his aras alta ad delubra dearum 542 constitue et sacrum iugulis demitte cruorem, 543 corporaque ipsa boum frondoso desere luco. 544 Post, ubi nona suos Aurora ostenderit ortus, 545 inferias Orphei Lethaea papavera mittes 546 et nigram mactabis ovem lucumque revises: 547 placatam Eurydicen vitula venerabere caesa.” 548 Haud mora; continuo matris praecepta facessit; 549 ad delubra venit, monstratas excitat aras, 550 quattuor eximios praestanti corpore tauros 551 ducit et intacta totidem cervice iuvencas. 552 Post, ubi nona suos Aurora induxerat ortus, 553 inferias Orphei mittit lucumque revisit. 554 Hic vero subitum ac dictu mirabile	559 With a great cry leapt on him, and ere he rose 560 Forestalled him with the fetters; he nathless, 561 All unforgetful of his ancient craft, 562 Transforms himself to every wondrous thing, 563 Fire and a fearful beast, and flowing stream. 564 But when no trickery found a path for flight, 565 Baffled at length, to his own shape returned, 566 With human lips he spake, “Who bade thee, then, 567 So reckless in youth's hardihood, affront 568 Our portals? or what wouldst thou hence?”—But he, 569 “Proteus, thou knowest, of thine own heart thou knowest; 570 For thee there is no cheating, but cease thou 571 To practise upon me: at heaven's behest 572 I for my fainting fortunes hither come 573 An oracle to ask thee.” There he ceased. 574 Whereat the seer, by stubborn force constrained, 575 Shot forth the grey light of his gleaming eyes 576 Upon him, and with fiercely gnashing teeth 577 Unlocks his lips to spell the fates of heaven: